Plans for Great Symphony Season Announced

1924 ORCHESTRA CONCERT SERIES
TO OPEN OCT. 26

Only Eight Concerts in Coming Season, Played on Alternate Sundays, by 65-Piece Orchestra.

SUSTAINING MEMBERS TO BE LIMITED TO 500

Brilliant Piano Concert Artist, of Athens, Will Be Featured as Soloist in Opening Concert.

BY STEWART F. GELDERS

Atlanta's Symphony orchestra is to launch its second annual concert season October 26, with a new policy under which it is certain to surpass both the popular and artistic success it achieved in its first series of concerts last season. The concerts are to be given at the Grand theater on alternate Sundays. Enrico Leide will continue as conductor.

Plans for the season were announced Saturday by Mrs. George Walker, secretary of the board of directors, which is composed of Clark Howell, president; Harold Hirsch, treasurer;
Mrs. E. M. Horne, membership chairman; Harry Phillips, St. Elmo Massengale, John Paschal, Julian Boehm and Miss Nan Stevens.

The season, under the new policy, will include only eight concerts instead of ten, as last year, which will be played on alternate Sundays, two each month, at the Grand theater.
One concert each month will be made up of classical compositions and the other program of popular selections from favorite operas which have been sung here.

Membership Limited.
The number of sustaining membership will be limited to 500, instead of 1,000 as last year, in order to give a larger proportion of the seating capacity of the theater for free use of the general public.

Membership are to be placed on sale at Phillips & Crew offices, on Peachtree street, September 15, at a different rate than was observed last year. Orchestra subscriptions, entitling the holder to two seats in the orchestra, will be accepted at $15 each. Subscriptions entitling the holder to two seats in the loges will be accepted at $20 each. Subscriptions entitling the holder to a box of six seats will be accepted at $150 each.
All subscriptions are for the entire season of eight concerts.

More Preparation.
The policy of playing concerts on alternate Sundays, instead of one each week, was adopted with the object in view of giving twice as much time for rehearsal of each program in order that any defects in ensemble playing might be eliminated and that each concert might be a perfectly finished work of musical art.

Arrangements have been completed by Conductor Leide to increase the size of the orchestra from 55 pieces more stringed to 65 pieces by the addition of 10 more stringed instruments than were employed last year.
It is to include 40 pieces in the stringed section, 30 woodwind, 12 brass, 3 percussion, the piano and pipe organ.

Rehearsals in sections are to begin

COOLIDGE JOINS MEMORIAL MOVE FOR JEFFERSON

New York, July 26.—President Coolidge has accepted honorary membership on the board of governors of the Thomas Jefferson memorial foundation, it was announced today by Stuart G. Gibbons, president of the organization. In a letter received by Mr. Gibbons the president wrote:

"To do anything else, or anything other than accept your invitation to honorary membership on the board of governors of the Thomas Jefferson memorial foundation would be both ungracious and, it seems to me, unpatriotic. I gladly accept with some regret of course, that I shall probably have less of the time and opportunity to give the sort of service that would be most helpful. But I cannot too earnestly assure you of my conviction that your organization is necessary to a useful service in encouraging the preservation of those shrines and monuments of American history which must always bring inspiration to the American people. I wish you all success in your program of establishing the home of Jefferson as one of the perpetual monuments of patriotism and patriotism."

WOMAN SUES MAN WHO ADVERTISED
BILL AGAINST HER

Trenton, N. J., July 26.—When Louis Wolf, a roofer, became weary of attempting to collect a bill from Mrs. Bessie Kirkland he advertised the amount of the bill.
The advertisement took the form of a huge signboard hung in front of the cooper's shop which said Mrs. Kirkland owed him $32 for work.
All this Mrs. Kirkland alleged when she filed a $750 suit for slander against the roofer.

PROHIBITION PROBE
SUDDENLY DECIDED FOR SEPTEMBER 2

Senator Couzens Elected Chairman of Committee
After Watson of Indiana Hands In Resignation.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, July 26.—Secretary Mellon's enforcement of prohibition is to be investigated coincident with the national campaign, but the sudden decision of the senate committee charged with the task to go ahead brought out formal statements today from Senators Watson, Indiana, and Couzens, Michigan, republicans, explaining their conception of events leading up to it.

Senator Couzens was elected during the day as chairman of the committee in place of Senator Watson, who indicated his desire to retire, but not until he had concluded a two-hour interview with President Coolidge. Senator Watson then went to the white house and later the two senators made public their statements.

Meanwhile, democratic members of the committee, Senators King, of Utah, and Jones, of New Mexico, although officially silent, made it clear that they were for investigation, full and immediate, and had been all along.
The committee rejected the proposal that Francis J. Heney, California grant prosecutor, be retained as special counsel, but authorized selection by Senators Couzens and Jones of some one else for the work. September 2 was fixed as the date for open hearings in Washington.

Heney Not Selected.
Heney's name had been brought forward originally when the committee was holding hearings during the session of congress and it had aroused bitter debate in the senate. At that time, the committee was devoting its attention to an investigation of the internal revenue bureau and tax questions in general, and the charges were made and denied that there was a "drive" against Secretary Mellon.
Explaining the committee decision,
Senator Couzens, who, with the two

Special Painting Contest Planned For Boys, Girls,Jimmie Hodges Musical Comedy Tickets Offered
This Week.

The drawing and painting contests which have been running in the Boys' and Girls' section of The Constitution's Sunday Magazine have become so popular that The Constitution is now ready to make good its promise of bigger contests and more prizes.
On the comic page tomorrow morning will be the announcement of the big contest of the summer season, and the first of a number which are expected to draw double the number of entrants. The announcement will tell of some new prizes bigger and better than any yet offered to the boy and girl readers of The Constitution's magazine.

Today the boys' and girls' section contains on page 3, the seventh drawing and painting contest, with nine cash prizes and 25 tickets to the Jimmie Hodges Musical Comedy company at the Forsyth theater offered.
Those whose names are announced each week as winners of theater tickets in previous contests are urged to call early as possible after their names appear, as the tickets are only good until Friday night of the week. Cash and prizes other than theater and movie tickets are mailed each week and it is not necessary to call for these at The Constitution office.
Remember the big contest to start next Sunday and watch the comic page of tomorrow's Constitution for the first announcement.

AND TAR ON GIRL AT MEN'S BEHEST

Mrs. Shank, in Jail for Her Part in Attack, Declares She Acted on Orders of Male Mob.

VICTIM PLANS SUITS FOR HEAVY DAMAGES

Assailant and Assailed Reconciled as Bars of Cell Injure Safety From Further Violence.

Frederick, Md., July 26.—Little Dorothy Grandon, the girl who was tarred and feathered by 50 or 60 stalwards of Myersville, Md., was the victim of a male mob's viciousness and not of a jealous wife, according to Mrs.
Mary Shank, who is being held for her part in the attack on Dorothy.
Declaring that she stripped, beat and tarred pretty, bob-haired Miss Grandon only because a mob of Myers-ville men threatened her with "the same dose" if she refused. Mrs.
Shank, who was previously declared to have led the mob because she was jealous of her husband's attentions to Dorothy, now insists that she was as much a victim of the mob's passions as the beaten girl.

Men Are Blamed.
"The men made me do it," she sobbed again and again to the girl victim, who is still in a hysterical condition as a result of the treatment she received at the hands of the leading citizens of the small town where she came to spend a vacation among the fields and hills of the free outdoors.

The two women sat side by side in the Frederick jail. Mrs. Shank is held in $2,000 bond, facing a sentence of ten years imprisonment. Miss Grandon is held in $500 bond as a material witness, both for her own safety and for fear that she might flee the county in terror of further attacks. Mrs. Shank claims that her own safety has also been threatened, both before and after her arrest.

Women Reconciled.
Meanwhile, each one of the 17 men who were arrested charged with participation in the crime have furnished bond and gone free.

In jail Dorothy and the Shank woman apparently are to some extent reconciled. Mrs. Shank, at last, is trying to "make up." Occasionally, as she talked in the little cell today,
she patted Dorothy on the shoulder.
Once she slipped an arm about her waist.
"Sisters under the skin," a jailer murmured, but it was a bruised, scarred and burning skin through which the common instinct of womanhood was called to show itself through Dorothy.

Mrs. Shank Afraid.
Mrs. Shank no longer thinks that Dorothy was intimate with her husband, Lloyd Shank, but according to her story, believes that she herself

INMAN TO BUILD
HANDSOME HOME

Prominent Atlantan Buys Estate of Thirty Acres at Pace's Ferry Road and Andrews Avenue.

Announcement was made Saturday of the sale of a large parcel of land at the corner of Pace's Ferry road and Andrews avenue to E. H. Inman, who contemplates erection of a handsome country residence. The deal was handled by the real estate firm of Draper-Owens company, which announced other transactions and developments that will reach an aggregate of approximately $1,000,000.

The purchase by Mr. Inman, it was stated, involved several parcels of valuable suburban property just across the highway from the magnificent estate of John W. Grapt. The price was not stated, but it is understood that the amount was substantial and the home will call for a very large expenditure. Plans are now said to be in progress.

EXPLAINS PROCESS
WHEN ELECTORAL VOTE DEADLOCKED

Selection of President Thrown in Lower House
When No Candidate Gets Majority in College.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, July 26.—In one of these articles, nearly two weeks ago, a partial account was given of the mechanism that comes into operation when it happens that no one of the candidates for president receives a majority of the electoral vote, and therefore, the election is thrown into congress.

Because the earlier account was incomplete, and because, also, one detail of it contained an error, it is worth while to tell in detail just what follows when no candidate for the presidency receives a majority of the electoral votes.

To be very elementary, the nature of what is called the electoral college must be understood. It is a body rarely heard of. Well-informed men have voted for president for a lifetime without having heard any but the vaguest allusions to the electoral college, and without understanding what it is. Nevertheless, it is a fundamental part of our mechanism in choosing presidents.

Votes for Electors.
The individual voter does not cast his ballot directly for Coolidge, or Davis, or La Follette. He votes for a group of "electors"—republican or Coolidge electors; democratic or Davis electors; or La Follette electors.
These electors are instructed to vote for the presidential candidate under whose name they appear on the popular ballot. So that the voter is, in effect, voting for Coolidge, or Davis, or La Follette, but indirectly.

The numbers of these groups of elec-

IN SAN ANTONIO

San Antonio, Texas, July 26.—J.
M. Culppepper, 65, a Baptist lecturer and a worker for the better government ticket in the local primary campaign, was shot and instantly killed at Harlandale Box last afternoon.
Jim Lubbock, former deputy sheriff, is being held by the sheriff's office.
Lubbock was roughly handled by the crowd at the polls before taken into custody.

3 DAYS IS FOUND SITTING BY ROAD

North Conway, N. H., July 26.—
After wandering around in the woods near here for nearly three days, Miss Sarah Drown, 69, was found on Davis hill Saturday afternoon, calm and collected, but very happy that searchers had reached her—and thirsty.

Thursday, Miss Drown left her home to go raspberry picking. When she failed to return that evening, friends organized searching parties and an alarm was sent out to surrounding towns. All day Friday and Friday night parties roamed over the hills and countryside, but could find no trace of the missing elderly woman.
Two factories in nearby towns closed today to allow employees to help in the search.

Shortly after noon Saturday, Peter Davidson of Boston, one of a party of vacationists, found Miss Drown resting on a rock and enjoying a meal of berries, the only food she had since entering the woods. Her clothes were soaked from a heavy rain shower.
Her only complaint was that she was very tired, but on second thought decided she was more thirsty than tired.

GUARD OFFICERS
PROBE MINE WAR

Western Kentucky Strikers Are Reinforced by Many Sympathizers
From Herrin, Ill.

Frankfort, Ky., July 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Five officers of the national guard were ordered to Providence, Webster county, today, to observe conditions in the coal miners' strike in the western Kentucky field.

Major William A. Clarke, Jr., assistant adjutant general, said after a week's observation in the center of the strike field, the officers will lay their plans and make their reports to the state adjutant general.
Conditions in the strike field are serious, although the men not working have felt the "break" in the long strike at Hopkins county, where 10,000 men have returned to work, the assistant adjutant general declared.

Sympathizers from Illinois have been arriving in western Kentucky in automobiles marked "Herrin," he added.
The governor, before his departure, said he would be obliged to call out national guard troops. Major Clarke will investigate unconfirmed reports of fights and floggings, he said.
Among the men on strike and the few at work are many negroes, he added.

SOLONS NEAR END
BEGIN NEW DRIVE

Lower House Members Struggling in Jam of Important Bills Pressing for Passage.

With only two and a half weeks more remaining of the 1924 session of the Georgia legislature, and the lower house doing everything possible to relieve the terrible congestion of pending legislation, the coming week bids fair to be the most important of the present session.

While the house is struggling to pass numerous bills which are pressing for action before the session ends, the senate has practically cleared its calendar of all important legislation, for the present, the Atlanta viaduct measure, the bill to substitute the electric chair for hanging and the state-port bill being the only measures of import scheduled for consideration during the coming week.

The rules committee of the house decided at a meeting last week to introduce a motion Monday to set the biennial session bill, the primary contest bill, and the measure to add distillation test to gasoline inspection laws, as a special and continuing order of business beginning Monday.
It is expected that the biennial session bill will probably be in a position to be voted upon either Tuesday or Wednesday. This is as friends of the measure would have it, as they have expressed themselves as desirous of the bills being voted on with the largest attendance of the house as is possible.

Members of the house have requested that when a vote is taken on the measure that the full yeas and nays vote be published so that constituents may know how representatives voted on a matter so vital to the state, and which so many people of the state approve.

Game and Fish Act Up.
The first business in the lower house Monday morning will be consideration of debate and taking of a vote on the game and fish law. This is a committee bill, designed to rene-dy many defects in the present game and fish laws, with particular reference to the fish, oyster and shrimp industry of the coast counties, it is said.
It has been approved by the game and fish commissioner, who was associated with a special committee which visited the coast counties on an inspec-

GERMANS INSPIRED TO STIFFEN SPINES
BY U. S. ATTITUDE

Insistence of American Bankers on Guarantees and Against Ruhr Occupation Gives Confidence.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IS GIVEN TO MARX

He and Stresemann Prepared To Leave at Once for London To Meet Allied Diplomats.

Berlin, July 26.—Germany, as represented by her chancellor and foreign minister, will go before the London reparations conference as a nation with rights of her own, a nation no longer frightened and servile as she was at the fateful Versailles peace conference.

Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stresemann, with a retinue of 30 or 40 experts and secretaries, are awaiting an invitation from the allies which will take them to London for presentation of the "German case." There is no doubt here that the invitation will be forthcoming. Its receipt is expected not later than Monday night.

Meantime, a voice from America has inspired the Germans to greater confidence in themselves. The insistence of the American bankers on strict guarantees for the $200,000,000 loan to Germany, with their demand that she be protected from precipitous occupation of her territory, has stiffened the German spine materially.
It has helped Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister, in his determination to quit office rather than accept dictation or an agreement from the allies which would fail to provide in binding terms for the evacuation of the Ruhr.

Confidence Is Voted.
A resolution was introduced in the reichstag today in expressing lack of confidence in the Marx government, but it was defeated by a good majority, 172 to 62, with 79 members ab-staining. The nationalists were among the abstainers.

But the interest of Germany is directed rather to the American attitude and its probable influence on the French, than to a parliamentary victory that possessed little significance.

This was reflected in the speech before the reichstag by Deputy Herr Hetzsch, who commented upon American attitude.

July Cold Wave
Bids To Succeed
Record Scorchers

Fair and Cooler Forecast Justified as Mercury Takes Big Drop.

The semblance of a "July cold wave" for Atlanta seemed in store Saturday night right on the heels of the hot wave that began a week ago and kept the city sweltering a full seven-day span.

Starting with a temperature of 66 degrees early Saturday morning and rising at no time during the day much higher than 85 degrees, the mercury took a definite slump after sunset that carried it actually below 60 degrees early this morning.

Stiff breezes playing over the city all day contributed largely to the comfort of a citizenry that had cringed under a blistering sun and gasped in almost baculated air for several days last week during the hottest weather in ten years.

Fair and cooler weather with a plentiful supply of breeze was forecast for the first half of the week at the local office of the United States weather bureau.

Present prospects were said to be for thundershowers during the latter part of the week. Temperatures for the most part are not expected to go above 85 degrees. A new low mark for the week was recorded with 66 degrees Saturday morning. This may

POLICE SERGEANT
DARROW DECLARES

Leopold's Alleged Desire To Plead Guilty Before "Friendly Judge" Branded as Fabrication.

OFFICER RIGIDLY CROSS-EXAMINED

Admission Made That Alleged Statement Was Not Transferred to Notes on Case.

BY H. H. ROBERTSON.

Chicago, July 26.—"Frame-up!"
For the first time since the arrest of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb for the murder of young Robert Franks, the attorneys who are trying to save the two intellectual slayers from the gallows have struck back with that familiar cry—"frame-up!"
This charge against the state, which relentlessly has been piling up its evidence against the two wealthy young intellectuals, was hurled today by Clarence Darrow, the champion of all the criminal lawyers of the middle west, who is fighting the biggest battle of his life to secure a mere prison sentence for Leopold and Loeb.

Charge Is Denied.
At the end of a bitter cross-examination of Detective Sergeant James J. Gortland, who had declared Friday that Leopold had boasted after his confession that he might escape hanging "if the case is heard before a friendly judge," Darrow claimed to have proven the "frame-up" and to have scored the first important victory for the defense.

"This man's testimony was a pure fabrication given for the purpose of intimidating this court," shouted Darrow, as Gortland vigorously denied it.

State's Weakest Point.
Gortland was one of three officers who trailed and arrested Leopold.
His testimony Friday regarding Leo-pold's alleged statement about the "friendly judge" caused a new sensation and it was at once regarded as the weakest point in the state's seemingly impregnable case.

The new charge against Leopold might have been so obvious an afterthought of the witness that it seemed as if only the strongest sort of corroboration could make it a telling point for the state.

"If I should plead not guilty and be tried by a jury, they'd hang me," Gortland had said Leopold told him in a brief statement immediately after his confession of the murder. "But if I should plead guilty and the case were heard before a friendly judge, I think I could get off with life imprisonment."

Darrow Is Merciless.
Leopold, of course, did plead guilty, and with Gortland's testimony Darrow leaped at the first good opportunity to a merciless cross-examination from which the detective did not emerge any too brilliantly, the defense attorney set out to prove that the alleged statement by Leopold was con-

C. F. HERBMAN,
Meteorologist, Weather Bureau.

acted in an attempt to antagonize Justice John R. Caverly toward the defendants.

Wading through reams of typewritten reports and shorthand notes which Gortland said he made on the Frank case, Darrow failed to find any notation of that part about the "friendly judge." Gortland is secretary to Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes and in that capacity made the notes on Leopold's confession and other statements regarding the crime.

Carried Story in Hand.

"Did you make notations of all your conversations with the defendants in this case?" Darrow asked.

"No, not all of them," Gortland replied.

"Well, those that you did take, did you write them down at the time of the conversation or later?"

"I wrote them down shortly after."

"Oh, you carried them in your head a few weeks, eh?"

"Yes," admitted the officer.

Gortland was then called upon to produce the notes. The defense attorneys studied them carefully. Loeb and Leopold, bent their heads, glancing heads forward eagerly, and pointed out here and there what they considered fallacies.

Darrow then took off his glasses and resumed the cross-examination of the witness.

"When did you have these alleged conversations with the defendant?" he asked.

Demands Specific Answers.

Gortland recited his part in the investigation and arrest of the young millionaire in detail, pointing out just when he had talked with Leopold and just what he claimed Leopold said at those times.

The "friendly judge" conversation took place in a little room adjoining the state attorney's office, Gortland said.

"When was this?" demanded Darrow.

"That was on Saturday, May 31, just after Leopold had signed this confession."

"Who was present at this interview?"

Darrow Leads His Gun.

"All right," said Darrow, as he edged toward the witness like a bound with a rabbit at bay.

"You were alone with Leopold and no other persons heard the conversation. Is that right?"

"Yes, sir, that's right."

"Now tell us just what was said between you and Leopold?"

Gortland declared the conversation ran like this:

Gortland: "I think there must have been some other motive for this crime. Surely you didn't kill Robert Franks for the adventure and the ransom money alone."

Leopold: "If there was any other motive, do you think I'd be fool enough to tell you? I've got to save something for my defense."

Gortland: "What will your defense be based on?"

Leopold: "Well, that's pretty hard to say. I'll leave that to my parents and attorneys. As I see it now, I'll have two courses to follow. If I plead not guilty and am tried by a jury, they would hang me. If I plead guilty and we could get the case before a friendly judge, I might get off with life imprisonment."

Says He Took Notes.

"Did you make any notes of this conversation?" Darrow interjected.

"Yes, sir, I did."

"When?"

"Some time, later—about a week after, I guess."

"To whom did you tell this story?"

Gortland named an assistant state attorney, a newspaperman and several others. He had told of the alleged conversation many times before putting it down in writing, the detective said.

"Now," said Darrow, "please point out in this mass of notations just where you wrote about this 'friendly judge' conversation?"

Gortland adjusted his glasses took the reams of paper in his hands and searched long and hard. Finally he said he couldn't find it.

Not In Official Report.

The official "police report" on the case was then called for and in this, too, the conversation in question failed to appear. Darrow looked it over and gave it to Gortland. Gortland also failed to locate it.

"I guess," exclaimed the chief attorney for the defense, approaching the climax of his examination.

You mean to tell this court, Mr. Officer, that you can produce written notations of nearly everything Leopold said to you but you cannot produce any written notation of this 'friendly judge' conversation?"

"I guess that's correct," replied Gortland.

It then developed that Gortland had said nothing about the extraordinary conversation to State Attorney Robert E. Crowe until Thursday night—the night before he went on the witness stand for the prosecution.

Darrow Shoots His Bolt.

This testimony recorded, Darrow backed away, took a position squarely in front of Justice Caverly and said in a loud voice that reverberated out into the corridor:

"Don't you know that this story of yours of a friendly judge is a pure fabrication given for the purpose of intimidating this court?"

"No, it is not," Gortland promptly replied.

After examination of two minor witnesses by the state, court was adjourned at noon until Monday morning.

Crowe expects to take up at least three more days in his presentation of evidence. He will introduce next week the two signed confessions of Loeb and Leopold, together with testimony by witnesses for the state that the boy murderers are sane, and responsible for their crime.

Darrow will then present his defense. This, it is understood now, will consist almost wholly of testimony by the defense battery of attorneys, and will be a long one. Loeb and Leopold "not wholly responsible" for the murder.

SOCIALIST PARTY DENOUNCES KLAN

New York, July 26.—The Ku Klux Klan was denounced by name and the La Follette-Wheeler ticket was endorsed by the state socialist convention today.

The endorsement of the independent candidates marked the first instance in which the state socialists have endorsed candidates outside their own party.

The denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan was contained in the following plank of the platform:

"We denounce all attempts at dividing the people along racial and religious lines and as the most conspicuous offenders in this respect, though not the only one, we condemn the Ku Klux Klan and condemn it especially because of its pernicious campaign of intolerance and terrorism against large sections of the people, as the handmaiden of reaction, the servant of exploiting influences and as a grave menace to the integrity of democratic institutions and orderly progress."

The formation of a labor party in which the socialist will probably join, was the platform which followed the endorsement of the independent nominees.

"Confident that this must lead to the early organization of a powerful labor party, the socialist party pledges its fullest support."

Mr. Hillquit, leader of the New York socialists, eastern member of the La Follette campaign, in a speech upholding the endorsement of candidates outside the party, said "the socialist party has no other aim."

He said the socialists had no secret waterworks, with La Follette for the creation of a labor party, was a promise from La Follette that a convention would be called next January to consider the advisability of forming such a party.

The state ticket will be named tomorrow.

When Mr. Hillquit was asked about Mayor Hylan's offer to be the candidate of the progressive movement for governor, he said:

"Hylan is not acceptable to any of the group in the progressive movement."

Germany's participation in the London conference.

"It is undoubtedly a novelty of great importance," he said, "that the United States now participates in an allied conference more intensively than she ever has before. This is also true respecting Secretary Hughes' significant speech before the Pilgrims' dinner in London."

Demands of Stresemann.

Germany has been warned to proceed cautiously if she is invited to London and not to expect any advance. Hence she is not making such noisy protests against "unacceptable demands" as she has in the past.

Despite this attempt at discretion, it is learned that Stresemann intends to argue before the allied statesmen along the following lines:

1.—The Ruhr and the so-called "sanction area" must be evacuated. (The Daves report itself makes this clear.)

2.—The old customs boundaries must be restored.

3.—Germany must have the Ruhr intact, administratively and economically, and must know definitely that the allied troops are retiring at an early date.

4.—The regime of the Rhineland commission must cease.

5.—French and Belgian railroad directors should be withdrawn from Germany, on the theory that they disrupt the transport organization and are contrary to the spirit of restoration urged in the Daves report.

6.—Germany must not be subjected to sanctions at the pleasure of M. Poincaré and his group.

Won't Be Too Arrogant.

Stresemann has thought over these ideas thoroughly and decided to urge them before the allies, but he has been careful not to identify himself too closely with any spirit of "I will do this" or "I will not do that."

Chancellor Marx's restrained statement in the reichstag Friday showed how carefully the government is trying to keep an even keel and prevent untimely outbursts or extravagant statements in advance. Both Stresemann and Marx realize that any depicting of the Daves program would mean a real catastrophe to Germany.

The nationalists also know that, so their demands are not regarded as dooming or even damning the Daves report, provided the London conference reaches a reasonable agreement on sanctions and the Ruhr evacuation.

But if the allies maintain their occupation of the Ruhr, it is likely that Germany will explode the Daves plan. Even pacifists declare they will refuse to sign the provisions of the report if the troops stay in German territory.

DIPLOMATS SPEND WEEK-END KLISTING.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, July 26.—Most of the allied plenipotentiaries and experts, including the American officials and unofficial observers and advisers and the visiting bankers, today left the suburbs of the international conference to the soothing influence of England's leisurely week-end, while they themselves sought relaxation for the negotiations' parleys away from the British capital.

Most of the delegates were on board the guest ships, which followed in the wake of the royal yacht, as the king reviewed the British fleet this afternoon.

Informal conversations among the few experts remaining, among whom is Colonel James A. Logan, Jr., will continue throughout the recess, but tonight it was stated in British official quarters that the position between the conference financial experts and the bankers remained unchanged. The opinion was expressed that little could be done to reconcile the differences until after the plenary session at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Although the conference officials admit they have not found a formula which will satisfy both the bankers and the French, they do not admit their despair, maintaining that theoretical plans for launching the Daves scheme are complete and that the happy phrases likely to pacify the Quai d'Orsay, Wall street and Lombard street may be hit upon at any moment.

The great amount of technical work which the conference has completed and formulated into reports for presentation at Monday's plenary session is cited as sufficient basis for the confident optimism which all delegates insist on maintaining, in the face of the seemingly unsolvable problem of satisfying the investors and agents that whatever money is loaned to Germany for applying the Daves plan will be safe.

Technical Details Completed.

The delegates say they have the right to be happy over completing the technical details associated with such problems as the fiscal and economic unity of Germany, for it was upon these very questions that the previous conferences had been tion trip during the recess. The inspection trip was not officially ordered by the legislature, but made in order that the committee might find out how to draw the bill to meet the needs of the coast counties.

Chief developments in the house during the past week were the defeat of the four-year-term bill, defeat of motions to take from table the state income tax bill, and the passage of the election law.

The measure providing for a four-year term, instead of a two-year, for the governor and other officers, failed of passage Wednesday by an overwhelming majority and is dead for the balance of the session.

The measure by Representative Perkins, of Muscogee county, providing for the installation of an electric chair at Milledgeville to execute the death sentence in Georgia, was passed on Wednesday by a vote of 115 to 43.

Passage of the bill was a result of an effort of two years by the Muscogee representative toward this end.

Tax Reform Laid Off.

An unsuccessful effort was made to revive the state tax reform of last year when Representative Harris, of Wilkes county, made a motion on Wednesday to take from the table the bill to authorize a state income tax. The motion was defeated.

The measure, which by a vote of 120 to 32, passed a measure placing expenses of trial eradication in border counties entirely on the state income tax.

In the senate the situation is much more simple and clarified than in the lower house. The calendar is practically cleared from day to day and senators are not faced with the terrible jam of bills as is the case in the lower house.

The state of the Atlanta viaduct measure, which has been one of the senate's chief concerns since the present session began, is still undecided. The bill provides for amendment of the act of 1912, authorizing the construction of viaducts over railroad tracks at Pryor street and Central avenue. It has been on the floor of the senate since last week.

One Wore Mask.

"I have persistently opposed these investigations and made two speeches on the floor of the senate voicing my opposition. I resigned as chairman of this subcommittee because I could not consistently retain that position while opposing the activities of the committee. It is very doubtful whether I shall remain as a member of the committee at all, if they insist on sitting during the campaign."

was the victim of a mob which used the charge involving her husband as an excuse to make her attack an innocent girl.

The woman is afraid she will be tarred and feathered herself when she gets out of jail, she declares, for one of the men whispered a threat to her on the night of the hearing.

"You'll get a dose of the same thing if you squeal," the man hissed in her ear, according to Mrs. Shank.

TO RECONSIDER ACTION.

The electric chair bill, introduced by Senator Phillips, of the eighteenth district, after being defeated by a vote of 18 to 17 at Thursday's session, will be reconsidered as a result of the passage of a motion to that effect Friday.

The measure is similar to one passed by the house Thursday and provides for substituting the electric chair for hanging as means of executing the death sentence. It will probably be reconsidered some time next week as it takes its place in the regular order of business on the calendar.

The senate Thursday defeated a measure by Senator Stovall, of the twenty-ninth district, providing for abolition of capital punishment in Georgia.

The state port measure is set for a special order of business on Wednesday. The measure provides for amendment to the state constitution providing for increasing the bonded debt of the state to allow construction of state-owned terminal facilities at some deep-water port. The bonded indebtedness must not exceed $15,000,000. While the city at which the terminal facilities would be constructed is not designated in the bill, it probably will be either Savannah or Brunswick, and both of these cities have been making an active fight to secure the site.

democratic members, holds the majority vote, said:

"On Tuesday, July 22, Senator Watson called me at Detroit on long distance telephone and said that Senators King and Jones were in his office and that they were all desirous of having a meeting and would know when I could attend."

Tells of Conversations.

"I was in the midst of my campaign and told him that if the meeting was wanted at once, I could come. So I cancelled several engagements to attend a meeting Friday of this week. The date was satisfactory to Senator Watson, who was on the telephone. So I left Detroit Thursday and met in Senator Watson's office Friday morning, July 25, at which time Senator Watson said he personally was opposed to going ahead with the investigation and, if the committee decided to go ahead, he would have to resign as chairman, which he did. The committee then accepted his resignation and elected me chairman. Senator Watson wired Senator Ernst (Republican) Kentucky, at Denver, and got his permission to cast his ballot."

Considerable discussion was had as to the selection of an attorney to study the complaints and prepare for a conference of the investigation. The committee by unanimous vote decided to leave the selection to the chairman, Senator Watson, and Senator Jones.

Senator Watson asked to be excused, and was excused, and the selection of the assistants necessary for the committee was left to a decision of Senator Jones and myself.

May Ask Information.

"A resolution was passed, authorizing the chairman, at the instance of any member of the committee, or on his own motion, to ask the treasury department for any information that any member of the committee might deem necessary or desirable for carrying out the investigation. It was the impression of the committee that if reasonably prompt action was had in securing an attorney and other help, we would take the month of August for them to get organized and make plans for opening the hearings, coupled with the fact that several members of the committee had prepared certain questionnaires which they desired the treasury department to answer. In view of this, it was decided that the committee would then adjourn until September 2, at 10 a. m. Every resolution was unanimously carried."

Purpose of Investigation.

"It is the committee's intention to investigate the income tax unit and the prohibition unit of the internal revenue bureau for corrupt practices, whether the laws are being properly carried out and if any amendments to the laws would improve the functioning of the internal revenue

WOMAN SAYS THIS WAS WHY SHE TOOK THE BLAME UPON HERSELF AT THE TIME.

Mrs. Shanks does not expect to be out of jail, however, until the grand jury takes up the case in September. She claims that her husband's family, which she thought was friendly, has now turned against her.

Girl to File Damage Cases.

Meanwhile, Dorothy Grandon may be able to exact some retribution for her mistreatment. She intends to file heavy damage suits against members of the mob. All of them are farmers of wealth, or sons of rich land owners, and lawyers here say Miss Grandon has excellent chances to collect.

Here is the story of the outrage as now told by Mrs. Shanks:

"I'm sorry I had to tar and feather her, but the mob told me if I didn't I would get the same dose."

"After I saw Dorothy and my husband in the clover field, I went after her to ask her why she was infatuated with him. Lloyd had started up the road."

Was Given Club.

"After we had a few words together I went home and told my sister-in-law and my husband what had happened. They told me I ought to get even. I told them I was afraid Lloyd would beat me as he promised to, but they said:

"He's not going to beat you. Take this club."

"My sister-in-law gave me a club, but I didn't want to take it. I said, 'I would rather beat her with my hands, but my father-in-law told me not to hurt my hands on her.'"

"On my way I met Harry Leatherman, Dale Morgan and a boy named Haupt. They asked me what I was going to do to Dorothy. Leatherman said:

"We're going to chase her out of town and give her a remembrance."

Leatherman said he'd go after the mob.

Mob Comes In Autos.

"I waited about a half hour and five or six machines drove up filled with men."

"Somebody said one car had seventeen in it. I got on the running board of the last machine. When we caught up with Dorothy, the men told me to get out."

"My brother-in-law handed me the club and told me to use it."

"I struck Dorothy three times, once over the head. Then I put the club down and told her we would fight it out woman to woman."

"Somebody yelled to me: 'Don't hurt your hands; use the club!'"

"After I had torn off her clothing somebody handed me the tar and feathers. I think they got the feathers from a woman in Myersville."

"There was only one masked man in the crowd. He was Walter Shank. He tied a white handkerchief over his face so he wouldn't be recognized."

The tar, Mrs. Shank said, was stolen from the road near the home of W. J. Grove, an employee of the state roads commission, who kept it to repair highways.

It was at this point in her experience, according to Mrs. Shanks, that James Whip, sturdy young farmer who lives near the scene of the tarring, came to Dorothy's rescue and took the semi-conscious girl to his home, where she was given medical attention.

Myersville is a farming community of about 200 population.

Mrs. Shanks does not expect to be out of jail, however, until the grand jury takes up the case in September. She claims that her husband's family, which she thought was friendly, has now turned against her.

Girl to File Damage Cases.

Meanwhile, Dorothy Grandon may be able to exact some retribution for her mistreatment. She intends to file heavy damage suits against members of the mob. All of them are farmers of wealth, or sons of rich land owners, and lawyers here say Miss Grandon has excellent chances to collect.

Here is the story of the outrage as now told by Mrs. Shanks:

"I'm sorry I had to tar and feather her, but the mob told me if I didn't I would get the same dose."

"After I saw Dorothy and my husband in the clover field, I went after her to ask her why she was infatuated with him. Lloyd had started up the road."

Was Given Club.

"After we had a few words together I went home and told my sister-in-law and my husband what had happened. They told me I ought to get even. I told them I was afraid Lloyd would beat me as he promised to, but they said:

"He's not going to beat you. Take this club."

"My sister-in-law gave me a club, but I didn't want to take it. I said, 'I would rather beat her with my hands, but my father-in-law told me not to hurt my hands on her.'"

"On my way I met Harry Leatherman, Dale Morgan and a boy named Haupt. They asked me what I was going to do to Dorothy. Leatherman said:

"We're going to chase her out of town and give her a remembrance."

Leatherman said he'd go after the mob.

SCHOOL TAX PLAN MEETING CALLED

Support for the charter amendment to authorize a referendum on a one-mill emergency school tax for this year will be urged by city and school board officials at the conference called for Monday by Mayor Walter A. Sims.

The mayor, it was currently reported without denial Saturday, had been discouraged by bankers of the Atlanta Clearing House association in an effort to secure a loan similar to that made by the Citizens & Southern bank for school last year. The mayor declined to comment on his plans for school relief, but it was generally believed at city hall that he had hoped to be able to announce that financial help could be secured for the schools. It was stated that he and administration leaders had not given up hope of finding some new school relief plan to be offered at the conference Monday, or possibly at a conference to be held later.

After Big Attendance.
In the meantime supporters of the present school program were diligently working to bring out a strong representation at the meeting of the general assembly's municipal government committee at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when the proposed charter amendment, authorizing the tax election, is to be considered.

They were of the opinion that the emergency tax was the easiest way out of the present critical situation, which will result, school board members say, in closing schools in October unless the tax is levied.

It was suggested in some quarters at city hall Tuesday that the issuance of notes payable in January for teachers' October and November salaries might be suggested at the conference Monday. In case the emergency tax levy should not be voted that was said to be the only way to avert closing schools. This suggestion met generally with disapproval.

THREE FAVOR PLAN SUPPORT FOR THE EMERGENCY TAX WAS AWAYED BY THREE CANDIDATES FOR THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND OTHER SPEAKERS AT A MEETING IN COMMERCIAL HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM FRIDAY NIGHT.

J. W. Weaver presided and Harry Ethridge, attorney; Wayne Allen, Channing Cope and Frank Hopwood, candidates for the legislature; W. C. Slate, school commissioner, and Mrs. George Trowman, parent-teacher president, all spoke in support of the tax.

Attorney Ethridge urged that some additional provision be made for housing the annual increase of 5,000 pupils estimated for the public schools of the city.

EXPLAINS PROCESS OF VOTE DEADLOCK

tors vary in each state. The number each state has is equal to the number of congressmen it has plus two as the number of senators each state has. For example, Arizona has two senators and one congressman, has three electors, while New York, which has 45 congressmen and two senators, has forty-five electors. It is these electors who are chosen by the individual voters in the popular election in November. A republican in New York, for example, will vote for the 45 Coolidge electors, a democrat will vote for the 45 Davis electors. A La Follette man will vote for the 45 La Follette electors.

Process of Election.
After the selection of these groups of electors in the various states in the November election, an intricate but almost unknown process ensues. Which group of electors is chosen in each state will meet in that state on the second Monday in the following January, that is, on January 12 next. At this meeting the electors go through the formality of casting their vote for whichever candidate for president they were identified with. If New York goes republican, the 45 republican electors will meet and register 45 votes for Coolidge, and so as to Davis or La Follette, if either of these two should carry the state.

Having registered their choice, the 45 New York electors forward the result to Washington. The electors in all the other states do the same thing on the same day. The results of these electoral votes in the various states having been forwarded to Washington, the next step takes place in the senate chamber, and in the presence of the senate and lower house of congress, on the second Wednesday in

Chiefs of Atlanta's Symphony Orchestra Association

February. That will be February 11 next. On that day the electoral votes from all over the country are counted. In ordinary years this completes the process.

Majority Is Required.

This year, however, there may be, for the first time in a hundred years, some complications. To be successful, a candidate for president must have not merely more electoral votes than any other one, but actually a majority of the total electoral votes of the country. The total electoral vote is 531 (equal to 1 for each of the 435 members of congress, plus one for each of the 90 senators). A majority is 266.

In every presidential election for a hundred years it has come about that one of the candidates for president has had the necessary majority. The reason is that in almost all the elections there were only two candidates, the ones representing the two main parties. And in the years in which there have been three candidates the vote of these three candidates has been so small as not to interfere with one of the major candidates getting a majority. Even in 1912, when there were really three major candidates, republican, democratic and progressive, the result was in substance a division of the republican strength, so that Wilson got 435 electoral votes, Roosevelt 88 and Taft 8.

Lack of Majority Possible.

But this year the possibility is anticipated that no one of the three candidates for president may carry enough states, and of sufficient size, to get the necessary 266 electoral votes to constitute a majority. Some go further and say it is not merely a possibility this year, but a probability. Whatever the degree of likelihood, it rests upon the assumption that La Follette will carry anywhere from one to 10 states—with anywhere from 13 electoral votes to as many as 70 electoral votes. If La Follette should carry only Wisconsin, he would have but 13 electoral votes. If he should carry as many states as some of his supporters hope, he might have as many as 70 electoral votes, or even more. The assumption is that if La Follette should get any such considerable number of electoral votes, the remainder might be divided between Davis and Coolidge in such a way that neither would have as many as 266. It would be possible, of course, for La Follette to get a considerable number of electoral votes and yet at the same time for either Coolidge or Davis to have more than 266. No one can foresee yet how the division of electoral votes among the three candidates will turn out. In any event, the rest of the machinery begins to move only on the assumption that no one of the three gets as many as 266.

If this happens, when the electoral votes are counted in the presence of the house and senate on February 11, next, the succeeding step will be that the lower house of congress will proceed to ballot among the three candidates; Coolidge, Davis and La Follette.

In this balloting by the house, the members vote, not as individuals, but as state units. That is to say, New York, although it has 47 members, will have but one vote, while Arizona, with but one member, will also have one vote.

The consequence is that we must now look at the political complexion of the congressional delegations from each state. Pennsylvania, for example, has 30 republican congressmen and six democrats. It would therefore cast one vote for Coolidge. South Carolina, on the other hand, has seven democrats in congressmen. It therefore would cast one vote for Davis.

In the house, 23 of the state delegations are prevalently republican and would ordinarily be expected to cast 23 votes for Coolidge. This, however, is subject to an important qualification, to be mentioned in a moment. Twenty of the state delegations are prevalently democratic, and presumably would vote for Davis. Five of the state delegations are tied—seven divided between republicans and democrats; namely, the delegations from Maryland, Nebraska, New Hampshire and Minnesota.

Tie in Five States.

If each state delegation should vote according to whether it had a majority of republican or democratic members, the matter would be simple. There would be 23 votes for Coolidge and 20 votes for Davis, with the five evenly divided states presumably not voting.

But the important qualification is that some of the states whose delegations in congress are nominally republican, are only nominally so. For example, of the 11 congressmen from Wisconsin, 10 are republican. But this Wisconsin delegation, as is well known, is only nominally republican. It by no means follows that the Wisconsin delegation would cast its vote for Coolidge. On the contrary, it would cast its vote for La Follette. The Wisconsin delegation throughout all the present congress has followed La Follette quite regularly, and has ignored the fact that it is nominally republican. To a less extent this is true of two or three other states. So it is quite within possibility that the election in the house will result in 20 states voting for Coolidge, 20 for Davis and three for La Follette, thus creating a deadlock.

If this deadlock arises in the house, the constitutional provision which then applies reads as follows: "If the house of representatives shall not choose a president, . . . before the fourth day of March, . . . the vice president shall act as president, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the president."

The question then arises: Will there be a vice president? This takes us to the senate.

Senate Elects Vice President.

While the house is at work trying to elect a president, the senate is at work trying to elect a vice president. The twelfth amendment of the constitution, which covers this point, reads: "The person having the greatest number of votes as vice president (in the electoral college) shall be the vice president if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest . . . on the list the senate shall choose the vice president."

In the coming situation, if it arises, there is much importance in the fact that as respects the vice presidency, the senate chooses one of the two highest, while as respects the presidency, the house votes among the three highest. Because the senate confines its balloting to the two highest, the assumption is that no deadlock will arise in the senate on the matter of the vice presidency. The assumption is that the two highest would be Dawes, republican, and Bryan, democrat, with La Follette's running mate, Wheeler, being third, and therefore eliminated from consideration.

SYMPHONY CONCERT OPENS OCTOBER 26

within the week under Mr. Leddy's personal direction and ensemble rehearsals will be held regularly after October 1, in preparation for the opening concert. After that, sectional rehearsals will continue as needed and two ensemble rehearsals will be held before each concert, one on the Sunday before the concert and one during the morning of the day on which each concert is to be played.

The added emphasis that is to be laid on ensemble playing is sure to make the quality of the concerts this year much higher than those of the first and experimental season of the orchestra.

Many New Features.

Another new feature under contemplation is the inclusion of eight of the most eminent southern concert artists as soloists at the eight concerts.

Hugh Hodgson, of Athens and Atlanta, piano artist, is to be the featured soloist at the first concert, under present plans. Names of the other seven to be featured at the succeeding concerts were not announced Saturday.

Atlanta's symphony orchestra, it was apparent from the excellence it attained during the first concert series last year, is destined to develop into an organization comparable with the Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Minneapolis and other great American musical institutions, world famous and good enough to draw music lovers to hear it from miles away from Atlanta.

Changes in policy for the coming season, influenced by discovery of the difficulties in the way of such an enterprise last year, may be safely expected to insure an improvement in quality of performance that, even with the same musicians, will make it seem to be an entirely different and vastly superior orchestra.

Great 1923-24 Season.
In spite of the fact that last year, save for the first concert, only one ensemble rehearsal was held before each concert, the orchestra elicited the praise of music masters the nation over who came here to listen to it. It attempted successfully many tremendous compositions which no other Atlanta orchestra had ever essayed before and established a prestige remarkable for the maiden effort of such a kind.

Individually, the musicians are not far behind in talent or accomplishment, musicians in big northern and eastern symphony orchestras. Many of them have played not only in famous American symphonies but with some of the most renowned Italian, German and Russian orchestras.

Given sympathetic encouragement

by Atlanta music lovers, in the form of financial support generous enough to enable the musicians to practice often and diligently without great personal sacrifice, the orchestra will develop into an institution which will be worth as much to Atlanta as a civic feature as grand opera and which will, by bringing the best of the world's music to Atlanta week in and week out for long seasons each year, do more to forward the cultural development of the city than any other institutions, save, perhaps, an art gallery.

Thorough Rehearsals

The success of a symphony orchestra, it should be kept in mind, depends not so much on rallying together a group of musicians of musical genius as it does on giving thorough ensemble rehearsal to a group of good musicians under a brilliant conductor. The thoroughness of rehearsals most necessary, however, to give the brilliance of the conductor opportunity to express itself.

Thorough rehearsal in ensemble with so large a group of musicians as is included in a symphony is a grueling work, unrelieved by any hope of personal glory for the musician, because ensemble perfection demands complete submergence of each individual player into the mass effect.

Support Was Generous

Atlanta's support to the orchestra last year was in every way as generous as could fairly be asked for any new venture which might have been a colossal farce as easily as it could have been a constructive success. Last year's measure of success justifies sponsors of the orchestra in approaching the city's cultural leaders with a greater measure of self-assurance this year.

The reduction of half of the number of people who will be permitted to stand sponsor and support the enterprise will prevent a large number of people interested in the city's cultural progress from becoming parties to the continued growth of the new institution. It was, however, double the honor attached to being a sponsor.

Those who subscribed last year are to be given first opportunity to subscribe this year, the subscription membership lists to be held open to them for one week before the rest of the public is permitted to subscribe. It is entirely possible that the 500 memberships will be taken in the first week.

LIST OF PATRONS.

The list of patrons of the Atlanta symphony orchestra follows: Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Walker, former Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, former Governor and Mrs. Thomas W. Hardwick, former Governor and Mrs. Hugh M. Dorsey, Mayor and Mrs. Walter Sharpe, Mrs. Kate Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. William Clair Spiker, Mr. Wellford Walters, Mr. Asa G. Candler, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Candler, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Phinley Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Woods White, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. ## ATLANTA YOUTHS WIN IN "DEFENSE TEST DAY" ESSAYS

Winners in the "Defense Test Day" essay contest in Camp McClellan, Alabama, held last week, included a number of Atlanta boys, three of whom are students at Emory university, according to information reaching Atlanta Saturday from camp officials. Those who won honorable mention were Joe C. Harrold, J. A. Wise and G. R. Field.

Plans for the nation-wide defense test on September 12, when all national guard and reserve forces in the United States will be mobilized for one day as a "test" and a mark of celebration of the sixth anniversary of the victory won by American arms in the Battle of St. Mihiel, have been under way some time, and have been ordered officially by the war department. At many of the summer camps held throughout this summer prizes have been awarded to best essays on a defense of the general test.

At Camp McClellan during the past few weeks several score Atlanta boys have been undergoing intensive training and, incidentally, found time to submit essays on the "Defense Test Day" program.

CHILDREN TO RIDE FREE

Tuesday Will Be Big Day at Lakewood.

Tuesday is children's day at Lakewood park, for on that day everybody under 15 rides free on all amusement devices.

The merry-go-round has never turned so merrily as it will all that day. The "whip" will pop, and the aeroplanes fly, and the "keyround" scoot—all laden with a throng of kids, owners for the day.

A record throng is expected, and Boy Scouts have been assigned to police duty. Gates open at 9 o'clock; rides begin at 10. From then on the lid's off.

HEAT WAVE RUSH BREAKS RECORDS AT LOCAL POOLS.

All attendance records at municipal swimming pools were shattered during the rush of sweltering humanity for relief from the heat of the last week.

Reports to General Manager of Parks L. L. Wallis Saturday showed that 12,000 more people already this year have paid for the privilege of plunges in municipal pools than during all of last summer. Only a small part of the excess, he said, was due to the recent action of the park committee in lowering the free age limit from 14 to 12 years.

Totals reported from various park pools were as follows:

Piedmont, 45,000 to date this year compared to 41,250 all last year.
Grant, 30,000 to date this year compared to 28,000 all last year.
Oakland City, 26,000 to date this year, compared to 22,000 all last year.
Maddox, 14,000 this year compared to 11,000 all last year.
Mogley, 8,000 this year compared to 5,000 all last year.
Washington, 3,000 this year compared to 2,000 all last year.

DEPARTMENT MERGER AMENDMENT SCORED

Authority to abolish the board of education without a vote of the people would be vested in city council upon passage by the general assembly of the Bachman charter amendment, it was declared Saturday in a statement by D. M. Therrell, chairman of the board of education charter revision committee.

The amendment in question is the one approved by the council at its last session Monday and introduced later in the week by Representative J. O. Wood as "section 2-A" of the omnibus charter revision bill.

Alderman J. B. Bachman, its author, and Mayor Walter Sims both stated that the amendment is not aimed at the school board, but contemplates consolidation of several other minor city departments in the interest of economy and efficiency. Abolishment of some departments and consolidation with others had been advocated by Mayor Walter A. Sims in his campaign for mayor two years ago, before the issue of abolishing the board of education developed.

Commissioner Therrell also called attention to the Hartsfield amendment, putting to a vote of the people the question of abolishing the present board and substituting one elected by the council. The Hartsfield amendment will be effective only after a majority vote of the people, to which Commissioner Therrell did not object.

Georgia Leading Entire Southeast In Stolen Autos

Stressing need of the bill pending in the Georgia legislature to require registration of title for automobiles, the quarterly report of the Automobile Underwriters' Detective bureau shows that of the 798 cars stolen in the nine southern states during the three months from April 1 to June 30, 307 were stolen in Georgia.

The report of the bureau shows that during this period of three months 196 automobile thefts occurred in the city of Atlanta, which is several times more than occurred in any southern state with the exception of Georgia. There were only 26 thefts in Birmingham, 31 in Jacksonville, 71 in New Orleans, 18 in Columbia, 24 in Charleston and three in Norfolk.

Of the 307 automobiles reported stolen in Georgia, 196 were in Atlanta, 6 in Augusta, 12 in Columbus, 25 in Macon, 5 in Savannah, and 43 in the remaining cities of the state. Of the number 168 were recovered. The report shows. Of the 798 cars stolen in the entire nine southern states, 377 were recovered.

The report shows that during the three months from April 1 to June 30, 63 automobiles were reported stolen in Alabama, 9 in Arkansas, 98 in Florida, 307 in Georgia, 95 in Louisiana, 12 in Mississippi, 65 in North Carolina, 102 in North Carolina, 26 in Virginia and 21 in outside territory.

MERCER MEMORIAL APPROVED BY WALKER

Governor Clifford Walker's approval of the Mercer memorial program has been voiced in a letter written by the Georgia governor to George H. Carwell, president of the state senate, who is national director of the Mercer program. Governor Walker in his letter offers his full cooperation in the Mercer undertaking, and says that what alumni of other institutions have done Mercer can do.

Governor Walker's letter to Mr. Carwell is as follows:

Hon. George H. Carwell, Senate Chamber, State Capitol, City.

Dear George: I notice from the daily papers the announcement that you have taken charge of the campaign for securing the funds necessary for the erection of an alumni building on the campus of Mercer university.

I am writing to congratulate you and Mercer upon this connection and assure you of my cordial cooperation in this very worthy effort.

The alumni of the University of Georgia have recently completed a building worth some $300,000. It is the handsomest and most attractive, as well as the most useful building on the campus of Mercer university. The alumni of Mercer can do as much.

As indicated above, if I can cooperate with you in any way, I shall be pleased to do so.

In the meantime, with my best wishes personally, Very sincerely yours, (Signed) CLIFFORD WALKER, Governor.

Morris Meisel Joins Wiley Jones-Empire Furniture Company

Formerly with the Empire Furniture company as advertising manager, Morris Meisel is now in charge of advertising affairs of the consolidated Wiley Jones-Empire Furniture company at 285-286 Peachtree street, the home of Grand Rapids furniture. He will be in charge of newspaper and direct-mail advertising as well as the promotion, having created an enviable reputation in this work while at the Empire, where his efforts were favorably mentioned by trade papers which requested him to contribute articles to their publications.

Mr. Meisel states he is very enthusiastic over his present connection, as the Wiley-Jones-Empire store has plenty of sunlight and air as well as specially-appointed ladies' rest room and private parking place to make shopping more desirable.

He added that his present concern has enjoyed a successful business from its inception, and expects August to be the banner month in its history as the public will then have the opportunity of participating in the greatest value-giving sale the Wiley Jones-Empire company ever inaugurated.

FARMERS' 'BULLETIN' ISSUED BY RAILROADS

As a medium for the exchange of ideas between farmers, business men and county agents, The Agricultural Bulletin, a monthly publication printed by the Atlanta & West Point railroad, the Western Railway of Alabama and the Georgia railroad, is being issued free of charge among a circulation of 5,000. The Agricultural Bulletin consists of twelve pages of reading matter dealing with subjects vitally interesting to farmers and business men living in the sections through which the three railway companies have lines.

The first issue was in June and was primarily confined to cotton. Articles containing valuable information concerning the growing of cotton and control of the boll weevil, in addition to a two-page statistical chart and other agricultural discussions which should prove of great benefit to both the farmer and the business men, comprised the June publication. The July number carried extensive information regarding the dairy and live stock industry, compiled from authoritative and expert sources.

August 1 the next issue will be circulated, and will deal with poultry. The Agricultural Bulletin will be issued free upon request, the publishers announce, and invite submission of any information or idea which might prove helpful to bettering agricultural conditions.

Contenders for Honor As Rhodes Scholars Named at Emory

Emory University, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Paul M. Spurin, of Atlanta, of the class of 1925; W. Powell Jones, of Cairo, Ga., of the class of 1924; Lloyd Chapin, of Jonesboro, Ark., of the class of 1923, and George A. Morgan, of Pulaski, Tenn., are included among the Emory university students selected to compete with representatives of other leading colleges in the state for the 1925 Rhodes' scholarships to Oxford university, England.

Under a new ruling of the scholarship association, one student from each state will be awarded the scholarship, the winner to be determined on a competitive basis. The scholarship went to Harvey Cleckley, of Augusta, University of Georgia student. Georgia university will select a team to compete September 25, it was announced tonight.

The scholarship carries a yearly stipend of $1,500, is for four years and admits the holder to Oxford without examinations. Selections are made on scholastic, athletic and general all-around qualifications.

Robert C. Alston, Atlanta attorney, is chairman, and Robert P. Brooks, of the University of Georgia, is secretary of the Georgia state committee.

Coolidge Abandons Mayflower Voyage To Write Address

Washington, July 26.—Cooler weather, bringing to an end the heat wave prevalent in Washington all week, led President Coolidge to abandon today his usual week end trip aboard the Mayflower in favor of a week-end in Washington devoted to conferences and work on his notification address.

Arriving at his office this morning, the president found there had been a welcome drop in temperature overnight and immediately decided to remain in Washington for the week-end. The advantage of quiet, obtainable through a cruise on the Mayflower, was outweighed, in the president's opinion, by the advantage of having at hand the white house much of the material he is using in work upon his notification address.

Value of Trade Congress Discussed by Stephens

Belief that Atlanta can become the center of a vast trade with Latin America to the benefit of every line of business and industry not only of this city but of the entire southeast as well, was expressed by Phineas V. Stephens, director general of the Southern Commercial congress, speaking last week at a preliminary organization meeting of the Atlanta committee of the Pan-American congress, which will be held in this city October 1-4.

Mr. Stephens asserted that Atlanta's strategic location as the central distributing point of the southeast, the variety and volume of her resources and her proximity to Latin America gave her an unrivaled advantage in cultivating trade with South and Central America, Mexico and the West Indies which, he stated, would be stimulated more by the advent of the congress this fall than by any other factor in the history of the city.

Mr. Stephens expressed belief that the congress would open new era of commercial and industrial development for this entire south, and urged whole-hearted cooperation of every individual and corporate contributor to make the event an outstanding success.

Notables to Attend.

Already, assurances have been received that international celebrities and figures will be present at the congress. The president of Cuba has indicated his desire to be present; General Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, has announced definitely that he will address the congress on the first ten years' successful operation of the canal and ways and means of increasing Latin American trade through this channel; John W. Davis, democratic nominee for the presidency, will appear on the program. If his itinerary can be arranged to include Atlanta at that time, and the diplomatic and consular representatives of practically every Latin American republic will be present, as well as several members of the 67th congress and governors of various southern states.

Official invitations have been extended to President Coolidge and to the presidents of all of the Latin American countries.

Other features of the congress, as announced by Mr. Stephens, will be a magnificent pan-American pageant with a public parade, receptions for the distinguished visitors and a dress ball to be participated in by the diplomatic representatives of over 20 countries. Business sessions will embrace the grand conferences on the following subjects: Agriculture, commerce, industry, engineering, natural resources, tariff, transportation, port development, finance and securities, credits, insurance, education, municipal government, international air routes, publicity and advertising abroad, international shipping, labor and social agencies, Panama canal and Pan-American union. These sessions will be presided over by outstanding experts in the fields represented and by leaders in commerce, industry and finance.

To Work Out Plan.

At the close of the congress, Mr. Stephens stated that the executive committee would analyze the proceedings of the congress and work out therefrom the most important and valuable lines of activity indicated so as to conserve and utilize the work of the congress to the best possible advantage for Atlanta and the south.

Attention was called to the previous meeting of the Southern Commercial congress, which was held in Atlanta in 1911. Mr. Stephens cited the fact that during the sessions of this congress, the auditorium was crowded to capacity, and that among the prominent speakers of the occasion were former Presidents Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt. A 600-page volume, covering the proceedings, was published following this congress.

At Friday's meeting, the committee approved a fund of $25,000 to cover expenses of the congress, including entertainment of the delegates and speakers. This fund will be underwritten, it was announced, by leading civic and business organizations of Atlanta and by popular subscription. The following unsolicited subscriptions were announced as having already been received: Ansley hotel, $500; Byrd Printing Co., $200; Southern Press Clipping Bureau, $25. It was indicated also by Mayor Sims and Captain George M. Hope that an effort to get appropriations for the congress would be made by city council and the Fulton county commissioners.

Meet in August.

T. R. Gross, president of the Atlanta Foreign Trade club, acted as temporary chairman of the organization meeting Friday. It was announced that a mass meeting would be held early in August to complete the organization of the committee of 100, at which time a permanent chairman would be elected and a finance committee appointed.

HIGHWAY BILL WILL GET HEARING TUESDAY

The so-called permanent highway bill providing for raising of $40,000,000 by a bond issue—$40,000,000 to be used for construction, and $8,000,000 for reimbursing the counties for money spent by them on the state road system—will be given a hearing before the house committee on constitutional amendments next Tuesday night, it was announced Saturday by Representative Mann, author of the measure.

In a letter to a number of people of the state, expressing the hope that they attended the committee hearing, Mr. Mann declared that "our fight for permanent highways in Georgia has just begun."

"It is going to take individual as well as organized effort," the letter added, "on the part of all our progressive women and men to make the road roads cause a reality."

A. & P. STORE HISTORY READS LIKE ROMANCE

What concern do you think does the largest cash business of any establishment in the world? It's right here in America and there is not a reader of The Constitution who does not know the name.

The Ford Automobile company? No.

The Standard Oil company? No.

The United States Steel company? No.

It is the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company, otherwise known as the "A. & P."

This concern did a cash business last year in its 10,000 stores of $302,000,000.

Mystery In Founding.

Yet, probably not one person in 10,000 knows who owns the "A. & P." stores, or how they started, or who directs them. The story is one of the greatest business romances in American history and one of the best known. People know about Ford, Rockefeller, Morgan, Gary, Schwab, Wannamaker, Woolworth and other beacon lights of business, but the "A. & P." founder successfully kept his name and his fame from the public.

"A. & P." stores were started in 1859 by John Huntington Hartford. He opened a small tea and coffee store at Vesey and Church streets, New York. There were two striking things about the store, one was the month filling name, "The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company," and the other Pacific Tea Company," and the other was a particularly brilliant shade of red paint with which the front of the store was decorated. He introduced the system of dealing strictly for cash. The growth of the concern was steady but slow. As soon as the first store got on its feet others were established. The first "A. & P." store in Atlanta was opened at 75 Whitehall street, 40 years ago.

Mr. Hartford's reason for naming his concern "The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company" was due to the fact that about the time he started railway construction linking the Atlantic with the Pacific had just been put through.

Mr. Hartford had a horror of publicity. Although for years one of the great millionaires of the country, his life was passed almost in seclusion. Few employees of the company ever saw him. As the stores piled up millions for him he acquired all over the world tea and coffee plantations, salmon fisheries, canning plants, fruit orchards, sugar plantations—a whole network of allied industries.

Wall street and the financial world never knew him. He had vast amounts of cash from his own business and did not need to borrow money. Indeed it is only in the last few years that the financial world has known the tremendous business done by "A. & P."

Then Wall street began to look around to see how it could get into this money-making affair. Even Henry Ford had been obliged to finance himself by sales of stock. But Wall street soon found the "A. & P." was a closed corporation. Mr. Hartford owned all the stock and he was in no mood to let any get away from him.

When John Huntington Hartford

died eight years ago, he left all his "A. & P." stock holdings to his family. Just six persons now own the corporation which makes millions each year.

John A. Hartford, 45, of New York, his son, is now principal stockholder. The father provided in his will that the stock should not pass out of the family.

There is an issue of preferred stock, having no voting power, which is held chiefly by employees of the company. Even the preferred stock is not listed on any stock exchange.

For about a dozen years the "A. & P." stores sold nothing but tea and coffee. Mr. Hartford was an ingenious salesman as well as a good financier and for years the "A. & P." stores had a long list of premium schemes to stimulate buying. It was the first store to put out a premium system. This was kept up for years until finally the business grew too big to continue premiums and prizes.

Pioneer Chain Store.

For years "A. & P." stores, although the pioneers in the chain store business, were little known in the country at large. Mr. Hartford refused to go into debt to start new stores, and not until enough profits were in hand to finance the deal did he start a new store. For this reason few people realize that "A. & P." stores were started before the civil war.

Each "A. & P." store today is an exact copy, as far as outward appearance is concerned, of the first New York store started by Mr. Hartford. Even the exact shade of his first red paint has been handed down.

Incidentally, Mr. Hartford said once that he had received more criticism about glaring red paint used for the front of his stores than anything else, and this made him only more determined to stick to the red paint.

NUXATED

It is the organic iron in your blood that takes on oxygen from your lungs. This oxygenated organic iron unites with your digested food as it is absorbed into your blood, like fire unites with coal or wood, and by so doing it creates tremendous power and energy. Without sufficient organic iron in your blood your food merely passes through your body without doing you any good.

Organic iron, like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, may be had from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron." In tablet form only. Millions of people are using Nuxated iron with great benefit, their experience proving that it increases the strength and endurance of weak nervous run-down people, in many cases, in two weeks' time.

If you want that virile force, that flaming and strength so necessary to great success in practically every undertaking in life, you owe it to your self to commence taking Nuxated Iron today.

KEY WILL OPPOSE SIMS FOR MAYOR

Former Mayor Key, who retired two years ago from the mayor's office after an unsuccessful race for congress, formally became a candidate Saturday afternoon for another term as mayor in opposition to Mayor Walter A. Sims. The incumbent was elected to the office two years ago by one of the largest majorities in the history of the city.

The police issue, the principal one in the last mayoralty campaign, is to be revived by Mr. Key, he made it plain in a statement Saturday night, in which he referred particularly to this department as one which the present administration has tried "to disorganize."

He espoused the cause of the schools, declaring for "adequate maintenance and equipment." He also advocated an extensive program of street widening and improvement.

In closing his statement, he intimated that he would charge that the present administration is unduly sensitive to the wishes of outside interests, asserting that "the city should be run from the city hall."

He said he would elaborate on that subject during his campaign.

Friends Pay Fee.

Mr. Key's announcement was made after a group of his friends, including Claude R. Barnwell, former police commissioner, Frank Brotherton and Ben Fudgett, had paid to W. J. Laney, secretary of the city democratic executive committee, the $300 fee required of a mayoralty candidate to qualify for a place on the ballot in the primary September 24. Mayor Sims paid his fee within the week after the books opened last month.

The former mayor had given what was accepted as an outline of his platform in a talk to a group of more than 60 supporters at the Wincoff hotel last week. He had emphasized his support of the present public school program and had suggested the need for reorganization of the entire municipal government in order to eliminate needless employees and increase efficiency. He had declared himself against "unnecessary" tax increases but had refused to make a flat-footed declaration against increases. He had declared himself to be fair to all the interests in the city but partial toward none.

Entrance Expected.

Mr. Key had been considered a probable candidate for mayor ever since his defeat for congress two years ago but had consistently declared that he was unwilling to make the personal sacrifices that a campaign would exact. A delegation of local citizens had urged him to enter the race several months ago and he had told them that he would run "if the people demanded it."

Mr. Barnwell, one of the three who paid the fee Saturday, said the money had been contributed by a number of friends of the former mayor.

Mayor Sims, who has been an active candidate for reelection for several weeks, declined to comment on the formal entrance of a rival candidate, declaring that he will make his race on the record he has made during the year and seven months he has served as mayor, and in order to have the opportunity to carry into effect all the measures he promised in his first successful race for the office.

To Open Headquarters.

Mr. Barnwell, one of the men who arranged the meeting at the Wincoff hotel and who presented the entrance fee to Mr. Laney, stated that headquarters would be opened probably shortly before the close of the entrance books for candidates on August 24, and that a series of meetings would be held for Mr. Key, at which the candidate would speak in every community in the city.

Mr. Key said Saturday afternoon that he probably would not begin his active campaign until "after the end of the present session of the general assembly," which is about the same time as the close of the entrance books for candidates for mayor.

Members of the group paying Mr. Key's entrance fee stated that a methodical and aggressive campaign would be carried into every ward and precinct in Atlanta and that a city-wide campaign organization would be perfected during the next four months. Mayor Sims' plans for the campaign have not been announced.

Key's Announcement.

Mr. Key's statement Saturday night was as follows:

It is a little too early to open up a vigorous campaign, but I expect to take two or three weeks to take the stump and speak in every ward.

It takes big business and little business to make a prosperous city. It takes all classes of people, of all races and all creeds, to make a progressive city. All kinds of business, big and little, must get a square deal, must be treated fairly, if Atlanta or any other city is to go forward. And all classes of people must get a square deal, must be happy, if the city is to make the progress to which it is entitled.

The people's happiness and the progress of the city are paramount, and any person or set of persons, or any conditions that are allowed to exist, that obstruct such progress and prevent such happiness, constitute an enemy of the city.

Stress Schools and Police.

As the campaign develops, I expect to discuss the schools, insisting upon adequate maintenance and adequate equipment. I shall take up the efforts that have been made to disorganize the various departments of the city government, particularly the police department.

One of the important matters involved in this campaign is a comprehensive program of street widening and extension, along with the construction of viaducts over the railroad tracks at Pryor street and Central avenue.

Taxation and the burdens now being borne by the people will be another vital subject of discussion. Our water rates are excessive and I do not think they should be unduly criticized at this time, for the present high rate was imposed to meet the emergency. However, the emergency should be met and disposed of this year, and the water rate then should be reduced.

The legitimate revenue of the city should support the city government without excessive tax assessments, excessive water rates or excessive burdens on any class of citizens.

I shall discuss in some detail the necessity for honesty, efficiency and economy in the administration of the city government. The city should be run from the city hall. This subject I shall elaborate in speeches during the campaign.

Gordon Has Not Qualified.

Alderman R. A. Gordon, who was mayor pro tem last year, had announced his intention of entering the mayoralty race at the same time that Mayor Sims made his formal announcement, but Saturday had not qualified as a candidate for the primary.

Only one race other than that for mayor had developed officially Saturday. That was in the sixth ward, where both Councilman Harry York and Ed F. Bond had paid their $75 entrance fees.

Councilman J. A. Beall, in the second, third, fifth and seventh wards, but none of the prospective candidates had paid entrance fees Saturday.

W. R. (Uncle Bill) Johnson, for several terms councilman from the eleventh ward, announced his candidacy for reelection Saturday night. No opposition has developed. He was unopposed two years ago.

STEREOTYPERS CLOSE ATLANTA CONVENTION

Closing its 23d annual convention with a short session Saturday morning, the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers union adjourned at noon after a six-day meeting, pronounced one of the most successful in the annals of the organization.

The feature of the last day's program was a report of the "thank committee," which expressed appreciation of the visiting delegates for the reception accorded them during their stay in the city.

Members of the committee on arrangements, the executive committee and the local women's auxiliary were presented with handsome gifts for their work of arranging and managing the convention. Mrs. W. I. Colway, head of the Atlanta women's auxiliary, was presented a silver tea set.

Praise for Stanton.

In an address before the convention Saturday morning, J. Fremont Frey, representing the Indianapolis Electrotypers union, No. 30, who was one of the outstanding figures of the convention, paid tribute to Frank L. Stanton, originator of the "Just From Georgia" column of The Constitution. Mr. Frey, who is director of the Indianapolis Glee club and a nationally famous musician, has written music for several of Mr. Stanton's poems. Mr. Frey also is an authority on arbitration matters and his address on conciliation and arbitration was one of the features of the Saturday meeting.

The entertainment program of the week ended Friday night with a theater party, which was followed by a smoker for the men and a reception for the ladies, both held at the Ansley hotel.

Mrs. James J. Frey, wife of the international president, was presented with a silver loving cup by ladies of the auxiliary.

Milwaukee will be the scene of next year's meeting, while Los Angeles was chosen for 1926. About 350 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada attended the meeting.

MRS. E. WILLIAMS, FORMER ATLANTAN, DIES SATURDAY

Mrs. Elizabeth Overby Williams, former Atlanta woman, died Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. S. Overby, in Beaufort, S. C. The funeral will be held in Beaufort, and the burial will be in the Georgia state cemetery, a cousin of Mrs. Williams, left for that city Saturday to attend.

Mrs. Williams, who was well known in Atlanta, was the widow of Colonel Charles W. Williams. She was a daughter of Judge Overby, a prominent Georgia lawyer, and a partner in the law firm of Overby, Blackley & Gordon.

In addition to her mother, she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Robert Winship, of Atlanta; a son, Colonel R. P. Williams, of the marine corps, and two daughters, Mrs. Mettler, wife of Colonel Mettler, of the West Point Military academy; Mrs. Arthur Ford, wife of a United States naval officer.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR E. H. REYNOLDS HELD ON SATURDAY

Final tribute was paid Edward H. Reynolds, former assistant cashier of the Mitchell street branch of the Citizens and Southern bank, who died Friday, in funeral services held at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the residence of his brother, Welborn Reynolds, of Marietta. Rev. J. H. Paddon and Rev. R. C. Clecklere conducted services. Interment was in Marietta cemetery with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

Funeral of J. N. Bell, Killed in Auto Crash, Will Be Held Monday

Funeral services for Jasper N. Bell, former Atlantan, who was killed Friday in an automobile accident near Demopolis, Ala., as he was on his way from his home in Los Angeles to visit relatives here, will be held at 11 o'clock Monday morning from the residence of his sister, Mrs. Frank M. Stewart, Cherokee street, and Habersham road. Interment will be in Oakland with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

In addition to his sister, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. W. S. Bell; two children, Martha and Jasper N. Bell, Jr., and a brother, W. Scott Bell, of Boston, Mass.

LAST SERVICES TODAY FOR MRS. H. M. WALKER

Last rites for Mrs. Burdine Belle Walker, wife of H. M. Walker, Atlanta insurance man, who died Saturday morning at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Burdine, 77 Adams avenue, will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon from the residence, with Rev. A. M. Pierce officiating. Interment will be in West View, with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

Mrs. Walker, who was 22 years old, was a native Atlantan. She attended Girls' High school, and was a graduate of the Elizabeth Mather College for Young Women. She was an active member of the Druid Hills Methodist church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis and Mrs. H. I. W. E. L. and Robert Baugh.

PIONEER FLORIDIAN DIES AT AGE OF 87

Sebring, Fla., July 26.—S. J. Letson, pioneer Floridian, died late yesterday at a local hospital at the age of 87. He was born near Jackson, Ga., in 1837, and was prominently connected with the history of Florida. Mr. Letson was personally acquainted during his early years with soldiers who fought in the revolutionary war, and himself was a soldier during the civil war. Burial will be at Winter Garden, Fla.

GEORGIA, LOUISIANA CARRY OFF HONORS

Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 26.—Louisiana and Georgia today carried off the honors in the state and conference pageants held here under the auspices of the Sunday school leadership schools of the Methodist Episcopal church, south. The judge declared the award a tie, after a series of fifteen-minute pageants exemplifying the message of the religious movement had been given.

POLICE SEEKING NEGRO WHO USED KNIFE IN FIGHT

Police are searching for a negro who is said to have stabbed Lamar Brock, 18, of 60 East Cain street, and attempted to knife C. J. Adiehl, of 9 Chapel street, when Brock tried to stop an argument between Adiehl and the negro early Saturday morning.

Both Brock and Adiehl were arrested on charges of being drunk and disorderly, and were taken to police station after a deep wound in the former's side had been dressed at Grady hospital.

Adiehl told officers that the negro stopped him at Chapel and Mangum streets to sell him some liquor, an argument ensuing, and that Brock was stabbed when he attempted to separate the men.

MRS. ALICE J. VENABLE LAID TO REST MONDAY

Early Georgia History Links Two Noted Families

Editor's Note:—One of the most interesting sidelights on early Georgia history, particularly with reference to the relation of the democratic presidential nominee, John W. Davis, to the Davis and Lamar families of Georgia, is related in the following communication from C. B. Lamar, member of the noted Lamar family of the south.

Mr. Lamar resides in Montgomery, Ala., and valuable documents, letters and other information in his possession furnish a veritable storehouse of information of early days in Georgia, of the bits of history dear to hearts of southerners, and of the many Lamars who have achieved fame in various public capacities.

BY C. B. LAMAR.

I tracing available lines I am unable to state the exact relationship between Honorable John W. Davis, the democratic nominee for the presidency, and Cassaway Davis, likewise from West Virginia, who so fully represented that state in the United States senate some years ago, though data in my possession show that both belonged to the same family.

There was another Cassaway Davis, closely related to both, who was born in Columbia county, Georgia, before the Revolutionary war.

Records at Appling, the county seat, show that in 1799, on October 18, he was appointed administrator of the estate of his father, Clementius Davis, who was a notable man in his day, being the son of one of the earliest settlers, and also bearing the name of Clementius Davis. The name of the late name, Mary Ann Lamar, as appears in the will of her father, Thomas Lamar, a son of Thomas Lamar, the immigrant, was naturalized in the province of Maryland under Lord Baltimore on November 17, 1663, "a subject of the crown of France." (See Maryland Archives.)

Clementius Davis, Jr., as shown by Maryland records, sold his lands, as well as those inherited from his father by his wife, in the latter part of 1795, and in company with his wife and his brothers-in-law, Thomas Lamar, Robert Lamar and John Lamar, settled on lands formerly occupied by the pecky West-Over or Savannah Indians, immediately across the Savannah river from Augusta, Ga. The exact location of these lands is shown by records in the office of the secretary of state at Columbia, S. C., and much of it is still in the possession of the descendants of his brother-in-law, Robert Lamar.

Has Indian Titles.

I am informed by one of these descendants, Dr. Abner Whately Lamar, distinguished Baptist divine, who is well known on the chautauqua platform, that some of this land was held by the Lamars under Indian titles, which seems more than probable as they arrived before the Indians were expelled.

Records at Edgefield, S. C., show that Dr. Lamar sold much of this valuable property which he had inherited from his ancestors and he must have been familiar with the original papers which passed through his hands.

At a very early date, not definitely determined, Clementius Davis, Sr., crossed over into the province of Georgia, and took up his permanent abode in that part of Saint Paul's parish which, after the Revolutionary war, became first Richmond and then Columbia county. Here in 1787 his son, Clementius, Jr., had a grant of 850 acres which is described in Columbia county records, as is another grant of 750 acres made to him in the same year. (See plat book "A," page 230 and "B," page 14.) Another son of Clementius, Sr., and brother of Clementius, Jr., was Blanford Davis, whose wife, Eleanor, was appointed his administrator on July 4, 1808. He has not been mentioned in any family charts and probably left no descendants, though my notes are silent as to this.

The United States census reports of 1820 mentions, as citizens of Columbia county at that date, Abraham, Nathaniel and Reuben Davis, who may or may not have been of this family. Blanford Davis is deserving of a permanent place in the annals of the county because, if for no other reason, he was the bearer of several historic letters which passed between South Carolina and Georgia Lamars, and the relatives whom they had left.

Firm, Plump, Fresh!

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth.

S. S. S., since 1836, has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—rekindled vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby, ill nourished flesh fade away before flesh that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them. It contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

behind in Maryland, in his perilous journey during the Revolutionary war through a country occupied by a heartless foe, whose chief amusement was to "draw and quarter" such patriots as they could capture within their lines.

Bare Historic Letter.

One such letter, the original of which is before me, bears date of November 15, 1782, and is addressed to a brother-in-law of Mary Ann Davis, nee Lamar—Joseph Wilson in Montgomery county, Maryland, for favor of Mr. Blanford Davis. This letter is signed by "Thomas Lamar, son of Robert," who is well known in Revolutionary war records of South Carolina as "Thomas Lamar, of Horse Creek."

His broad Manorial possessions once stretched in every direction around what is now Airville, the old ancestral home on Horse Creek, whose waters now speed spindles and looms of many cotton mills. He was granted a commission for valiant service rendered during the Siege of Augusta, when the British forces were finally expelled and he collected from the American government large claims for damages done to his property by the American forces encamped there, and for supplies furnished to the army.

This Thomas Lamar was the father of Ann Lamar, who became the wife of Governor John Milledge, who is called the founder of the University of Georgia. She was the daughter of the will of her distinguished husband, with her own father acting as her attorney, in fact, in transferring the property to the state. This "Thomas Lamar, the son of Robert," was the grandfather of Clementius Davis, Sr., who was killed in battle during the Civil war and whose sacred dust rests in the city cemetery of Augusta.

Still another Clementius Davis is mentioned in the United States census report of 1820 as living in Columbia county. It is stated that his family consisted of one male (himself) between the age of 16 and 26, and one female between the age of 26 and 45. This indicates that he was unmarried, with his mother living with him, or possibly that he was a widower, whose mother-in-law made her home in his house. We have found no trace of his descendants, if he had them. He had 13 slaves.

Clementius Davis, Jr., had a son, Cassaway Davis, whose name has been perpetuated through all his line. Cassaway Davis had a daughter whom he called Mary Ann after his own grandmother, Mary Ann Lamar. She married her cousin, Henry Graybill Lamar, of Macon, Ga., who was judge of the superior court, and later a United States senator from Georgia, and became the mother and the grandmother of many notables. She had a first cousin, Louise Lamar Hill, who was also a granddaughter of Clementius Davis, Jr., and who also married a Lamar—Henry Graybill Lamar's younger brother, John A. Davis by the name of Cassaway, in Columbia county, is mentioned in the census report of 1820. On his place were "one white male, two white females, and 12 slaves."

Inaccurate Report.

In several historical and biographical works I have met with the statement that the wife of Judge Henry G. Lamar was the first cousin of President Jefferson Davis of the Confederacy, but this is inaccurate, for Mrs. Davis in her "Life and Letters of Jefferson Davis" says that her father, Samuel Davis, was the only child, and hence there could have been no first cousin in the case. It is certain, however, that the two Davis families grew up very near to each other, in the same county, and that from the earliest times there has been an uninterrupted recognition between them of the relation of consanguinity. It will be sufficient to give but one instance, which is as thrilling as it is spectacular.

A short time ago I had occasion to visit the town of Fort Valley, Ga., in Houston county recently made the county seat of Peach county, named for numerous well-kept orchards, and its far-famed Elbertas. Almost every man past middle life whom I met there wanted to know whether I was in any way related to the Lamars in that immediate vicinity, to whom Miss Winnie Davis, the "Daughter of the Confederacy," once paid a visit, which is still remembered as the cause of one of the greatest thrills ever experienced by that splendid people.

One of these Lamars did me the honor to call at my hotel and urged me to visit his family before leaving the county. I did so, and had the great pleasure of spending a night, and the better part of two days in the hospitable home of the family, at Powersville, on the Central of Georgia road, just above Fort Valley. The present day householders are grandchildren of John Davis Lamar, whose father, Philip Lamar, Sr., was a brother of "Thomas Lamar, of Horse Creek," and the great-grandfather of Justice Joseph R. Lamar, of the U. S. supreme court. This John Davis Lamar was a brother of Dr. James S. Lamar, of Augusta, and their mother was unquestionably a daughter of Clementius Davis, Sr., and his wife, Mary Ann Lamar. That is to say, the parents of John Davis Lamar were first cousins.

Famous Visit Related.

This long to be remembered visit of Miss Davis' was made about 1886, at the time she was on her way to Macon, Ga., in response to an invitation which the people of the state had extended to her father and mother and herself to attend the state fair as guests of honor. The hearts of all the people were palpitating with expectation of her arrival. She and her father had recently made a similar visit to Montgomery, Ala., where she had been feted and honored with the homage of the old south, at the "Cradle of Confederacy," now empty of its great hope. She recently had been called for the first time "the daughter of the Confederacy" by General John B. Gordon, then governor of Georgia, as he presented her to a cheering multitude at Atlanta, but she was really in Macon, the little whole south, whose ideals she embodied and glorified.

Her journey through the south was a triumphal procession. Her immense throngs had gathered from all parts of Alabama to pay tribute through her to the cause which had been loved and lost, as a "rebel yell," carrying as much pathos as it had once inspired terror, blended with the songs of the southern women.

Stirring Scenes.

Leaving such stirring scenes, and hastening on to Macon where similar demonstrations awaited her, her private car was crowded with admirers, and she spent several delightful hours with her Lamar relatives, giving and receiving those tender tokens of affection which sanctify the family life, while softening the glare of the public gaze, and giving their highest meaning to the lofty sentiments of patriotism. Mrs. S. M. Bassett, an eye witness of the scene, gave me a description of the arrival of Miss Davis at the Lamar mansion, which crowns a hamlet overlooking the modest hamlet clustering about the railroad station at Powersville, and which even at the present day lures the traveler by its spacious halls, surrounded by ample grounds and shady groves. Alighting at the house and seeing Mrs. Valinda Lamar Warren, the oldest daughter of the home, standing in the threshold to receive her, she uttered her exclamation, "Oh, it is too good to be here. This is my own dear cousin—bone of my bone and flesh of my very flesh."

I am under the impression that outside her own immediate family, these Lamars were her nearest relatives then living, and while she had not been in personal contact with them before, the two families had been especially intimate in former times, of many sacred memories.

Evidence of Relation.

On the principles of comparative philology the frequency of the names "Gasaway" among the Lamars would be considered ample evidence of a common origin. The characteristic spelling among the Lamars has persisted in all branches of the family and reaches back beyond their first association with the Lamars, while the name is unknown among the Lamars until after their first intermarriage with the Davis family, a short time prior to 1747, since when it has been of very frequent occurrence, the sibilant element being always expressed by a "z" instead of the double "s" which is employed by the Davises with the same frequency.

The two family trees, placed side by side, indicates that for many generations there has been going on between them a good-natured dispute over this name, in the form of a spelling-bee, each answering the other by naming a new baby. As the Lamars are far more prolific, they have led the best of the argument.

Their attitude resembles that of the Georgia "Cracker," who took umbrage at the fact that a neighbor had presumed to give to a certain word a pronunciation which was different from his own. Concealing his feeling, he proceeded to frame a remark in which he used again the same word, with the same pronunciation. The neighbor now with manifest resentment employed the word again and emphasized with great stress the new pronunciation which he had adopted, whereupon the "Cracker" flew into a great rage and exclaimed: "Now who air you reflectin' on? I ain't!"

claimin' to be no great scriptorian, is I ain't no 'rhythmeticker, nor neither yet no grammarist. But I want you and every other son-of-a-gun to understand that when it comes to penmanship I am that."

Whenever it comes to the "Gasaways" the Lamars are certainly there with the goods. They are found in great abundance in every clime and in every vocation into which Lamars have entered. The character and influence of the men bearing the name have been such as to reflect great honor upon it that a change of entireties would be impossible. Whether it is correctly or incorrectly spelled, all who bear it may adopt as their proud motto: "We stand in the shadow of a great name."

TILE DEPARTMENT MOVES OFFICES

Owing to the rapid expansion of the department which handles its famous Spanish, old English and quarry tile for roofs and floors, and the necessity for more closely connecting the sales office of this department with the industrial department, The B. Mifflin Hood company is moving this office to Daisy P. O., Tennessee, but the company's main sales office remains in Atlanta.

All business of the floor and roofing tile department will hereafter be handled direct from the plant at Daisy, Tenn., which will effect a greater efficiency both in manufacturing to meet certain specifications and more dispatch in filling and shipping the products. The distinguished Hood tile products are in strongest favor among the highest class architects throughout America and this move will insure improved service to architects and contractors.

Several of the chief executives of this department will move to Daisy in order to continue the departmental work they have already developed to a high scale of proficiency. They are: G. K. Fackler, secretary, general manager floor and roofing tile department; G. J. Weaver, assistant manager floor tile department, and W. A. Peck, assistant manager roof tile department.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE CROPS ON INCREASE

Heavier arrivals and lower values marked the movement of 22 lines of fruits and vegetables at nearly all the large city markets during the week ending July 12, it is shown in the weekly market review issued by T. C. Curry, of the bureau of agricultural economics.

With potato shipments showing a 50 per cent increase, watermelons 60 per cent and the peach movement three times greater than the week before, the total volume of principal fruits and vegetables shipped during the period July 6 to 12 increased sharply to 25,420 cars, Mr. Curry stated. Jobbing prices had to be cut in nearly all the large city markets in order to move the accumulating supplies.

Georgia watermelons, compared with city wholesale prices a year ago, are now about one-third to one-half less, ranging $200 to $375 per carload of 22 to 30-pound melons. Sharp declines occurred as the week's shipments from all states increased by 3,000 cars to a total of 7,000. The movement was more than twice as heavy as during a corresponding period last season, the report said. Georgia's melon crop probably will exceed 14,000 carloads this year, as against 8,000 cars in 1923.

Peach prices declined until a low point of 50 cents a crate and bushel baskets was reached for Georgia Cermes in Cincinnati. Hileys lost as much as $1.50 to $2.25 per crate, with the prevailing range $1.75 to $2.75 and top of $3 in New York. Arrivals of all peaches in that city were seven times as heavy as the week before. The week's total movement was over 3,000 cars. Georgia's shipments trebled, all but 131 of the 3,000 cars being shipped from this state.

The peach crop probably will be 3,000,000 bushels greater than last year, according to July 1 indications, the report sets forth. Georgia alone will have 2,000,000 more, and North Carolina's crop may reach 2,000,000 bushels after an almost negligible quantity in 1923, it is stated.

From indications on July 1, the 1924 potato crop is estimated at 40,000,000 bushels below the 1923 production, and only 10,000,000 bushels above the light crop of 1921. Shipments for the week were 2,200 cars heavier, with Virginia and Kansas the leading sources of supply. Virginia gained 1,400 cars and Kansas shipped nearly five times as many as the previous week.

BREEDING OF SHEEP TO BE DISCUSSED HERE

Dr. Tage U. Ellinger, widely-known expert of the Armour research bureau, has accepted an invitation to speak at a luncheon of the forum of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at 12:30 o'clock August 6. He stops in Atlanta en route to deliver an address before the University of Florida.

Dr. Ellinger will deal particularly with the future of sheep-raising in cut-over forest lands in Georgia. At the present time it is estimated that there are of yellow pine lands which have been saw-milled, on which there is a wonderful growth of native grass, from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres peculiarly adapted to sheep-growing and capable of feeding from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 sheep.

Lambs at four months old are selling in markets at from $10 to $14 per head, and Georgia has at present idle land enough to grow two million lambs a year, it is pointed out. It has been estimated that, acre for acre, cut-over pine lands of Georgia have something like double the yield of grass in pounds to that of the foremost grazing lands of Idaho and Wyoming, with a better climate, more abundant water and lower freight rates to markets.

Dr. Ellinger is a Dane, having come to America fifteen years ago. He has degrees from two foremost American colleges. His father is president of the National College of Agriculture of Denmark and his father's sister is a member of the Danish cabinet, being the first woman to enter the cabinet of Denmark.

ARCADE MERCHANTS GUESTS AT BARBECUE

Invitations were issued during the past week to tenants of the Arcade building to be the guests of the Arcade Cooperative association at a barbecue and outing at Lakewood park Wednesday afternoon and night, July 30.

Tenants of the building are planning to close their business at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of July 30, when they will board specially chartered cars near the Broad street entrance to the building, which will make a trip around the principal streets of the city before proceeding to Lakewood park.

C. E. Harrison, chairman of the entertainment committee, will stage a number of interesting stunts at Lakewood park for the entertainment of the guests, after which a barbecue, with all the trimmings, will be spread in one of the big buildings.

Following this will be a motorboat ride around the lake, a visit to the attractions on the "midway," and a motion picture. The outing will be concluded with dancing and skating.

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible. Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with your bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.—(adv.)

Shattuck Pleads for Life

AMERICAN SHRINKS FROM VENGEANCE DECREED

Now Doomed to Guillotine

Paris, July 26.—For two determined years Albert R. Shattuck, New York millionaire, pursued from one land to another the French apache, Alphonse Mourey, intent that justice get its due for the crime Mourey had committed in imprisoning the Shattuck family and robbing them of jewels valued at $75,000.

Always it was justice—or vengeance, by a less polite term—that Shattuck sought as he spent thousands of dollars in his relentless man-hunt.

Then he found his man. Mourey, the trusted butler whose innocent, perfectly correct uniform hid the soul of a bandit, was captured in a Paris suburb, found guilty of half dozen crimes and sentenced to the guillotine.

At the end of his trial, his vow for vengeance certain of fulfillment, Shattuck has found that the quest for justice led only to pity. He wrote President Doumergue, of France today, pleading that the apache's life be spared.

Shattuck could not carry through. His quarry in his hands, mercy triumphed over lust for revenge and as a result of the millionaire's letter, commutation of Mourey's death sentence is expected to follow.

Mourey, with other servants acting as accomplices, turned upon their employer in 1922, forced him and Mrs. Shattuck into a wine vault at the point of pistols and knives, locked them behind the air-tight doors and proceeded to strip their Washington Square mansion of all its valuables.

Unloosening the hinges of the doors with a broken pen-knife and escaping just when suffocation threatened to overcome him, Shattuck began his hunt for Mourey—to the Indies, Africa and Europe. French gendarmes finally captured the apache in a villa outside Paris, after a battle in which Mourey killed two of the police. The trial ended this time. Mourey was convicted and sentenced to the guillotine.

Tights and Spangles Lose

SAWDUST RING SHORT OF CIRCUS RIDERS

Their Lure for Pretty Girls

New York, July 26.—What with the lure of politics, temptation of the movies and the generally emancipated condition in which shapely and beautiful young women now find themselves a time-honored and lucrative profession which once attracted pretty damsels with a taste for adventure is going begging for recruits.

Time was when any lassie in her later teens or early twenties might have leaped at a chance to become the equestrienne queen of a three-ringed circus as quickly as her contemporary little brother would have accepted a job as snare drummer in a minstrel band. The silken tights and glittering spangles of the lady bareback rider with a glorious, riotous background of tan bark, circus bands and clowns was sufficient lure to provide the arenas of a hundred traveling shows of more or less magnitude with a host of would-be riders from which to select likely horsewomen.

All that has changed and more. The odoriferous tan bark itself, reputed to tickle the nostrils of habitual breathers that they never long to be content without its pungent delights has lost its pulling power with the children of the circus themselves and they are slipping away from under the big top at the beck of other pursuits.

Circus people say there never has been such a shortage of real riders as exists now.

Joe Hodgins, member of a famous equestrian family and leader of his own troupe of riders in the Luna Park circus at Coney Island, says that circus riders are scarce and getting scarcer.

"For three weeks," Hodgins said, "I have been short a woman rider in my act, and telegrams all over the country have failed to locate one."

"Every woman broken to the ring is engaged. There is nothing to do but to start at the beginning and teach one."

What Hodgins wants to know is whether or not there are any healthy, shapely young women in the United States who would be willing to try a profession that offers chances for adventure and good pay.

"Here is an opportunity," the showman said, "for an attractive young girl, anywhere from 18 to 25 years of age, with weight about 115 or 120 pounds. She simply has to bring a healthy, pliable body, her grace and her womanliness."

"If she succeeds as a rider, and she will if she tries, she will find a profession that not only gets a reward of

FIRE AT LYNCHBURG

DOES $250,000 DAMAGE

Lynchburg, Va., July 26.—A warehouse and three store buildings were destroyed and several other business establishments were damaged this afternoon by fire which started from a photographer's flashlight and caused damage estimated at about $250,000 before it was brought under control, three hours later.

The flames started in the Booker T. Washington building, a three-story position was being held and after gutting that structure and destroying its contents, valued at more than $100,000, consumed the adjoining buildings occupied by the Perrow-Evans Hardware company, the Woody-Evans company, grain and provisions, and the Navy Sales company.

Old buildings nearby were badly damaged.

Two firemen were slightly injured in the collapse of a ceiling in the Woody-Evans building.

The three stores which suffered loss were the Perrow-Evans Hardware company, which had stock on hand estimated at $100,000 and which had declared a dividend to stockholders only a few hours before the fire broke out, the Army and Navy sales company and the Woody-Evans company.

C. R. North and company, wholesale grocers, and heavy water damages to a $400,000 stock, and Anderson-Stone and company suffered water damage to their stock of groceries.

One hundred and fifty pounds of dynamite was removed from the hardware store just as the flames entered the building, but a carload of cartridges and shells could not be gotten out and were exploded by the fire. No one, however, was injured in the explosion.

Since President Doumergue of France is an ideal occupation for women, according to Mrs. Siegel C. Hargreaves, who has attained wonderful success with the honey-makers.

Georgia-Carolina Bridge To Link States

In the above pictures are shown two photographs of the Georgia-Carolina bridge, which engineers say will be completed by October 1. The bridge will connect Georgia and South Carolina at a point near Savannah, and will consummate plans of Georgians for many generations. The top picture shows one of the approaches of the bridge on the Georgia side. Below is shown one of the two drawbridges open to permit the passage of steamers. The bridge is being constructed at an approximate cost of $75,000, and is a sequel to the $1,000,000 highway between Savannah and Tybee, which was dedicated at Savannah last summer.

Savannah, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) Work on the Savannah-Carolina bridge over the Savannah river near Port Wentworth, the industrial suburb of Savannah, is nearing completion, construction of the bridge being now more than 90 per cent complete. Approaches will be pushed rapidly, and contracts for the causeways have already been let.

The bridge will be ready for opening by October 1, sooner than was at first expected. Carolina counties, affected, Chatham county, and state departments of both South Carolina and Georgia, with federal aid for both, have done the work, which is approximately $75,000 job.

The dream of nearly two hundred years and actual plans of a century are being realized in the finishing of this bridge that links the two great southeastern states.

TEN BODIES FOUND AFTER MINE BLAST

Gates, Pa., July 26.—The bodies of ten miners who met death last night when an explosion wrecked a section of the Gates mine of the H. C. Frick Coke company were brought to the surface shortly after dawn today. Seventy-five miners were at work when the blast came, and a check of the company list showed that 65 reached safety.

Irish Navy Loses Its First Fight With Water Foe

London, July 26.—The Irish republican navy has fought and lost its first engagement.

When the White Star liner Mantic anchored in Queenstown harbor on her way to New York, the republican navy went out on its flag ship, rowed by four captains, ascended the lowered gangway with other visitors to the ship and seized the ship and sailed.

DAWES WILL OPEN AT LINCOLN AUG. 29

Chicago, July 26.—Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, republican nominee for vice president, will open his national campaign with an address at Lincoln, Neb., August 29, according to an announcement made at republican headquarters today.

The exact cause of the explosion has not been determined. The efforts of the company and state mine officials so far have been directed toward rescuing the entombed men.

The explosion occurred about 7:30 o'clock last night and was local in character, affecting only a part of the mine in which the ten men were working. The mine is of the shaft type and the chamber in which the explosion occurred was located about two miles from the mine entrance. The force of the explosion wrecked the supports and brought down a wall of coal and dirt between the ten men and their only means of escape.

Although General Dawes, who has agreed to aid in the Maine campaign prior to the state election of September, probably will speak in that state before the 29th, the Maine trip will be considered part of the campaign and the Lincoln address the formal opening of General Dawes' national campaign. Mr. Sanders said.

Other portions of the mine escaped and the workmen quickly made their way to the surface. Efforts immediately were made to reach the entombed men and E. G. Girod, a state mine inspector, stationed at Massontown, three miles from here, who arrived on the scene early, took charge of the rescue work. Rescue parties of the Frick company were called and men equipped with modern apparatus were set at work effecting an entrance to the blocked mine.

The rescue crews worked in three shifts throughout the night and succeeded in reaching the chamber where the explosion occurred early this morning. They encountered numerous cave-ins which hampered their work.

After organizing a speakers' bureau, the committee's task will be not only to arrange for the speaking engagements of Senator La Follette and his running mate, Senator Wheeler, but to make selections from the list of persons who have volunteered to stump for the ticket.

Some will be called upon to address small neighborhood rallies, some ward or town meetings and others especially for the task of carrying the appeal to larger gatherings in cities and states where the ticket appears to have a fighting chance or better. It is not impossible that the senator orator will be given an opportunity to appeal for votes on the street corner.

The La Follette headquarters here has been at work for several days cataloging applications from men and women who are willing to take the stump for the senator, so that use can be made of their services later in the campaign.

The funds will be received from $500,000 trust funds created for each of the children under the will of their grandfather, the late Colonel Samuel P. Colt. Miss Barrymore said in her petition that she received no alimony from her former husband, and that he furnished nothing toward the children's support.

BANK FAILURES WEST OF MISSISSIPPI DROP

Washington, July 26.—With the number of bank failures dropping rapidly from month to month, the states west of the Mississippi river, where stringent credit conditions obtained last winter, high treasury officials expressed the belief today that the reported bumper wheat crop in many of these states had placed the financial institutions of those districts on their feet again.

LA FOLLETTE TO USE VOLUNTEER SPEAKERS

Washington, July 26.—An army of volunteer speakers will be called into service during the active campaigning season to plead the cause of the La Follette-Wheeler presidential ticket.

14 MEN INJURED IN MINE WASHAP

Uniontown, Pa., July 26.—Fourteen men were injured, seven seriously, in a fall of slate in the Lamont mine of the H. C. Frick Coke company, three miles north of here, tonight.

The seven seriously injured men were removed to the Uniontown hospital while the others were treated by physicians at the mine and latter moved to their homes.

The men had completed their day's work and were returning to the surface in a mine car when a portion of the walls and ceiling of the mine collapsed. The men were partially buried under the slate, dirt and coal, and were rescued by fellow workers.

The Lamont mine is in Fayette county, near the town of Uniontown, in which an explosion occurred last night that resulted in the death of ten miners. The Gates mine also is owned by the Frick company.

After organizing a speakers' bureau, the committee's task will be not only to arrange for the speaking engagements of Senator La Follette and his running mate, Senator Wheeler, but to make selections from the list of persons who have volunteered to stump for the ticket.

Some will be called upon to address small neighborhood rallies, some ward or town meetings and others especially for the task of carrying the appeal to larger gatherings in cities and states where the ticket appears to have a fighting chance or better. It is not impossible that the senator orator will be given an opportunity to appeal for votes on the street corner.

The funds will be received from $500,000 trust funds created for each of the children under the will of their grandfather, the late Colonel Samuel P. Colt. Miss Barrymore said in her petition that she received no alimony from her former husband, and that he furnished nothing toward the children's support.

Treasury records show that 342 banks were forced to close their doors between January 1 and July 1. These include 267 state and 75 national institutions, and while a few more have gone out of business since the records show that the failures in May were 30 per cent fewer than in April in states west of the Mississippi and 25 per cent less in June compared with May.

The agricultural credit corporation organized last spring has been able to reopen some 20 of the banks that failed and advises to the treasury that which will enable them to weather any new crises.

Most of the banks to which the corporation has extended aid are small institutions and require only a small amount of money to put them on a firm foundation, officials declared. They explained that the corporation, therefore, would be able to help many more banks than was originally expected.

The treasury's figures on bank failures showing what is believed to be a nearly correct list of all failures west of the Mississippi river included: Texas, national bank and seven state banks; Arkansas, three state banks; Missouri, eight state banks; Oklahoma, six national banks and 32 state banks; Louisiana, one state bank.

The Poor Carver. Every carver I have ever known has complained if the platter containing the roast is too small to hold the roast and the carved portions as well, if the article is carved lavishly covered with gravy, and lastly, if the carving knife is dull. All small items are certainly due to the person who is good enough to do the carving.

Bobbed Hair Provokes Riot

THOUSANDS OF EMBATTLED STUDENTS IN CLASH

In Schools of Mexico City

Mexico City, July 26.—Bobbed hair, already the source of nearly every other sociological disturbance, now enters the list as a subject for riotous action.

Mexico City schools have been suspended until Monday, thousands of embattled students are in an open clash and Yaqui Indian soldiers have been called out to maintain order—all because of the claim that bobbed hair is unwomanly and an evidence of advanced feminism that cannot be tolerated.

CANADIAN 'BUNCO GANG' IS NETTED BY ATLANTA MEN

Postal Inspectors Graham and Bert Donaldson Land Alleged International Crook Gang.

Montreal, July 26.—One of the most distinguished groups of international crooks ever gathered together outside of a big prison are in custody here, following a police round-up, engineering by the Montreal force and two United States postal workers.

Eleven men, alleged to be adept at most of the principal departments of crime, are held on charges of participating in an old-fashioned wire-tapping plot on a grandiose scale. They were apprehended largely through the work of U. S. Postal Inspectors H. N. Graham and Bert Donaldson, who are here representing the United States secret service.

"English Cripple" Lewis, alias Edward Long, is the most wanted man in the gang. He and George Wallace, another of the prisoners, are said to have secured $25,000 in a bunco game on H. L. Christie of Chicago.

Wanted in Many Cities. Donaldson and Graham recognized Lewis and others as men wanted in London, Paris and many cities of the United States.

Stationery bearing the letterhead of J. P. Morgan & Co. was found in the 11 were arrested. The "firm" had 8 fake telephones and two outside the downtown office building where connections. There were also several dummy telegraph instruments in the office and a blackboard to give the appearance of a brokerage office.

Lewis is also charged with bunking Simon Touch, of St. Augustine, Fla., for $50,000 in 1921, and in the same year is said to have taken J. E. Blumenthal, of Jacksonville, for $200,000 more.

Among other equipment of the office was a number of bundles, the size of packets of $100 and $1,000 bills. On top of each package was a good counterfeit of such a bill.

Blank Paper in Packages. These were used as bait for prospective suckers. Inside the packages the police found pieces of blank paper cut to the proper size.

Other captives, now being fingerprinted for the American authorities, include Abe Green, of Boston; William Newburn and "Frenchy" York, of Indianapolis; Harry Fore, of Boston.

KLAN CANDIDATE LEADS IN TEXAS

Anti-Klan Vote Distributed Among Six Other Candidates—Sheppard Leads for Senate.

Dallas, Texas, July 26.—Judge Felix Robertson, the Ku Klux Klan-endorsed democratic candidate for governor, held his early lead over his republican opponent when the returns from 149 of the 252 counties in the state had been tabulated by the Texas election bureau. He had 7,300 votes more than his nearest opponent, Lynch Davidson, T. W. Davidson, lieutenant governor, was third, with Mrs. Meriam Ferguson, the only woman candidate, a close fourth. T. W. Davidson and Mrs. Ferguson saw-sawed for third place all evening. As returns came in Robertson gradually was increasing his lead and Texas election bureau announced all indications were that he would be the high man in the gubernatorial race, with Lynch Davidson probably second. If the same standing was maintained by later returns these two would enter the run-off campaign.

Six of Robertson's opponents were openly anti-klan and two were "neutral."

Only two of the 149 counties had reported complete returns but the reports were so scattered as to be considered fairly representative.

The vote: Robertson, 28,333; Lynch Davidson, 21,164; T. W. Davidson, 18,036; Mrs. Meriam Ferguson, 17,425; Barton, 3,416; Burkett, 3,285; Collins, 3,292; Pope, 2,147; and Dixon, 837.

The election bureau's figures gave Senator Morris Sheppard an apparently safe lead over his two opponents for United States senator. Fewer precincts had reported for this office than for governor, but the vote was Sheppard, 34,671; Davis, 21,707, and Maddox, 5,459.

W. C. Edwards, of Denton, had a small margin over Barry Miller, of Dallas, for lieutenant governor and Justice Chilton was leading in the race for justice of the supreme court.

Definite Assurance That National Park Will Be Located in Southeast Given at Dinner.

COMMISSION TO SPEND WHOLE WEEK ON TOUR

Most Favorable Impression Made Upon Park Commission by Area Already Seen.

BY RALPH T. JONES. Gainesville, Ga., July 26.—Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, who heads the commission of experts surveying the proposed site for a great Appalachian national park at the converging point of Georgia, the Carolinas and Tennessee, tonight gave unstinted praise to the territory which has come under his observation, and stated definitely that a national park would be located in the south-east.

Secretary Work's address came as a climax to a series of entertainments given in honor of the commission by prominent Atlanta and Gainesville citizens at a banquet at White Sulphur Springs, near here. Congressman Thomas M. Bell, of the eighth Georgia congressional district, presided.

"Georgians have been enthusiastic in their reception of the park commission, and I cannot praise too highly what I have seen of the 6,000 square miles included in the proposed national park," Secretary Work said. "Of course, we have not seen it all; we shall take the greater part of the week going over the vast area—and our final recommendation will depend on later impressions, but at present the whole committee is favorably impressed."

Speakers at Banquet.

Other members of the commission and Colonel H. H. Dean, mayor of Gainesville; Paul Norcross, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution, addressed the banquet.

Governor Clifford Walker, with a group of distinguished Atlanta and Gainesville citizens, this afternoon greeted Secretary Work when he de-trained here with the commission of federal experts to inspect the proposed site for the new national park, to be located in the southern Appalachians.

Members of the commission, which was appointed by Secretary Work, have intimated that they desire as little as possible in the form of formal entertainment during the week they will spend in the mountain regions of north Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas. They are here, they said, strictly for the purpose of studying the terrain and other features of the land which, if the national park proposal is approved by congress, will become one of the greatest of the nation's playgrounds. It will be the duty of the commission to formulate a report and recommendations for submission to congress by Secretary Work, and they are determined to let nothing interfere with their efforts to see and enjoy the majestic beauty of the southern mountain country, the highlands of Dixie, at their best.

Party Guests at Dinner.

Secretary Work and party arrived at Gainesville at 3:28 o'clock this afternoon, coming from Washington. He spent the afternoon at the home of Congressman Thomas M. Bell, who accompanied the party from Washington and tonight at 6 o'clock the commission was entertained at an informal dinner and smoker. Sunday the visitors will be entertained at luncheon at the home of Congressman Bell at Mount Yonah, and from there

5 BRAZIL STATES ARE UNDER SIEGE

Revolt and Unrest Spreading, Buenos Aires Hears. Rio Harbor Ports Are Disarmed.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Buenos Aires, July 26.—While the Brazilian official statements continue to insist that, with the exception of Sao Paulo, the entire country is calm and supporting the constituted government, reports from various sources in Brazil reaching Argentina and Uruguay appear to contradict this.

These reports include one, considered here to be authentic, that the federal government has declared a state of siege in five more states owing to unrest. These states are given as Rio Grande do Sul, Mato Grosso, Santa Catharina, Sergipe and Bahia. Another says the federal garrison

VAN SWERINGEN RAILROAD MERGER IS ACCOMPLISHED

Welding of Four Big Systems in One Now Matter of Detail, Cleveland Paper Says.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 26.—The Sunday News Ledger tomorrow will say: "The Van Sweringen railroad merger is next door to an accomplished fact. It is, in fact, accomplished."

"Four systems—Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, including the Hocking Valley, Erie and Pere Marquette, operating over 11,000 miles of line and with total balance sheet footings of upward of one and a half billion dollars, will within a few weeks be brought under a unified control with Cleveland headquarters."

"Put into the picture also 'Cleveland's new $77,000,000 union station and terminal, for O. P. Van Sweringen says he expects to see the steel girders going up on the central section of the depot on the public square within a few weeks."

Who Van Sweringen Is. "Who is the O. P. Van Sweringen, who swings billion dollar railroad systems and builds $77,000,000 terminals?" "The whole country is asking the question. Here in Cleveland we take the question."

Tumulty Denies That He Caused "Insult" by Band

Secretary to Wilson Declares Accusation To Be Base Canard.

Washington, July 26.—In letters to Major John S. Cohen, national committee chairman from Georgia, and to Clark Howell, former committee chairman, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary of the late President Wilson, denied reports that he had caused the band at the recent democratic convention in Madison Square garden to play "Marching Through Georgia."

The incident occurred during an anti-klan demonstration, and the Georgia delegation felt that it had been singled out for a special affront. Rumors to the effect that Mr. Tumulty had been responsible for the occurrence were dispelled in the letters to the two Atlanta editors, who attended the convention.

In the course of his letter, Mr. Tumulty recalls that his father was saved by southerners during the civil war, and uses the incident to illustrate his deep regard for the south.

His letters are as follows: "Word has been brought to me that a story is being sedulously spread throughout Georgia that during the democratic convention in New York, while on the platform, I directed the band to play 'Marching Through Georgia.' Owing to the unpleasant memories that the playing of this tune must have recalled, I can readily understand the feeling of deep resentment the playing of this air must necessarily have caused among Georgians. 'For myself I can only characterize

French Vice Consul Names Rothier in Divorce Suit

CLAIMS WIFE'S DECREE OBTAINED BY FRAUD

New York, July 26.—Pierre Moracchini, French vice consul here, in a divorce suit begun today, named Leon Rothier, of the Metropolitan Opera company, as co-respondent. Moracchini asserted that an interlocutory decree, granted in 1919 to his wife, Mrs. Ada Moracchini, but not followed by a final decree, was gained through the "divorce mill" operated by Herbert F. Miller, later indicted by the West Chester county grand jury, and that no papers in the case were served upon him as a defendant.

HUGHES IS BLUNT IN NOTE TO PERSIA

Indignities Offered, Widow of Slain Vice Consul Speed Up Demand for American Protection.

Washington, July 26.—A blunt statement that the Washington government views with grave concern indignities suffered at Tehran by Mrs. Katherine G. Imbrie, widow of the American vice consul who was slain by a mob in that city, is to be presented to the Persian government.

The communication is expected to make it plain that the United States holds that Persia must take whatever steps are necessary to insure efficient cooperation on the part of its subordinate officials and police that adequate protection for all Americans may be assured.

Minister Kornfeldt at Tehran reported to the state department today that on last Tuesday a Persian youth grabbed the veil worn by Mrs. Imbrie and attempted to tear it from her. During the attack, he spat upon her. A native policeman was believed to have witnessed the affair from a distance, but did not interfere. Mrs.

$6,250,000 Crop Assured Tobacco Farmers of State

Weed Ranks Second Only to Cotton as Money-maker, Despite Short Growth of Industry Here

CROP HELPS TO END PERIOD OF DEFLATION

Success of Industry Largely Due to Atlanta Trust Company and A. B. & A. Railroad.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—In The Constitution of Sunday, July 20, a comprehensive crop condition story was carried, with the prediction that Georgia would produce 1,000,000 bales of cotton this year, and that production in other principal crops would show great improvement over the past four or five years.

During the past week, with exception of heavy rains in north-west Georgia, weather conditions have been favorable for the most part. Dry, sultry weather has greatly improved cotton prospects, while corn is sufficiently advanced to withstand dry weather damage. Peanut prospects in the commercial area are very satisfactory. Hay crops are late but making good growth, and the pea and bean crops have every indication of producing satisfactory crops.

Cotton improvement was noticeable, and the plant has a good color and in excellent growing condition. In the southern sections fruiting is heavy, with very little shedding reported. Boll weevil infestation is the lightest in many years, thanks to the efficient methods of combating the pest.

BY L. O. MOSLEY.

Georgia's 1924 tobacco crop, estimated at 25,000,000 pounds and conservatively valued at $6,250,000, is ready to be placed on the market. To thousands of Georgians this is an amazing statement, but true, nevertheless. This tremendous crop is being produced on 244,000 acres in the coastal plain, double the 1923 acreage and 7,000 acres greater than in any previous year.

No agricultural product has ever shown such an astounding increase, both in point of acreage and value, as tobacco has shown in its marvelous strides during the past five years.

In many counties it has supplanted cotton as the principal crop, and in many other counties it has shown tremendous increases, with the result that millions of pounds are in process of curing and many millions more already cured and in marketable shape, are ready for the annual influx of buyers. August 6 will mark the official opening of the market in this state and auction sales will be held daily through a short season in scores of south Georgia cities.

$6,000,000 for Georgia.

Within a fortnight more than six million perfectly good American dollars will have been brought into circulation in this state through marketing of tobacco crops, a product about which a majority of Georgia citizens know relatively nothing. The immense importance of the tobacco crop, its tremendous acreage and annual profits are confined to less than 30 south Georgia counties. Because of the restricted area of tobacco production in the state the value of the crop is speculative, more or less, except to those farmers who have found

DR. MARX INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Negro Boy Killed, Several Persons Hurt in Other Accidents on Atlanta Streets Saturday.

Dr. David Marx, of 363 St. Charles avenue, rabbi of the temple on South Pryor street and one of Atlanta's most prominent citizens, suffered slight cuts and bruises early Saturday night when knocked down by an automobile driven by Dr. Stewart R. Roberts, of 1820 Ponce de Leon avenue, as he was crossing St. Charles avenue almost directly in front of his home.

Dr. Roberts stopped immediately and took Dr. Marx to Wesley Memorial hospital, where his hurts, consisting of a small cut above his right eye and a laceration behind the left ear, were dressed.

Dr. Roberts said he was traveling at a slow rate of speed at the time, and that Dr. Marx evidently did not see the machine approaching. No arrest was made.

NEW GIFTS MARK 3D WEEK OPENING OF BEAUTY EVENT

Sanmere Shop to Supply Hats to Match Gorgeous Gowns of Martin Amorous, Jr.

Today The Constitution's "Miss Atlanta" tournament swings triumphantly into its third week and at the same time develops added interest by reason of announcement of an important gift to the lucky winner.

The latest in the long series of honors to be paid "Miss Atlanta" comes in the form of announcement from the Sanmere Hat Shop, in Keeler's store, that it will supply the city's fairest daughter with hats to match the elaborate gowns to be created by Martin Amorous, Jr., the south's best-known designer and style exponent.

"Atlanta's entrant in the recognized and foremost beauty event of North America," said the management of the Sanmere Hat Shop, "must go to Atlantic City gown like a queen. We have made many hats to match the most magnificent and exclusive gowns created by Mr. Amorous, and it will be a pleasure for us to cooperate with him in making 'Miss Atlanta's' hats the crowning touch of her elaborate wardrobe."

The management of the Sanmere shop added that no care or expense will be spared in making the hats of "Miss Atlanta" the very last word in the ultra-fashionable, and fit additions to the elaborate and costly gowns which Mr. Amorous will design to meet "Miss Atlanta's" individual requirements of coloring, figure and personality.

Amorous Plans Ahead.

Mr. Amorous is losing no time in preparing to rush forth a complete set of gowns for "Miss Atlanta," beginning actual work on the fabrics and colors chosen to meet her particular type of beauty immediately after her final selection.

Last week he selected two typical Atlanta figures—one blonde and the other brunette—and on this basis he has already begun a careful study of what is most likely to be the colors and fabrics to be used in designing "Miss Atlanta's" gowns.

"Every city has a typical figure," said Mr. Amorous Saturday, "and I have selected for preliminary study a blonde and a brunette that represent the prevailing types in Atlanta. Of course it is possible that the ultimate 'Miss Atlanta' may not be at all like these typical mannikins I have selected, but I believe I can almost visualize what 'Miss Atlanta' will look like—except for her coloring—and if I am lucky enough to guess correctly I will have accomplished much that would delay me if I had to begin at the beginning and actually study out the needs of the real 'Miss Atlanta'."

Mr. Amorous announced that he has just received in his exclusive shop at 545 Peachtree street a number of new and gorgeous fabrics, but he declined to state which of these would probably be used in "Miss Atlanta's" gowns.

"There's too much uncertainty just yet," he smilingly stated, "so I'd rather not go into detail about the colors and cloths I am considering. The only positive statement I am prepared to make at this time is that I promise 'Miss Atlanta' a wardrobe of which not only she, but I myself will heartily approve."

South Georgia Sawmill Owner Dead and Woman and Two Men Injured in Collision.

Madison, Ga., July 26.—W. M. Morris, 29, wealthy sawmill owner, of Buckhead, Ga., died late tonight of injuries sustained in a collision of his automobile and a car driven by Ed Harwood, of Madison, Ga., earlier in the night. Harwood and his daughter were injured.

Morris was driving at high speed, according to Albert Greer, his companion. Harwood saw the speeding car and turned his machine into the ditch, but the Morris car sideswiped the Harwood machine and turned over. Greer was thrown out of the car and was bruised.

Kansas Lauds Prohibition After Trial of 44 Years

Topeka, Kan., July 26.—The Victory Message to the World is the title of a circular being broadcast by a number of Kansas organizations and signed by a number of widely known Kansans. It purports to set forth the Kansas view "after forty-four years of prohibition." The list of signers is headed by Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas; Governor Jonathan M. Davis, Attorney General C. D. Griffith, William Allen White and Victor Murdock.

"Kansas was the pioneer state in the United States to prohibit the liquor traffic by constitutional amendment, and it proclaims the success of this legislation which forever barred intoxicating liquors from the state's boundaries," the statement says.

"City and county officials, enforcement officers, state officials, men and women of the professions, in each of the one hundred and five counties testify to the success of the twenty-one year legislative enactment which in 1880 made Kansas a dry state."

"The manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor shall forever be prohibited in this state (Kansas) except for medicinal, scientific and mechanical purposes."

Public Conscience Developed.

"Today, more than four decades after the passage of the above amendment, there is found throughout the state a well developed temperance conscience—a strong disgust for intemperance. Respect for the law, which in early years of prohibition was brought about by compulsion, now is voluntary. Each generation is farther removed from an appetite for poisonous drink."

"When the eighteenth amendment of the United States constitution closed all the distilleries and breweries of other states, a few people in Kansas who were not in sympathy with prohibition, but believed in liquor for their own personal use, found themselves shut off from their source of supply. Some of these proceeded to equip themselves to produce what they wanted. The result was that with the coming of national prohibition, Kansas found a new violator of the law—the manufacturer of home brew. Thereupon Kansas proceeded to provide a law which penalized these violators, showing that Kansas sentiment is for complete and absolute prohibition. There is not a politician in the state who dares advocate the repeal of prohibition because he knows that the overwhelming majority of the people of the state are in favor of the amendment.

"Kansas' views on prohibition, summarized through the expressions of her peace officers, are: "No repeal or modification is needed, wanted or considered. "Ease of enforcement grows with enforcement."

"Officials and private citizens are agreed that prohibition is the state's best business asset."

"Many crimes that are common in communities that tolerated liquor are absent from Kansas."

"Kansas children grow to maturity without the taint of intoxicating liquors."

"Accruing benefits of prohibition have made law enforcement easier from year to year."

"An awakened public conscience has aided Kansas in reducing the number of prohibitory violations every year."

"Conviction of violators is easier now than at any time in the past due to the years of proof that intoxicating liquor is a commercial and social detriment to any community."

"Many undesirable influences that attend liquor were banished from the state when liquor was banished."

"Liquor sales are not even permitted in Kansas on doctors' prescriptions. Liquor is an outlaw in Kansas."

"Kansas is 44 years removed from the thought of ever returning to the days of the saloon."

"Kansas children of today never saw and never will see a saloon in Kansas."

Designer Plans 'Miss Atlanta's' Gowns

Preliminary study of the gorgeous gowns he will supply "Miss Atlanta" for her invasion of Atlantic City in the National Beauty tournament has been begun by Martin Amorous, Jr., the south's best-known designer. The scene above is taken from a moving picture film made by Tracy Mathewson in the exclusive shop of Mr. Amorous at 545 Peachtree street, which will be shown on the screen at the Metropolitan theater throughout this week. Mr. Amorous is shown studying draping effects best suited to a figure which he says is typical of Atlanta. His assistants are aiding in the tentative choice of colors and fabrics to be used in gorgeous gowns of the city's reigning beauty.

St. Petersburg Wins Final Race At Water Show

Savannah, Ga., July 26.—The hydroplane Bluey, an entry from St. Petersburg, walked off with first honors in the handiicap race for speed boats after completing all her laps in 26 minutes and 32 seconds in the final races of the first annual Savannah water carnival and show, here this afternoon. The Miss Savannah II, of the city, was second, completing the course in 27 minutes and 32 seconds. The victory of the Bluey was well earned, for it was due only to excellent driving that her pilots were able to bring her in winner over the other entries. The craft seemed much lighter than the others and it bobbed like a cork, while the others seemed better able to stay on the heels.

After making a good showing Friday, the Hilda today was unable to push any of the leaders in the race. The Bluey was figured to be the fastest lap of the day before and the excellent record of the Hilda placed her far behind the others when the time came for them to leave at scratch. The Miss Savannah followed the first craft, the Miss Pasadena coming next, and the Miss Savannah II following her. The Bluey left nearly three minutes before the Hilda. The Miss Pasadena got a slow start, as her engine was stalled as her pilot got the start. The Bluey also faltered as she sped away.

The Miss Savannah II ran a consistent race throughout, but failed to come in for a prize. The elapsed time of the entries for the 17 1/2 mile follows:

Hilda, 25 minutes, 32 seconds; Bluey, 26 minutes, 32 seconds; Miss Savannah II, 27 minutes, 32 seconds; Miss Pasadena, 29 minutes, 30 seconds; Miss Savannah I, 31 minutes, 49 seconds. The actual elapsed time of the Bluey it will be seen was not much more than the Hilda.

Frank C. Strachan's sailboat entry, the Milti II, defeated the two other contestants for sailing-vessel honors, this being the first event on the program of the day.

The fast Hilda romped home victor in the relay race, only three other boats being in the contest. The Hilda, when allowed to race on an equal footing with the other boats, experienced no difficulty in taking off the honors.

In the challenge race, Ed Bell's entry outdistanced all other craft, E. B. Sinker's boat coming in second.

M. J. Hynes, Jr., defeated all other swimmers in the half-mile contest to the float. Victor Grohman was second and Carl Ailsen was third.

Dallas Mills Plan To Close on August 11 For Vacation Period

Huntsville, Ala., July 26.—(Special.)—Announcement has been made by A. J. Rison, treasurer and general manager of the Dallas Manufacturing company, that the cotton mills of his company will close on August 11 for a period of two weeks, during which time operatives will enjoy a vacation. There will be no overhauling of machinery, because it is not needed, Mr. Rison declares, but the entire plant will be idle.

Unless the Lincoln mills get going with their new equipment in the new 30,000-spindle mill before August 11, the shut-down of the Dallas will leave only one cotton mill in the Birmingham going full time in this city. The Lowe mill is running on short time, while the West Huntsville, Huntsville Knitting and Margaret mills are closed until there is a greater demand for textile products.

The Pennsylvania state supreme court has unanimously declared unconstitutional a proposed $35,000,000 soldier bonus amendment to the state constitution. The court based its opinion on the ground that the constitution cannot be amended other than once in five years. Under this ruling 1928 would be the next date at which an amendment could legally be offered.

NASHVILLE COPS EDITORS END OUR NAB HOLDUP MEN OF SOUTH GEORGIA

Nashville, Tenn., July 26.—Walking into the office of the Hartford Hosiery mills about 10:50 o'clock this morning with the command, "Stick 'em up," directed at three members of the office force, three unmasked men gathered from a nearby street and held up the employees, making the payroll amounting to $3,885.15 and made their escape.

They left the office of the mills on Harrison street, coming toward the heart of the city in an automobile belonging to a local auto rental company.

Within 30 minutes after the Hartford Hosiery mills payroll robbery, a police emergency car overhauled the car in which the robbers had escaped on the Hyde's Ferry bridge, and arrested three men who gave their names as Kate Etheridge, Walter Hendricks and Henry Grady. The officers say the men were preparing to throw the empty pay envelopes into the river. Grady, it is said, drew a pistol, but dropped when two officers threatened to shoot him. The money was recovered.

The police say that Grady has recently served an 18-months sentence at Leavenworth for alleged participation in a Chicago mail robbery.

7-Year-Old Boy Badly Injured While at Play

Maurice Walker, Jr., 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Walker, of 257 Woodward avenue, may die as the result of injuries suffered Saturday afternoon when he fell down two flights of stairs while playing at his home.

Physicians at Grady hospital, where the child was taken, fear that he is suffering from a fractured skull, in addition to severe bruises. The child slipped while near the top of the stairs, and tumbled down to a landing, crashed into a wall and then tumbled down another short flight.

she was about to go down. Many persons, including women and children, jumped overboard, fearing they would be sucked under when the vessel settled in the water. Others were hurried overboard by the force of the impact.

Some of those who leaped into the blackness of the harbor, told the sinking ship found they were standing in water only knee-deep, having landed on the submerged barge.

Others were completely submerged, and many hasty rescues were effected at the very side of the sinking craft. But for the fact that the ship had been held firm by the large vessel, she would have gone to the bottom, with heavy loss of life.

Rescue at Hand.

The moment the vessel crashed her distress whistles were blown, and the Pennsylvania, just passing, hove to, sending out boats to the rescue.

Other vessels in the harbor immediately rushed to the scene, and after a frantic half-hour had the whole party aboard and bound for Norfolk. The Pennsylvania turned over her rescuees to other vessels and proceeded on her way to Cape Charles.

When the first tug-boat of the rescue reached the Pennsylvania wharf, and were landed, confusion again reigned, because families had been separated in the dark, mothers were screaming in the agony of separation from their children, and men were frantic in their search for missing wives and relatives.

As each new boatload drew up to the wharf the confusion was intensified, until the last had been landed and all hands checked, showing that despite the fact that there were scores of babies-in-arms on the Gratitude.

Everybody Invited.

In anticipation of an increase in entries throughout this week, the management of the tournament will announce time and places when pretty girls may be photographed and entered in this week's issue of the Daily Constitution, and if applicable, find it convenient to visit The Constitution or the Hirschberg studios, they are urged to watch this week's issue of the Constitution for information as to assignment of photographers to city bathing pools.

If you are not already enrolled as a prospective winner of the valuable and handsome rewards to be bestowed upon the city's beauty queen, don't fail to enter without delay.

At the National Beauty Pageant in Atlantic City, most famous and fashionable of American watering places, "Miss Atlanta" and her chaplains will participate in a week of gorgeous and colorful carnival events on the boardwalk. A procession to select America's most beautiful girl in evening dress, a rolling chair parade, a bathers' revue to select "Miss America," balls, yacht cruises, rolling chair rides and a host of elaborate events will feature the program from September 2 through September 6.

"Miss Atlanta" will select a champion of her own choosing and will manage a rolling chair parade in a week of the two will be paid in advance. In Atlantic City they will be honored as the nation's most beautiful girls on boardwalk hotels and every honor will be paid them.

Rules of Tourney.

Here are the rules of the Atlanta tournament:

Regulations of Contest.

(1) All contestants must be female between 16 and 25 years of age, bona fide residents of the city of Atlanta or its suburbs (including Decatur), or any part of Fulton county.

(2) Only unmarried entrants will be admitted; this prohibiting participation of divorcees, widows, or women who have been married.

(3) All applicants for the title of "Miss Atlanta" and "Miss America" must submit to The Constitution photographs of themselves in bathing suits between the dates, Monday, July 15, and Monday, August 12. They must also hold themselves in readiness to appear before judges upon direction.

(4) Applicants shall understand that they will be judged upon the following: beauty, personality, carriage, social bearing, and grace of deportment and conversation.

Have this coupon properly filled out, and don't hesitate to present it to the photographer.

in the state of Sergipe has mutilated and that two ships have left Santos with troops to put down the movement. Still another declares that the revolutionary movement is prospering in Santa Catharina and Parana, and unrest prevails in Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul.

Fear to Withdraw Troops.

Reports from other sources describe the situation of unrest as such that the federal government fears to withdraw troops from some posts to aid in the siege against Sao Paulo.

Today's communiques concerning the military operations suggest that fighting is going on between the rebel and federal forces, considerably west of Sao Paulo. Mention is made of the capture of prisoners by the federal forces at Porto Feltz, which is some 50 miles northwest of Sao Paulo and about 25 miles north of Soanabala, described in yesterday's communique as having been occupied by the federal forces.

The forts in the harbor of Rio Janeiro, one of which took part in the mutiny of July, 1922, has been disarmed, a precautionary measure, according to information published by La Prensa today. The information is said to have been received from a faction at Brazil.

Appeals to Italians.

The Italian ambassador to Brazil, General Badoglio, "moved by humanitarian sentiment," has offered his friendly offices as mediator to end the hostilities between the rebels and the government forces in Brazil, says advices here from Sao Paulo. The offer is said to have been made by the ambassador.

In a proclamation to the Italian residents of Sao Paulo, he has urged from Rio Janeiro, General Badoglio appeals to Italians not to participate in the struggle. The proclamation advises them to leave Sao Paulo and avoid danger. It says any Italians who present themselves to the federal forces will be taken to localities where they will be able to await in security a return of normal conditions.

TUMULT DENIES HE CAUSED 'INSULT'

ize the story connecting me with this unhappy affair as a lie, pure and simple, a fabrication deliberately manufactured by those who unfortunately take advantage of every opportunity to foment strife and bitterness where respect and admiration ought to live.

"No one who knows me and has knowledge of my intimate association with the fine men from the southland would believe that there could be any basis in fact for such a charge as to uttering a slur and insult."

While I feel deeply aggrieved that the case of the murder of Vice Consul Imbrie, who died in the city of Washington, should have been brought to my attention, I am not in a position to express my feelings of regret and sympathy for the family of the deceased, as I am not an American and am not a resident of this country.

"My love for the south and its people comes very natural to me. It was burned in my very soul by my father, who, though fighting on the other side in the civil war, loved your people and admired their chivalry. The basis of my own feeling toward your people is the gratitude I hold for them for their attitude of magnanimity toward my own father at a critical period in his life."

"Those who circulate this slander for the purpose of injuring me probably are unaware that my dear father's life was saved through the kindness and generosity of your people."

"As a mere boy, during the terrible days of the civil war, having volunteered in the army, I was taken as a prisoner of war, and I was held in a prison camp. I was treated with kindness and respect, and I was allowed to see my family. I was never treated as a slave, and I was never treated as a criminal. I was treated as a man, and I was treated as a friend."

"After a long dreary night of suffering there came to his aid a Good Samaritan in the person of a southern colored man, who, appearing at his side, lifted him from the ground, gave him food and drink out of his knapsack and tenderly carried him to the rear where a southern doctor, with the aid of a noble woman of the south, operated upon him. After long weeks of suffering he was, through the kindness of his minister, brought back to health and to life."

"In every discussion between us there flashed from the utterances of my father the words of the nobleman and affection for your people who poured out upon him the generous love of his sympathy and regard. You see, therefore, the true background of my affection for your people, and I would be ungrateful as a man should be, by any small or contemptible means, attempt to belittle or humiliate your people. And it is my devotion to my father's memory, and the sense of gratitude I feel toward your forebears, that impels me without bitterness to denounce this miserable canard."

DR. MARK INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Lovell, of 20 Williams street.

The negro youngster died Saturday night as a result of injuries suffered at 10 o'clock Saturday morning when struck by a safety bus driven by C. Hendrix, of 82 South Dea street, at Peachtree and Third streets.

Witnesses told Motorcycle Officer J. W. Mashburn, Jr., and C. L. Taylor, who investigated, that the accident was unavoidable, as the boy ran directly into the path of the machine, which was going at a slow rate of speed at the time. However, a case of reckless driving was made against Hendrix. He was released on $500 bond.

Brothers Are Injured.

The accident in which the Sullivan brothers were injured occurred Saturday afternoon when the car in which they were riding on the Peachtree road, driven by William Dusselt, of Roswell, Ga., swerved from the road and crashed into two heavy gasoline tanks of the Nuckelle filling station at the Atlanta-Roswell road, two miles south of Roswell.

H. W. Sullivan suffered severe cuts and bruises, about the face and body and his brother was badly cut about the face, while Dusselt escaped uninjured. Both were taken to Grady hospital.

Dusselt jumped from the car and ran following the accident, Lieutenant Oliver, of the county police, reported. A search is being conducted for him.

Youth Knocked Down.

The Lovell youngster was hurt when knocked from his bicycle by an automobile driven by Thomas Farmer, 17, of 109 Simpson street, at Williams and Harris streets. The child was taken to Grady hospital for treatment, where it was found his injuries are not serious.

Farmer was arrested by Call Officers Saturday and Herndon on a charge of reckless driving.

Only 28 arrests were made in the traffic crusade Saturday, 11 drivers being charged with violating traffic ordinances, ten with speeding and seven with reckless driving. No traffic cases were tried Saturday.

GRAHAM AND DONALDSON WELL KNOWN IN ATLANTA.

Inspector Graham, who, with Bert Donaldson, of Atlanta, was instrumental in causing arrests of the eleven men, was chief postoffice inspector in the Atlanta office for a long period having been transferred from this city to New York about a year ago.

Donaldson is well known throughout the country in connection with Atlanta's million-dollar bunco case, in which he relentlessly tracked members of the Atlanta band into practically every state in the country, arresting several of them. He has been connected with the solicitor's office here in all of the bunco cases, it was stated Saturday night by E. A. Stephens, assistant solicitor, and served without compensation throughout.

Donaldson, as far as could be ascertained Saturday night, is not a postal inspector, but has been assisting in the rounding up of alleged bunco men without pay. He has been working with Inspector Graham in Canada for several months.

Mrs. Testa J. Brown, a former actress and prominent in politics in West Virginia, will be one of the leading speakers in the coming campaign to elect John W. Davis as president.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Why I Am a Christian, by Dr. Frank Crane, which Glenn Frank, editor of the Century Magazine, says is "The most original and usable book on Christianity in many years." Readers who know Dr. Crane, and there are but few people in America who do not read his writings, will find even more pleasure and comfort in the contents of this handsome volume than in his daily messages through the newspapers.

We quote from the different editions with reference to his contribution:

"Dr. Crane has achieved the impossible! He has written a book about religion. It is his own personal confession of faith. It is a brave, frank, candid book. Dr. Crane occupied a pulpit for thirty years. Now he has a larger daily audience than could be crowded at one time in all the churches in America. Twenty million people in this and seventeen foreign countries read his daily sermons. His news stretch out into the far corners of the world, and they are always filled. No man, living or dead, ever spoke so large an audience. Dr. Crane does not live in the mountains but down in the valley.

where he finds honey and human interest subjects to discuss. He takes the daily pleasures of a little child playing with his toys and weaves them into beautiful stories; he discusses "world peace" and it looms up before us as one of the biggest, if not the biggest subject in which the whole world is interested.

He is a friend, a writer, a scholar, a Christian, and now that he has given to mankind the subject that lies nearest to his heart—Christianity—it will not only be of interest but it will wield a wonderful influence over his countless readers.

The world is restless and the people in it are moving here and there, not content to remain long in one place—restlessness and discontent is written on both homes and business, and it is the consensus of opinion that what the world needs is Christianity in its broadest sense—Dr. Crane is prepared to show that the world needs it. Be sure to read Dr. Crane's book "Why I Am a Christian." (Wm. H. Wise & Co., New York.)

HIGH FIRES. By Marjorie Barkley McClure. In any unusual story—it would be unusual in either role as a true story or as fiction. It is divided into three books—Book One introduces two very interesting family circles—the Stanhopes and Stevensons—their sons and daughters—also a description of Detroit in 1905.

The summary given by the publisher covers the real heart of the story and is woven around the dramatic figure of Angus Stevenson, a character who represents sincerity, kindness and magnetism, being actuated always by "the high fires of the spirit's desires," to which he finally becomes a real victim.

He was sincere in his efforts to hold his family, as he had always done, in the straight path of the Puritan fathers. The rules outlined by him to govern his family circle are like the laws of the Medes and Persians—there are to be no card parties, theater parties, and no dancing parties to be indulged in. In fact he and his family occupy the second places always—his church and his needs must always come first.

And then there's the Stanhopes' home: the father having plenty of money, allows his family to spend it freely and as they wish. There's a wide valley between the homes of the two families, but even so, it has been unable to keep romance out of the two homes, and a strong bridge is built over the valley by two lovers, Frances, daughter of Angus Stevenson, and Richard, the son of the Stanhopes. This is the plot and the story woven around the lives of these two families is most cleverly told. The author portrays the characters of the two fathers and this is followed by the son and daughter of each, and no more human characters have ever been presented to readers. The characters are real, the problems are real and the situations are such that come up in our own families and in those of our neighbors. It is an interesting study of the time—past, present and future. (Little Brown & Co., Boston.)

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Constitution of the United States—Covers Yesterday and Tomorrow, by James M. Beck, LL. D., solicitor general of the United States, officer of the Legion of Honor. In compiling this volume the author quotes the following lines from Proverbs xlii: "Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set."

The author begins his introduction by asking "What is the constitution between friends?" He explains that this was the famous inquiry of a very practical politician with reference to a great and noble president of the United States who wanted to do something which the constitution had forbidden.

Mr. Jefferson, the great apostle of American democracy, once said that the constitution was "for the living, and not for the dead." To the more philosophic mind of Edmund Burke, society is a continuing and very sacred compact between the dead, the living and the unborn. "The living owe a solemn debt to the dead to transmit the heritage of the past to the unborn." He discusses the subject of progress and shows that it is a "species of entail." On the other hand, people in every walk of life are now asking the question, "Is the age of the wheelbarrow to control that of the aeroplane?"

The great purpose of the constitution is to convince the people of the worth of liberty and justice, and what the heritage means to the living.

The introduction, as presented by Mr. Beck, is well written and self-explanatory as to the vital importance of the meaning of the constitution of the United States.

The table of contents covers the subject matter of each chapter beginning with "The Genesis of the Constitution," "The Last Days of the Confederation," "The Great Convention," "The Ratification of the Constitution," "The Constitution and American Foreign Relations," and other equally as important subjects.

Mr. Beck has devoted years of study to the constitution and he traces the whole history of it; the reader will find it clear, interesting and valuable. It should be in the private library of every citizen in the United States. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

AMERICAN POLITICS.

A Dictionary of American Politics. By Edward Conrad Smith, Ph. D. This volume comprises accounts of Political Parties, Measures and Men, explanations of the Constitution, Divisions and Practical Workings of the Government, together with Political Phrases, Familiar Names of Persons and Places and Noteworthy Sayings. Just at this time every citizen should have this book in his library.

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, JULY 27, 1924.

The author is Assistant Professor of Political Science in New York University, and his motive in writing it is to assist the citizen of this great country in their efforts to gather information on matters relating to the past and present politics of the United States. The author has prepared it for the average voter who is not in a position to search for the information which is piled up before him.

As is well known, the vocabulary of American politics contains hundreds of slang expressions which have not as yet found their way into print, but they are well known, and are used in political writings and circles. Besides these political words and phrases there are brief discussions of constitutional and legal terms, of famous measures, of prominent questions in our foreign relations, and of party history.

The author most interestingly discusses the organization work of the offices of the government, national, state and local. Besides this there is a valuable bibliography of political leaders which adds to the interest as well as the value of the book. (A. L. Burt & Co., New York City.)

THE DIARY OF A BOY.

A Human Boy's Diary. By Eden Lippitt, who tells the story of a diary, of a boy named John, who sent him to the Merivale school. The introductory is headed "Before I Begin," in which he tells of his interview with his father before beginning his school career, at which time his father presents him with a diary, and with reference to it he said: "The difficulty for a private diary is to be private enough to keep it; and though this is called a private school, as a matter of fact there is nothing what-so-ever private about it."

The diary is most interesting and in it he relates the many incidents and accidents of which he and his schoolmates are the real victims. For instance: "School is entirely different from home. School is difficult and home is easy."

"I have been put in the upper third, which consists of eighteen chaps."

"I have been made a fag for a class, in which I have to write."

"I have already made a friend in the way. He is called Weston. His desk is next to mine. It has a slight smell of catnip. He said I would soon get accustomed to it."

"I saw my first fight on Saturday. It was between two chaps of no importance. Blood flowed, but no science." And so on and on through term one, he puts down the occurrences that are the most interesting to him, and then comes the second term, in which he discusses "the dream round, the common talk for Weston had told him that this is the most hateful term of all—the term when natural history seems at its lowest and endemities occur."

This is the time of writing limericks. And then comes the close of the year when this very human boy returns home and writes of his experiences. "Strange Conclusion," which we must not tell about for it will bring lots of interest to other human boys. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

NEW FICTION.

The Reluctant Lover, by Stephen McKenna, is a story that was "put on the shelf," having been written when he was 24 years old and the future was before him. It was published in England where the author even at that time was considered a bright young writer.

Mr. McKenna's hero is young and the strangest thing about the story is that he presents a very bored appearance for 23 years. Even at that time the London Bookman predicted that both Mr. McKenna and his heroes would wake up, but even with a listless hero the story is filled with humorous sayings and those who like the pleasure of reading "Sonia" and "Vindication" will note that the prediction has come true.

But "The Reluctant Lover" is the selection of Myra Woodbridge, who prefers a reluctant to a willing lover, so she and Cyril Fitzroy make a solemn agreement which is to cover a period of two years. What happened after that we leave for the reader who will not find this first story in the least dull and unentertaining. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Pink Sugar. By O. Douglas, who has written a very interesting novel. And while the title of this story seems to bring a smile to the face of every reader, when he has finished it his first thought will be that it deserves a better title, though this one is rather appropriate. The book is dedicated to John Buchan and Susan, his wife, because of Bill.

The story is located in the bonny hills of Scotland, and naturally the author's characters are quaint and charming. His stories are filled with life and interest. The reader who knows of the attractiveness of Scotland, of its lovely glens and shady nooks will enjoy the story. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

Seward's Folly. By Edison Marshall, author of "The Land of Forgotten Men," who tells the story of how in 1867 the United States purchased Alaska, and further relates the story how but for the folly of Seward, secretary of state, we would have lost for all time that magnificent territory which was being so cruelly exploited by the Russians.

He tells how Seward sent an emissary to Sitka, named Jefferson Sharp, of his life there so different to the life he had lived as an American that he became disgusted with his surroundings, with the exception of Molly Forest and her uncle who he found to possess the true American character.

This story is very much like "The Covered Wagon," with its wonderful American pioneer setting, and through the whole story the reader will find the footprints and the results of the American spirit of our forefathers. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Studies in Murder. This volume contains the stories of five murders which were famous in their day, but time is now rushing by so furiously that he will now allow his memory to take its rest. There are exceptions and in this volume, like the former books of Edmund Lester Pearson, there are incidents that have been forgotten.

The five murders recalled in this volume are "The Borden Case" which is considered without parallel in the criminal history of the United States. "The Twenty-Third Street Murder" plays Miss Flora McFlimsey of Madison square, in the beginning of its presentation of the real facts that occurred on this street in a certain year that will be recalled by many people all over the country. "Maie Brum" was connected with "The Herbert Fuller," and it is around this boat with its eleven men and one woman as passengers: "The Hunting Knife," is even around "Red Horse" and renamed in honor of Longfellow the Wayside Inn, and around the home of a family by the name of Page, who lived on South avenue, Weston, where one night when all the family was absent except Miss Mabel Page, is where the mystery begins. The last story is "The Apoc Dreams a Dream." Uncle Amos having lived more than a hundred years ago in the village of Manchester in the state of Vermont. The story of this murder is filled with many mysterious incidents that will puzzle the reader. Illustrations. (The MacMillan Company, New York.)

Haunted House. By Camille Flammarion, the great French astronomer, author of "Dreams of an Astronomer," whose hobby for the past few years has been the study of haunted houses. His book on this subject has been awaited with exceeding interest. He has written an interesting account of an absorbing subject and it is considered a scientific document of great importance.

A book by this great French astronomer will attract the attention of the thinking people. He gives the evidence of strange phenomena "behind the now impenetrable wall dividing the human world from the invisible." He devotes the most of his book to presenting the results of his study of some 5,000 instances of genuine or supposed spectral phenomena. Of course there are many cases of fraud, but he has thoroughly investigated those he presents to his readers, and of which he says are beyond human understanding. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

Scribner's Magazine for July has an attractive table of contents, the contributors being Michael Punin, Helen Gail Crow, Jacques H. Lambert, "The White Monkey" serial by Galsworthy, "Sound Adjutant's Call," "A New England Education," "Glimpses of New York and Washington in Civil War Times," by Edward P. Mitchell; Perry Barlow, Henry Meade Williams, Edmund Lester Pearson, W. C. Brownell, Mildred Howells, Arthur Holborn Quinn, William Lyon Phelps.

The American Review of Reviews presents as its frontispiece "The Republican National Convention in Session." Under "The Progress of the World," the reader will be able to find all the information on subjects in which he has been interested and is interested at this time. Frank H. Then there are articles by Harris Dickson, Bill O'Donnell, Ruth McEnery Stuart, "The South Window," by Dixon Merriam; incidents of Washington's Southern Tour," by Dr. Archibald Henderson, etc. The book department has for its head Cora Paxton Stewart, an attractive illustrated sketch entitled, "Diantha Barnes of Tennessee," is by Dr. W. F. Melton, of Emory university; Mary Brent Whiteside contributes a beautiful poem called "Color," and another poem filled with beauty is by Francis C. Mason dedicated to Franz Schubert, and there are other beautiful poems—also an interesting sketch on Tyrus Raymond Cobb, illustrated, by R. E. McGill, etc.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Twenty years ago Halle Ermine Rivers created a sensation with the first novel ever written around the romantic figure of Lord Byron—"The Castaway." Now, in commemoration of the centenary of the poet's death, Hobb-Merrill will publish in October a new edition of this popular biographical novel.

It is an unusual tribute to Herbert Quick's agricultural problems, "The Real Trouble With the Farmers," that Dr. Elwood Mead, director of the United States reclamation service, and one of the most noted agricultural authorities in this country, has placed the book in the University of California library for the use of students in rural institutions.

The dedication of Otis Skinner's memoirs, "Footlights and Spotlights," has attracted much delighted comment and gives, in a manner, the keynote of the charming reminiscences that follow. The inscription is to M. D. S.—Maud Durbin Skinner—"But the eternal summer shall not fade." Mr. and Mrs. Skinner and their daughter, Cornelia, have sailed for a summer in Europe.

"The next great poet of the world, whether he writes poetry, paints pictures, tells stories or builds temples, will be the man who understands the real world, its chemistry, biology, psychology, human nature, organic life, its mathematical physics and modes of action. And upon this intellectual foundation he will build for us his world of spiritual values by which a great life can be lived by great men. He will then make art seem to us what it really is—the most exalting and despairing thing we know."—Albert Edward Weizmann, in "The New Deologue of Science."

Charles Alphonso Smith, head of the department of English at Annapolis Naval academy, and probably the foremost authority on Edgar Allan

CANADIAN RESORT BECKONS TO REAL THRILL SEEKERS

For those who long to get far away from the pulsing marts of commerce, to leave the ordinary haunts of men and go off alone, or with a few kindred souls to the sublime solitude of nature, or who have heard the call of the wild romantic places of the earth, the grim loam mountains clothed in everlasting snows, the beautiful valleys, the deep awesome canyons and the roaring cataracts, Mount Robson park, in Canadian mountains will satisfy. This magnificent mountain playground, lying up in northern British Columbia, contains 840 square miles of some of the most stupendous and awe-inspiring mountains in the world—glaciers beside which the majority of snow-fields would seem almost insignificant are to be found. It is the ideal resort for the adventurer, for it is a wild, rugged mountain kingdom which has barely been explored, having been completely off the beaten track until about ten years ago, when the transcontinental line of the Canadian National railways penetrated its fastnesses. There is not a hotel in the park, so one is compelled to live the life of the explorer and mountaineer, sojourning in a comfortable log cabin conducted by Hargreaves brothers, who are among the best guides and packers to be found in the Rockies.

From this permanent camp one may go off with a pack train on dozens of thrilling, exploring trips winding through the beautiful valleys with the clean, pure mountain breezes, jagged snowy peaks rising on every hand like sentinels on guard.

The trail to Mount Robson, after leaving the camp, crosses the head waters of the Fraser river, hissing and roaring through its narrow gorge-like channel and then follows the valley of the Grand Forks river threading its way among the giant cedars, some of which are 30 feet in circumference, to Kinney lake, that mirrors the surrounding peaks in its gleaming surface, the trail increases in ruggedness, and mountains seem to increase in loftiness and grandeur; passes close to Mount Whitehorn and enters the Valley of a Thousand Falls. Now comes a steep thrilling ascent, part of which is negotiated by means of flying trestles, bolted to sheer cliffs, finally reaching the level of Bark lake where the magnificent spectacle of Emperor Falls meets one's gaze.

There can be no doubt that failure to prepare for the possibility of war at a time when that possibility was greatest would result in great hardship, unnecessary expense and the unjustifiable prolongation of the world war.

To state this is but to state what everybody knows. It is the duty of every public official who would be responsible for the national defense, and the people who would have to make the sacrifices to maintain it, to be prepared for such a possibility.

IVAN OLINSKY LEAVES FOR NEW YORK HOME

Ivan G. Olinsky, noted portrait painter, who has been in Atlanta for about four weeks while engaged in work for several prominent families, left Saturday for his home in New York, from which he will proceed to his country home at Lime, Conn.

Mr. Olinsky made many friends here during his visit in connection with the portrait painting he was doing at the Biltmore hotel, where some of his works were shown. During his recent stay he painted portraits for Miss Katherine Hennes, Miss Virginia Campbell, Mrs. J. D. Rhodes and others.

During the curing season, will be especially beneficial this year because these splendid weather conditions are reflected in the quality of the leaf and the better quality shows the better price is paid.

Crop Already Made.

And the tobacco crop is made. It is now ready for the market. There is no uncertainty of its value and how much it will fetch. No one is concerned. The "open season" for buyers begins August 6, and 6 to 12 buyers will be stationed during the next few weeks at the large assembly points in the South, such as Columbus, Georgia cities, including Douglas, Tifton, Valdosta, Fitzgerald and others. Top prices will be paid because the North Carolina and Virginia crops have been reduced by heavy rains and other unfavorable with, because the collapse of farm prices had been so sudden and unexpected. The farmers' losses were enormous, and setbacks. Bankruptcy courts were jammed with petitions of farmers, merchants and bankers who were "frozen out" by deflation of securities. The farmers and bankers were either courageous or optimistic to predict the "silver lining," and no one hazarded a guess of when or how normal conditions could be brought back. In the meantime, the farmers who had suddenly found themselves loaded down with almost worthless securities and holdings, and facing the abyss of ruin, realized that business conditions would not be the creation of some kind and set about to remedy the situation. Economic, third, hard work and a sound system of farming was the plan decided upon and followed.

The latitude of Georgia places our tobacco on market in August. These North Carolina and Virginia markets open. The above statistics do not include the cigar leaf tobacco grown under irrigation in the Florida and Georgia fields. The yield and returns of this tobacco are equally satisfactory.

"Indications seem to point to a considerable increase in Georgia's bright leaf tobacco acreage in 1924. World statistics show a large increase in the consumption of smoking and cigarette tobacco. As this trade principally absorbs our bright leaf tobacco, we can expect a very high rate of cultivation of the present interest in Georgia tobacco production."

HOME COMFORT FURNACES HAVE BIG SALE HERE

Product of J. J. Finnigan Company Installed in Large Number of Atlanta Homes.

The J. J. Finnigan company, boiler and tank manufacturers, and manufacturers of the famous Home Comfort Verintena Magazine furnace, have recently opened offices and display rooms at 706 Marietta street, where the advantages of this heating plant may be seen by the public.

The Home Comfort furnace is "T" shaped, of locomotive type, and, according to its manufacturers, operates at a saving of from 25 to 33-1/3 percent in fuel. It is used for hot water, vapor or steam heating and burns anthracite coal or crushed coke.

"Wherever our furnace has been installed," says J. J. Finnigan, president of the company, "it has never failed to give the utmost satisfaction. Although the first cost is some higher than furnaces made of cheaper material, it's the economy in fuel consumption and the heating efficiency that make our plant popular. Efficiency in operation is what counts in the long run, and the first cost of a furnace is always of secondary importance to the property owner."

"The efficiency of the Home Comfort furnace and the big saving in effects in fuel consumption makes this plant pay for itself in a short time."

"Another great advantage in our furnace is the fact that it requires so little attention. This plant will keep a house at a uniform and comfortable temperature if it is attended to practically twice in 24 hours. The furnace is of simple design and may be repaired in any locality, where there is a machine shop, thus eliminating the necessity of ordering and waiting for expensive parts."

Already a large number of prominent Atlanta people have installed this furnace and its record of a continued growth in sales is excellent.

The company is offering to property owners who are planning the installation of a furnace, a free 24-page booklet containing information of value to anyone making such a purchase.

The booklet may be obtained by writing to or calling at the company's display rooms at 706 Marietta street.

Besides making furnaces the J. J. Finnigan company manufactures a line of tanks for gasoline and oil storage, both riveted and electrically

SEEK JOBBERS FOR NEW DISINFECTANT

Jobbing connections throughout Georgia and the south are being sought by the Star Products company, for the distribution of a new odorless disinfectant placed on the market at an early date.

This concern is also selling agency for Worthy's Mangle remedy and has been successful in developing a big volume of business on this product among kennels and veterinary hospitals throughout the United States.

Sales for the odorless disinfectant promise to be equally as great if not greater than that of Worthy's Mangle remedy, as the sales plan calls for an intensive advertising schedule as a help to the dealer. This advertising is now being prepared by the C. I. Harris Advertising agency, who are advertising counselors for the company.

Dealers who are interested in securing territory for the sales of this new product are invited to get in touch with the Star Products company, 604 Forsyth building.

Selling With Photos.

In addition to a local trade that totals almost $18,000,000 a year, the furniture store of Barker Brothers, Incorporated, Los Angeles, one of the largest furniture stores in the world, does a large mail order business, selling by mail over all the states in the southwest. The company issues no catalog, however, relying almost entirely on photographs. It has its own studio and staff of photographers, and a sample from each shipment is photographed as soon as it arrives. In the files are many thousands of photographs, segregated and numbered by departments, ready to be mailed out in reply to inquiries from prospective customers. Inasmuch as the store solicits no business by mail, but cares only for business that comes unsolicited, the percentage of inquiries that develop into orders is exceptionally high, hence the method of distributing original photographs is not so wasteful as a person might believe.

How Will It Look?

How will it look when made up? That's what a woman wants to know. To show the woman, F. McL. Radford, merchandise manager of the Bon Marche, a Seattle department store, tried an experiment when the store began preparing for its April silk-week sale. An expert dressmaker made up a dress from each of a half-dozen patterns. Then four models were engaged, and the topmost shelf in the dress goods department was cleared off to serve as a promenade. All the week the girls promenaded in the exhibition dresses—and the store broke its best previous record for a silk-week sale.

GEORGIA FIXTURE CO. ENJOYING FINE TRADE

A recent addition to Atlanta's mercantile establishments is the Georgia Store and Fixture company, opened a few weeks ago at 41-43 East Alabama street. The new store is a partnership, operated by Charles Zimmerman and F. J. Berner. Mr. Zimmerman is well known and popular among the grocery trade of Atlanta and Georgia, having been in the wholesale produce, grocery and stock feed business for a number of years.

Prior to the opening of the store in Atlanta Mr. Berner was in the store fixture business at Savannah for the last twenty years. He is a thoroughly experienced man for this line, and has a wide circle of friends throughout the state.

The firm handles a complete line of fixtures for department stores, grocery stores, drug stores, meat markets, banks, restaurants, offices and all other lines of business. They are agents for the National Showcase company, of Columbus, Ga., manufacturers of showcases, shelving and fixtures. Among the nationally known products which they distribute are: McCray refrigerators and freezer counters, Dayton scales, slicing machines and meat choppers. In addition to new equipment the firm also handles used fixtures that have been taken in trade. The firm now employs four salesmen, who travel the states of Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and Florida.

The first thing to be done by proprietors of stores to arrange their fixtures so that they can get the most out of their space. Mr. Berner, who has been in the fixture business for many years, has a great deal of experience in this work, and is in charge of this department, which gives his services free of charge.

MANUFACTURING NEW UNDERWEAR FOR MEN

P. L. Lewis, one of the best-known traveling salesmen in the state, has secured the sales rights for the entire country on a patented style of underwear for men, and will begin the manufacture of this product in a few days.

Although the trade name of the new kind of underwear has not been definitely decided on, a contract has been closed with W. E. Floding, of this city, to manufacture the underwear, and the first orders have been placed for some of the first output.

In describing his product, Mr. Lewis says: "We feel that we have underwear that men have long been looking for. Our product is similar to any other lightweight summer suits, with the exception that these supporters are attached to the legs, which makes it possible to keep up the hose without a binding elastic around the leg. The front of the leg extends a few inches longer than the rear, making a kind of flap that extends over the knees and protects the trousers at the knee which has always been a sore spot in the first places for trousers to wear out, due to perspiration and the natural friction caused by the constant bending of the knee in motion."

"I believe it will be just a question of time before our product will be in general use all over the United States. The price of this new underwear will be no higher than the ordinary kind, and these patented features make a most convincing selling argument."

ICE CREAM COMPANY SHOWS SALES INCREASE

One of the busiest places in Atlanta is the George Moore Ice Cream Company, which has been working overtime during the last few days of hot weather in order to supply the big demand for ice cream that comes not only from all parts of the city, but from many sections of the state.

As a part of their service to the public the company has been sending out a large number of recipe books, showing the many tempting dishes that can be made from ice cream, and these booklets have done much to increase the consumption of the company's product.

Branding the Product.

How to brand the product—that, to the manufacturer, always has been a big problem, and to its successful solution many a manufacturer owes a large measure of his success. In the field of good products the problem presents peculiar difficulties.

Usually the problem is solved by a package or wrapper. But suppose that the package is broken up in the grocery store and its contents sold piecemeal. How shall each portion preserve its trade-mark? The Tillamook cheese producers, of Tillamook, Ore., the word "Tillamook," by means of dies, across the rim of the cheese at intervals of about an inch. Thus each slice of cheese bears the trademark "Tillamook."

Suppose, now, that the product is too small to be packaged or wrapped. This situation confronted the Franco-American Bakery, of Los Angeles. The management considered paper labels, but these can be removed. Metal labels, to be stuck on like a tack, were also considered, but they, too, could be removed.

Why not, some one suggested, burn the name into the roll? "Fine," said the management: "we'll try it." An electric branding machine was devised, and worked so well that others were made; and today the battery of little branding machines is branding all the French rolls the bakery makes.

ATLANTA SHOWCASE CO. BUSINESS IS VERY GOOD

P. J. McGuire, manager of the Atlanta Showcase company, reports that business is showing signs of being on the upgrade and that they have closed a number of nice contracts recently.

The Atlanta Showcase company is one of the oldest manufacturing concerns of its kind in the south, and this firm sells bank and store fixtures in practically every state in the union. They have also made a number of large installations in foreign countries.

LA FOLLETTE DENIES 'BLACK LIST' PLANS

Washington, July 26.—Vigorous denial that an official "black list" of members of the committee for the purpose of making today by the La Follette campaign committee.

In a statement issued after a lengthy conference the committee said that while it had full authority to pass upon the endorsement of candidates for congressional, state and local offices, "no action has been taken with regard to any candidate."

"Action will not be taken by the committee," the statement continued, "until a thorough study has been made of the official records of the candidates in the respective states."

The primary interest of the committee is to advance the candidacy of Robert M. La Follette for president, and Burton K. Wheeler for vice-president. For this reason, it does not intend to give undue attention to the congressional situation.

To Indorse, Not Denounce.

Committee members, however, reiterated that they intend to carefully scrutinize the legislative record of all members of the senate and representatives who in the past have shown themselves out of sympathy with the La Follette program.

The campaign committee made some progress today with regard to financing of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign by appointing Attorney General E. A. Tamm, of Wisconsin, director of the financial campaign committee as it relates to the general public. William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, was designated to direct the campaign for contributions from labor and other organizations.

W. T. Rawleigh, a Freeport, Illinois, manufacturer, was appointed treasurer of the public funds with headquarters at Chicago, and Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, treasurer of funds collected from labor and farm organizations.

Want Cash Only.

Mr. Ekern, who with Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, La Follette's campaign manager, attended today's meeting, said that detailed plans for raising a campaign fund would be undertaken at once. He returned tonight to La Follette headquarters in Chicago and Mr. Ekern will go there tomorrow.

Before leaving Washington, Mr. Ekern issued this statement: "This will be a cash and carry campaign, conducted strictly on the plan of raising the money to pay as you go. The independent candidacy of La Follette for president and securing organization in the different states, this work is handicapped for lack of funds. The immediate need for money is urgent. Prompt remittances to Treasurer W. T. Rawleigh, Morrison Hotel, Chicago, will be welcomed. A hundred dollars now will be worth a thousand dollars later in the campaign. The exaggerated statements recently carried in the press regarding the amount of money to be raised do not help to pay any bills."

During the day, Representative Nelson and Mr. Ekern both conferred with Senator La Follette, as did Oswald Garrison Villard, New York editor.

Representative La Guardia, republican, New York, who during the last session of congress, was identified with the insurgent bloc in the house, consulted with the campaign committee, particularly with regard to the situation in New York state.

6 CHILDREN AWARDED JUDGMENT OF MILLION

Enid, Okla., July 26.—A judgment of $1,026,000.33 against the Sinclair Oil company, which effected Oil company and the Exchange Oil company was awarded the six children of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Crews, deceased, by Judge J. B. Sullivan, in district court today. The suit, which had been pending nearly three years, was filed by Miss Laura Crews, guardian of the minor Crews children.

The Sinclair company, which bore the brunt of the judgment, was ordered to pay the heirs $1,180,501.50. From this amount was deducted $225,651.88 to reimburse the company for expense in improving property and drilling oil wells involved in the litigation. The two other companies were ordered to pay the plaintiffs $162,854.71.

In addition to the money settlement, Judge Sullivan also permanently settled all controversy concerning the title to the 240 acres of land affected in the suit, declaring it to be the property of the Crews heirs. The defendants were expected not to remove any of the casing or machinery situated on the land, or to destroy any of the oil wells.

Oil and gas assignments and leases were declared null and void by the decision, which ordered an accounting of oil taken from the field.

FIND BUSINESS BY GOING AFTER IT

The A. M. Robinson company, one of the Atlanta's largest and best-known wholesale drygoods houses, reports an excellent business during the last week. Many out-of-town dealers were in the house making purchases and reports from over the territory served by this concern indicate general conditions are on the upgrade.

All of the salesmen are out on the road and most of them have been sending in some excellent business during the past few days.

Says Brothers Slew Parents 14 Years Ago

Cotesville, Pa., July 26.—Emphatic denial of having caused the death of their parents fourteen years ago was made today by Benjamin F. Dorsheimer, of Atlantic City, and Chester A. Dorsheimer, Harrisburg, Pa., who are under arrest on charges preferred by their brother, Frank E. Dorsheimer.

Benjamin was arrested when he alighted from a train here last night, and Chester was taken into custody at York, Pa., where he is treasurer of a manufacturing plant. Benjamin said to be in the real estate business at Atlantic City, was formerly in the hotel business in Cotesville, Allenstown and Parkersburg, W. Va. They will be given a hearing Tuesday afternoon at Gap, Pa., where the warrants for their arrest were sworn out.

The accusing brother charges that Benjamin and Chester caused their parents' death in Lancaster, Pa., fourteen years ago by gas asphyxiation. The aged couple were found dead in bed with a gas jet turned on. Dorsheimer, the father of the three men, was a liquor dealer and reputed to be wealthy. After he and his wife were found dead Benjamin was made executor of the estate.

Asked today why he had waited fourteen years to bring a murder charge against his brothers, Frank said that important witnesses had refused to talk about the case because they had been intimidated. As the years passed, he said, they talked freely about the circumstances of the death of the aged couple.

Frank did not divulge the names of the witnesses, but said he had sufficient information to justify the murder charge.

Benjamin Dorsheimer, in jail today, said that his brother Frank had been talking about the circumstances of their parents' death for many years.

Chester Dorsheimer denounced the charges when arrested at York and expressed a desire to make a legal fight for his freedom.

TO REOPEN HEARINGS IN MAYFIELD CONTEST

Washington, July 26.—Chairman Spencer, of the senate committee, announced today that he had ordered the reopening of the contest over the seat of Senator Mayfield, democrat, Texas, announced today that at an executive session of that body held recently at

Atlantans Join New Club At Popular Florida Resort

Prominent Atlantans are joining the new country club, shown above, to be erected at St. Andrews Bay, Fla., for the coming season.

ATLANTANS JOIN—2 cols.

Plans for a magnificent new Country club at St. Andrews Bay, Florida, are nearing completion, and actual construction is expected to begin within a fortnight, according to Walter L. Van De Wiele, of New York, secretary of the club, who is stopping in Atlanta this week at the Biltmore hotel.

St. Andrew's bay is only 230 miles south of Atlanta and scores of Atlantans visit the beautiful section along the gulf coast each year. W. B. Baker, president of the Atlantic Ice & Coal company, of this city, owns a large orange grove near St. Andrew and is a member of the new club. Other Atlantans who love the great outdoors, fishing, boating, hunting, racing, hiking and salt-water bathing, have joined the club, according to Mr. Van De Wiele.

In addition to the club a log cabin will be built near the coast, on Pine Log creek, known as one of the finest hunting sections in the south. This plan was decided upon to give hunters that outdoor life on the coast which is appreciated and sought after by most men and sportsmen.

Construction of a railroad line to connect St. Andrew's bay with the Central of Georgia and the Atlanta and St. Andrew's Bay road will be in soon, it is learned, offering improved facilities for those who prefer to leave automobiles at home.

Atlantic City permission was given for a reopening of the case along strictly limited lines.

Representatives of George E. B. Pelly, the republican candidate contesting Mayfield's election, would be allowed, under the plan, to enter evidence as to whether in six specific counties in Texas, to be selected later, there had been intimidation or duress used to affect the casting of ballots.

Senator Mayfield's counsel would be notified in advance as to what districts are chosen by Pelly. The committee expects to sit in Washington in November to hear testimony.

At the conclusion of the last congress, the committee held that the evidence concerning unlawful expenditures was insufficient to justify it in reporting adversely against his seating. Attorneys then were notified that opportunity would be given them to argue the question as to whether other phases of the campaign could be investigated and it was on this point that the Atlantic City meeting acted, Senator Spencer said.

MANY NEW ACCOUNTS FOR HOSIERY LINE

Leo Frankel, southern distributor of "As-You-Like-It Hosiery," states that during the last month he has opened up a number of new accounts, and that his business has been showing a substantial growth every month this year.

The "As-You-Like-It" line of hosiery is sold by leading department stores and specialty shops in every part of the south.

Mr. Frankel states that since opening up this territory the popularity of this well-known brand of hosiery has spread to where it is now one of the leading sellers.

DR. GRIFFIN REPORTS SPLENDID PRACTICE

Dr. E. G. Griffin, proprietor of the Gate City Dental Parlor, who also operates offices in Columbus and Chattanooga, has just returned from a few days vacation in the mountains of North Carolina.

Dr. Griffin states that all of his offices have been doing a splendid practice this month and that the outlook for a continued growth in business is excellent.

Masher Is Fined.

Miami, Fla., July 26.—Tom Byrnes, a real estate salesman, was sentenced in municipal court today to pay a fine of $25 and costs and serve ten days in jail on a charge of being disorderly by insulting women by attempting to flirt with them while driving in his automobile of French make. The sentence was based on an attempt to flirt with two daughters of a prominent railway man while the young women were waiting at a theater for their brother to take them home in the family car.

THE HOME COMFORT Verintena Magazine Furnace

HOT WATER, VAPOR OR STEAM HEATING

The Home Comfort Verintena Magazine Furnace is slightly higher in first cost than some furnaces—due to the more expensive materials used in its construction—but after the first cost the real economy of this plant is appreciated in the small cost of its operation. Burns Anthracite or crushed coke and consumes 25 to 33 1-3% less fuel than any other system. Provides a comfortable and uniform temperature throughout the house, requiring attention about twice every twenty-four hours. It is simple in construction and may be repaired in any locality where there is a machine shop, thus eliminating the necessity of ordering and waiting for expensive parts. One of these furnaces will assure permanent satisfaction in the heating of your home.

This illustration shows the famous Home Comfort Verintena Magazine Furnace, developed and perfected after 45 years' experience in the construction and operation of steam plants.

FREE If you are planning the installation of a furnace write or call for our 24-page free booklet, which contains valuable information that every prospective buyer of a furnace should know. This booklet will not only aid you in making a wise purchase but will be of great service in the upkeep and proper operation of your heating plant. Our supply of these booklets is limited. Write or call for yours at once.

NEW 100 FRANKLIN MAKES RECORD RUN

Six hundred and ninety-six miles over the worst part of Yellowstone Trail, through mountainous country, at times having to "feel" his way through the heavy smoke from raging forest fires, in 22 hours and 7 minutes elapsed time, is a record recently established by Ralph Fournier of Howard Pierce, Inc., Franklin dealer at Butte, Mont., with a new high-powered Franklin demi-sedan.

Completion of this round trip within a 24-hour period is a feat that has been often attempted but never accomplished by any single car and driver, it is said.

Fournier's actual running time was 20 hours and 12 1/2 minutes. He lost 40 minutes on account of heavy smoke.

At the close of the run, car was inspected by observers and with the exception of inconsequential items requiring less than 15 minutes to adjust, car was found to be mechanically perfect.

Safety Feature Helps Women To Drive Cars, Say Chandler Officials

Although many women are freely accorded the ability to drive automobiles no less skillfully than men it is not uncommon to hear some women say that they cannot learn to drive because they are too nervous.

What makes them nervous? Undoubtedly fear of criticism and the fear of doing something improperly keeps many women from attempting to drive. They have seen the awkwardness of beginners. They have noticed the attention that is attracted by failure to shift gears without clashing and they dread similar experiences.

The shifting of gears is the most difficult part of driving for women as well as for men. Few drivers even after they have become experts are able to shift the ordinary sliding gears without occasional clashes.

With the traffic transmission, which is always in mesh, gears cannot be clashed, and for that reason the Chandler, of which it is an exclusive feature, has made driving possible for many women who formerly believed they could not learn.

Many drivers of long experience, too, have found this new gear a great advantage. The facility with which it is operated and its advantages as a safety feature are the subjects of many enthusiastic letters received at the Chandler factory.

"I had a thrilling experience coming from Hoozie Falls to Troy, N. Y.," writes one motorist. "It was raining and the roads were slippery, and while descending a steep grade I saw a car turn turtle. It was caused by applying the brakes too suddenly. I shifted my car into second and had no trouble."

"On Hoozie street hill a woman driving a sedan was obliged to stop for a trolley car and when she applied the brakes her car swayed onto the sidewalk, doing considerable damage." Although going 25 miles an hour, I easily changed to second gear with the traffic transmission and descended the hill in full control."

Replacement To Reach 2,000,000 Automobiles This Year, Says Hannum

A brisk fall business is looked for by George H. Hannum, president and general manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, Pontiac, Mich.

The presidential nomination and political party issues are pretty well settled, he states, so that any uncertainty in business caused by presidential elections may be eliminated from consideration.

"With 15,500,000 passenger cars in service, the replacement market alone amounts to 2,000,000 cars this year, which is sufficient to kill the old bugaboo regarding the saturation point," Mr. Hannum points out.

"The agricultural situation is very much improved and there is prospect of the farmer getting back into the market, something which we have been expecting for a long time."

"Rates on loans are exceptionally low and there seems to be plenty of money available for legitimate enterprises. You will also note that the stock market has been a rising one lately."

A number of companies have announced their new models or are about to announce them, which will clarify the situation by removing the reason for many motorists deferring the purchase of a car.

"In addition, there is a marked tendency towards higher prices for motor cars, which is always a favorable factor for the retail trade."

"It is the combination of these signs that gives promise of a good fall business."

Despite considerable talk of a poor spring, our retail business for the first six months of this year was 35 per cent greater than for the same period last year—the banner sales year in the motor car business.

"I really think that much of the pessimism late this spring was due to the fact that the public and motor car dealers, too, did not yet fully appreciate that the motor car business is an all-year-round business. Those disappointed with the June and July sales did not fully realize that the splendid sales during the winter months took up much of the slack which we formerly expected in the form of a boom period during the summer months."

Chattooga Masons
Elect John Rose
For 24th Time

Summerville, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—At the twenty-third annual meeting of the Chattooga county Masonic convention, which closed here Thursday night, John M. Rose, of Lyerly, was reelected worshipful master for the twenty-fourth time in succession, he having served as worshipful master of the convention since its organization.

Other officers elected are J. W. A. Justice, of Trion, senior warden; A. E. Strange, of Berryton, junior warden; S. C. Martin, of Summerville, secretary and treasurer; H. A. Powell, of Summerville, senior deacon; G. A. Kling, of Menlo, junior deacon; C. P. Hamilton, of near Trion, senior steward; Ross Thomas, of Trion, junior steward; the Rev. G. P. Gary, of Summerville, chaplain.

The meeting this year is said to have been the best yet held, many prominent Masons from all parts of the state taking part in the exercises. Wednesday's session was devoted to routine business, the appointing of committees, etc.

Stinson Addresses North Georgia Meet Of A. M. E. Church

Marietta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) Calling upon negroes of Georgia to seek more education along industrial lines, live honestly and work with an unflinching zeal as the light of day and a new era in the progress of the race is being ushered in, Richard D. Stinson, president of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial school, tonight delivered the principal address to pastors, Sunday school teachers and superintendents to the North Georgia A. M. E. conference. Sessions will close tomorrow night. Rev. B. V. Thornton is presiding elder of the Marietta district.

In the course of his address, Rev. Stinson said: "The negro race has made remarkable headway in many lines of undertaking in every part of the country, but especially in the south."

"Our home life, the care and training of our children to work with their hands, and the great art of honesty and self respect, must not be overlooked."

"We have no time to lose with idlers or loafers. Every negro girl should know how to do some work with her hands."

"Negro boys should be taught the gospel of honest, hard work six days in the week, and seven if necessary."

"Too much pleasure, too many pretty clothes, late hours at night and tampering with strong drink have checked the progress of races, individuals and peoples who have had far better opportunities than our people have had."

"Negro leaders must be true themselves, must know and love the work they are striving to do."

"The colored youth except an industrial education more than he needs any other thing except the Christian religion."

"There is no time for fault finding, and no time for whining."

"We have come a long way in 60 years, we have just begun to see daylight. If we are big enough in mind and heart to know how to humble ourselves and withstand the rugged and rough ways up which we are to go, if we are willing to count the cost, we will be given opportunities in proportion."

LOWNDES CONVICTS LIFT SHORT STRIKE, RETURN TO WORK

Valdosta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) Striking convicts of the Lowndes county convict camp, who have been giving considerable trouble for the past two days, agreed to return to work today. Several men on the gang refused to go to work yesterday and were immediately locked in their cages and fed only bread and water.

This failed to produce the desired results and the strikers were "tied up," this being a form of punishment allowed by the state. After experiencing the discomfort of having their hands tied up, they agreed to surrender and return to work.

HAYNES IS REELECTED DODGE BROTHERS HEAD

Present officers and directors of Dodge Brothers, Inc., with the exception of the chairman of the board, were reelected at the annual meeting of the stockholders Tuesday, July 15, at 2 o'clock. A resolution was passed abolishing this office. Russell Huff, for nearly ten years chief engineer of Dodge Brothers, was elected as a new member of the board.

The stockholders felt that the addition of Mr. Huff to the board would strengthen it materially in view of his long experience as an automotive engineer of the highest standing. He is a former president of the Society of Automotive Engineers and one of the pioneer designers of the industry.

The officers chosen were: President and general manager, Frederick J. Haynes; vice president, Arthur T. Waterfall; treasurer, John Ballantyne; secretary and assistant treasurer, Harry V. Popeny; assistant secretary, R. J. Fry.

The last fiscal year was the largest in Dodge Brothers' history and the first six months of 1924 were greater than any corresponding period in point of deliveries to retail purchasers.

Balloon - Tired
Hudson Easier To Steer, Report

With full-size balloon tires, the new Hudson cars are nevertheless steering with greater ease and stability than any previous super-sixes, according to J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., Grant Co., Hudson distributor for this territory. This is due to a newly designed steering mechanism which has been incorporated.

"When we heard that Hudson had gone in for balloons," said Mr. Goldsmith, "we expected wonderfully fine and easy-riding results, but we wondered if there wouldn't be parking and steering troubles. We had heard gossip of such troubles."

"We discovered that the Hudsons, while essentially the same cars as previously have been so redesigned that all these supposed difficulties have been overcome. Hudson did not rush into balloon tires, but took plenty of time to experiment on all the steps necessary to make them safe and convenient under all conditions."

"Having driven this new Hudson with many owners of previous super-sixes, I can join them in saying that the balloon-tired Hudson is the steadiest and easiest-steering car on the road we have ever had. The mechanical changes which bring this about are original, simple, exclusive and perfectly effective."

"With the new fenders, the clean-cut and low-hung lines, and the balloon tires, the Hudson super-six is one of the handsomest motor cars I have ever seen. It is a delight to the eye. There are many new refinements."

"Hudson sales continue in their seasonally rapid up-curve. The super-six is now enjoying its biggest volume we ever knew. The coach is 75 per cent of our Hudson business, yet the old stand-by demand for the Hudson sedans and the super-six open cars is also running ahead of previous years. The Hudson factory is now at its highest point of super-six production, yet we are actually short of cars."

Lincoln Friday, Colonel B. L. Bugz, receiver of the A. B. & A. railway, and his secretary, J. W. Kemp.

Colonel Bugz made an instructive talk on the relation of transportation to prosperity.

MACON ORPHANAGE IS RAZED BY FLAMES

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—A one-story dormitory building at the Hepzibah orphanage, located on Breezy Hill, was destroyed by fire today.

The building contained seven rooms and housed sixteen boys and two matrons. It was partly covered by insurance. The fire originated from an overheated stovepipe.

Texas Oil Concern Loses Injunction Fight Against Georgia Firm

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.) A petition for injunction against the Georgia-Carolina Oil company, to prevent them from using the name "Texas" in their advertising, was denied by the Texas district court here, has been denied by Judge William A. Barrett.

The petition charged the Georgia-Carolina company with operating a truck in Macon painted the same color as those used by the Texas company for the purpose of deceiving the public into thinking they were buying oil from the Texas company, and charged further that the defendants indulged in other practices that would constitute unfair competition.

The defendant company contended the Texas company was making an effort to restrain all companies from advertising the fact that they were marketing Texas oils, even though the products placed on the market may have come from the state of Texas.

A committee of Habersham county citizens was also named to go to Gainesville Monday to meet government representatives seeking a site for a national park in the southern Appalachian mountains, and to urge the selection of the site at the junction of South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia.

This committee will press claims before the government committee which will be entertained by Congressman Thomas M. Bell at his country home on Tonah mountain, and in Gainesville.

It is proposed to use money voted in the bond issue mainly to complete the hard-surfaced road from the Hall county line to Dick's hill, toward Toccoa, and from Cornelia to Tallulah Falls, and to improve the roads to Lake Burton, Nacoochee valley, Clarksville to Dick's hill, from Cornelia to the Chattahoochee river at Duncan's bridge and from View to Baldwin.

20% more power—50% less upkeep— no valve grinding—no carbon cleaning

The Willys-Knight has the most powerful engine of its size ever built—and the quietest!

Here is a car with all the thrill of 42 horsepower—a car you can drive 50 miles and more an hour, hour after hour—without overheating—without loss of power—without engine trouble—without carbon cleaning—without ever needing valve grinding.

The Knight-type engine is the only engine in the world that actually improves with use. Simply because it has silent sliding sleeve-valves instead of pounding, noisy tappets.

Tests galore—conducted by unbiased, independent engineers of both America and Europe—have long since proved the superior power and stamina of the Knight engine over poppet-valve engines.

Think of the pleasure of owning a car whose engine literally is even quieter and smoother at 15,000 miles than when new!

While the majority of automobile owners keep changing from one car to another, Willys-Knight owners keep right on with their Willys-Knights.

It is common for Willys-Knight owners to report 50,000 miles and more without spending a cent for repairs on the engine. Think of the economy and satisfaction of that!

The Willys-Knight is the easiest steering car in America. Eight Timken bearings are used in the front axle. The average car uses no Timken bearings in the front axle, only ordinary bushings which wear quickly, cannot be adjusted and cause hard steering.

If you want a car of beauty and distinction—a car whose power is smooth as silk—a car that makes driving an everlasting pleasure—turn to the Knight!

HYLAN'S HINT CAUSES FLURRY IN NEW YORK

New York, July 26.—Intimation by Mayor Hylan, who is now in California with William Randolph Hearst, that he may run for the democratic nomination for governor if the progressives demand it, caused a flurry in political circles today.

George W. Olvany, the new leader of the Tammany Hall, withheld comment, saying, "I do not think I should say anything now." Mr. Olvany recently urged Governor Smith to enter the race for reelection.

It is no secret that there is a wide political gap between the governor and the mayor. The mayor has the confidence of Mr. Hearst. On Thursday the governor issued a statement at Albany, directed at Mr. Hearst, in which he said that when the democratic party "needs advice it will go to democrats for it and not to either demagogue or crackpot."

Friends of Governor Smith who talked with him over the telephone, learned that he would not talk for publication until he had seen the text of Mayor Hylan's statement.

The governor, although urged by men high in the party ranks to become a candidate for reelection, has never given a definite answer. He has expressed a desire to return to private life.

BLOCK QUITS POSITION ON HOSPITAL BOARD

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Nick M. Block, chairman of the Macon hospital commission, today tendered his resignation to Mayor Luther Williams. Mr. Block gave his reason the fact he is out of the city so much of the time that he cannot give the institution the time it deserves.

Mayor Williams announced that he will appoint A. R. Willingham to succeed Mr. Block. Walter Deane, another commissioner, resigned last week, but was prevailed on to reconsider. Efforts are to be made to increase the revenue of the hospital, which is now operating at a loss of $75,000 a year.

BIBB TAX VALUATION INCREASES $258,080

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Bibb county's tax digest, completed today, shows a total of $46,252,435 worth of taxable property in this county, an increase of $258,080 over last year. If the tax rate of $17 a thousand is fixed again this year, the income to the county will be $787,668.30. The books were sent to the comptroller general at Atlanta today for approval.

Coach Price Same as Open Model Hudson

The first enclosed car in history ever to sell for an open-car price is the newly announced Hudson coach. Mounted on the standard super-six chassis, it sells at an identical mark with the Hudson phaeton, a seven-passenger open car.

For two or three years the gap between the cost of an open and an enclosed car has been narrowing. There have been forecasts from time to time that this gap would finally close.

Since the fall of 1921 the Hudson Motor Car company has specialized on its coaches, a type of body which it created. These coaches have now become 75 per cent of Hudson's business.

Both Hudson and Essex cars are now equipped with full-size ballroom tires.

Besides the coaches there are: the Hudson speedster, phaeton, and five-passenger and seven-passenger sedan and the Essex touring car.

ATLANTA EDUCATOR GLYNN SCHOOL CHIEF

Brunswick, Ga., July 26.—Charles E. Dryden, superintendent of Glynn county schools for the past four years, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the board of education and was released from his contract to serve in that capacity. Professor Dryden explained he had accepted a position as superintendent of public schools in University City, Mo.

R. C. Little, former assistant superintendent of schools at Atlanta, will succeed him.

Mr. Little, who resides at 120 Ponce de Leon avenue is well known in educational circles.

He succeeds Superintendent C. E. Dryden, who has been in charge of the Brunswick schools for five years and who has been elected to a division superintendency in the city of St. Louis. Until five years ago the present state school superintendent of Georgia, N. H. Ballard, had charge of the Brunswick schools for 15 years.

Mr. Little came to Atlanta from Rome, Ala., where he was president of Roanoke college for three years. He is a graduate of Emory university and has done post-graduate work at the University of Chicago.

For a number of years Mr. Little was a teacher in the Boys' High school, holding the position of head of the department of mathematics, and later was head of the department of English. For one year he was principal of University School for Boys, from which position he was elected to the position of assistant superintendent and business manager of the Atlanta schools with W. F. Dykes as superintendent.

Upon the election of W. A. Sutton to the superintendency Mr. Little went to the Georgia Military academy as head of the department of English. During the world war and later Mr. Little was an instructor in history and English in Atlanta-Southern Dental college, and during the summer of 1921 he gave a course in education at Emory university.

Mr. Little will move to Brunswick early in August.

The Glynn county and Brunswick schools are all operated under one administration, similar to the Macon-Bibb and Augusta-Richmond system. Dr. N. H. Ballard, state superintendent of schools, was head of that system prior to his connection with the state system.

Mr. Little will go to Brunswick some time next month to assume charge of the schools there.

DR. WRAY IS NAMED DIRECTOR OF MEMORIAL

Elberton, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Dr. W. A. Wray, pastor of the First Baptist church here, has been appointed one of the district directors of the Mercer Alumni War Memorial program. Dr. Wray, a graduate of Mercer, was given the honorary degree of D. D. at the last commencement at Mercer university.

He will assist the Macon institution in the plans to build on the Mercer campus a memorial building in honor of alumni who fell in the World war. The eighth district, which embraces the counties of Franklin, Hart, Elbert, Madison, Oglethorpe, Greene, Clarke, Oconee, Putnam, Morgan, Walton and Newton will be in his field. He will be assisted by a second congressional director, to be appointed later.

Equalizers Seek Big Land Tract 'Lost' in Sumter

BY R. C. MORAN.

Americus, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Sumter county tax equalizers are looking for 22,780 acres of land strangely missing from the county tax digest. The land is somewhere in the county. This much is known from authentic surveys going back to the date when Sumter was carved as a new unit out of Lee county. But it can't be located.

When the county was originally created the state survey shows it contained 341,700 acres. The equalizers, in searching for missing land, have allowed 4,000 acres, ceded to Macon county, in what is known as "The Cut-Off." 3,000 acres transferred to Lee county in the "Lee-Sumter Swap" years ago; 7,000 acres embraced within the city limits of Americus, Plains, Leslie, DeSoto and Andersonville and assessed as "city property," and 10,000 acres used as rights-of-way by railroads, highways, school lands and churches. This totals 24,000 acres.

Taking this away from the original 341,700 acres in the county as created, there remains 317,700 acres to be accounted for. The tax board has found or taxpayers have voluntarily returned for taxation 284,000. This leaves 22,780 acres in the county, but upon which no taxes are now being paid, and so far as can be learned by the members of the board have never borne any part of the expense of state and county government.

Thousands of cards have been sent taxpayers, urging them to return their property for taxation properly described by land lot and district numbers, but these have brought few replies. Without such information, men in the board say, it will be impossible to locate the missing acres; the state tax department says these must be brought into the tax digests, and there the situation stands.

TORRID WEATHER KILLS LIVE STOCK IN SPARTA SECTION

Sparta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—The intense heat of the past few days has caused the death of several head of livestock in this county, most of them being mules pulling lumber wagons. Teams are hauling the same amount of lumber that has been their custom to carry at a load, but the torrid weather is too much for the animals.

Many lumbermen have decided to discontinue hauling until the heat wave breaks. Most of the lumber has been hauled by truck.

EMBEZZLING LAID TO POSTMASTER AT MILLEDGEVILLE

Macon, Ga., July 26.—Olin Robinson, who was removed as postmaster at Milledgeville, Ga., on Thursday, was arrested late today on a charge of embezzling funds of the United States government. A shortage of $1,000 is said to have been discovered in Robinson's accounts.

Hugh T. Cline has been installed as postmaster.

Robinson is alleged to have used the government funds for his personal checking account. Several irregular acts were said to have been discovered, among these the use of money received on C. O. D. parcel post packages, the tags being secreted.

Reports from Milledgeville state that the shortage of funds with the government was made good by relatives and friends after it was uncovered.

The Milledgeville postmaster's salary is $2,800 a year.

After his arrest, Robinson was brought to the United States marshal's office here and later was arraigned before Commissioner W. W. Martin, but waived examination and placed under $1,000 bond to the next term of federal court.

MACCABEES INSTALL NEW TENT AT MACON

Macon, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Organization of a large Macabee tent in Macon got under way early last week, with R. E. Leatherman, of Atlanta, state commander, and George Morton, new Macon district deputy for Macabees, in charge. Colonel Frank F. Herndon, T. W. Sammons and W. M. Shores, of this city, are assisting in preliminary work.

Mr. Morton is well-known in fraternal circles in the south and has already opened district headquarters here. Appointments of deputies for this district, lecturers and other office attaches will be made at an early date, he said today. Macon, it is learned here, is the first of a number of district offices to be opened in Georgia during the coming fall and winter, with intensive preliminary work in each district preceding the opening of offices.

State Commander Leatherman remained in Macon for three days during the week, conferring with local officials and others interested in organization work.

HARDWICK TO SPEAK TO HANCOCK VOTERS

Sparta, Ga., July 26.—(Special.)—Announcement has been made that Thomas W. Hardwick will speak at the courthouse here in the interest of his candidacy for United States senate Friday, August 1.

He was invited here several weeks ago for a joint debate with Senator Harris, but Senator Harris declined to meet him.

Central Property
AT AUCTION

Property In the Heart of Atlanta
To Be Sold at Public Outcry

THE property of Cotton Warehouses, Inc., shown on above plat will be sold at auction on Tuesday, July 29th, at eleven A. M., sale to take place on the premises. It is not often that such an opportunity is presented for prospective buyers to purchase property of this class at public sale, but this is a liquidation sale and under orders of court this valuable central parcel will go to the highest bidder.

NO one can ever hope to buy any nearer to the exact center of the city and secure a parcel with 30,000 square feet ground area; this property is directly across Ivy St. from the new Hurt Bldg. addition and is within one block of the Trust Co. of Ga. Bldg. The frontage on Ivy St. is 150 ft.; the property runs back between parallel side lines a distance of 200 ft.; but a portion of it extends back 210 ft. A 10-foot alley leads from Gilmer St., reaching the property at about its center and giving it the benefit of another street approach.

TERMS of sale: The sale will be made subject to an indebtedness of $70,000, which consists of a straight loan of $16,000, maturing April 26, 1925 and bearing interest at 6%. Also a series of six annual notes each for the principal sum of $9,000, maturing April, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930. These notes also bear interest at 6%. The difference between the price bid and this indebtedness of $70,000 is to be paid in cash.

TITLES to the property are perfect and any purchaser will have the right to examine same. For further information call on

Virginia Highlands

Is in a neighborhood already established and permanently assured of its delightful surroundings.

WHEN a homesite is selected, it is a comfortable feeling to know that not only will your individual site and its conveniences be to your liking, but that your neighboring homesites and their surroundings harmonize with yours.

SUCH is the satisfaction of those who will buy or build in Virginia Highlands.

ON its borders are beautiful homes and throughout the property are beautiful drives and boulevards, made more attractive by virgin shade, shrubbery and ornamental lighting.

AT hand there is every convenience for comfort and good health—the things that add to the pleasure of good living.

LAST but not least, a home in Atlanta means living in a progressive city with wonderful climate, splendid educational advantages, and opportunities for the head of the family to accumulate his full share of this world's goods.

VIRGINIA Highlands strongly appeals to careful and discriminating purchasers, and you can well afford to take an hour's time driving over the property and judging its merits for yourself.

COURTEOUS gentlemen, efficiently trained salesmen will serve you by phoning WALnut 4100.

In the Most Beautiful Section of the South's Fairest City Morningside

IN THIS commandingly attractive section, where the landscape is one continuous unfolding of scenic surprises, Nature left a pattern of compelling charm with which man has worked a transformation.

WHAT the eye saw, only a few months ago, as an open place that stretched broadly away to the quiet hills, is now a skillfully laid-out residential section that is destined, within a few brief years, to take a conspicuous place in the list of America's most distinguished residential sections.

NOR is this altogether a section in the rough, requiring the exercise of a fertile imagination to visualize; this section is in process of completion. Its wide streets that sweep smoothly into the blue distances are paved in the very best of paving workmanship—streets whose sightliness plainly proclaims the enduring character of the homes they will serve.

CURBING, walks, curbswards, gas and water mains and distribution lines, electric lights and telephone lines will shortly be in, established, finished. No tearing up or discomfort to purchasers later. And everywhere the landscape designer has worked with happy heart and an unstinted appropriation to create an abiding picture of grace and beauty—an ever fresh loveliness for Morningside dwellers; a scene of unforgettable charm for visitors.

Morningside Drive

THIS drive will be heralded as one of America's most captivating drives. A wondrous highway, 70 feet wide, swinging from Piedmont avenue on the west to Lanier Boulevard on the east designed to be a truly picturesque link between Ansley Park and Druid Hills. Elms and Crepe Myrtles have been liberally planted throughout its length, by the Atlanta Woman's Club, as a perpetual memorial to that great son of Dixie—Woodrow Wilson. In a few years this drive, well over two miles long, will be like a cool, comforting vaulted nave in a great cathedral—a drive destined for wide fame.

Other Splendid Drives

SHERWOOD Road, Cumberland Road and Lanier Boulevard will vie with Morningside Drive in lavish scenic adornment. Broad, smooth, beckoning roads. All improvements are in progress and a great portion of them will be completed during 1924. The fortunate purchaser of property in Morningside will shortly witness every improvement ready for his requisition.

THE improvement program of Morningside and North Highlands is now under way and contemplates the expenditure of more than a half million dollars. The greater part of these improvements is expected to be rushed to completion in 1924. When all improvements are completed it is estimated that distinctively choice homesites will be provided for approximately 50,000 persons.

MORNINGSIDE and North Highlands lie wholly within Atlanta city limits. The section is high, slightly and greatly to be desired. Purchasers are assured that every precaution has been taken to forestall the purchase of lots by any persons other than those socially eligible for residence in this character of a community.

Transportation

THE Highland Avenue Electric Line with its big cars and splendid service will be extended to afford efficient transportation service to the property's eastern approach, while the Cross Town Express, with commodious, easy-riding, safe buses will serve residents nearer the western approach.

A FEW years hence will see Morningside widely known as one of America's most vividly beautiful residence sections. Rapid enhancement in values is inevitable. A prompt selection will secure a lot which will give you lasting satisfaction.

WE WILL welcome an opportunity to send a courteous representative to take you on an inspection tour of the property, at your own convenient time. Our representative will fully explain Morningside's unique scenic features.

OUT OF THE BOG.

Reports of excellent crop conditions continue to come from all sections of Georgia.

The cotton-growing counties of northeast Georgia report the best crops in all respects they have had in years.

In the Athens area conditions are practically as good. The same is true of northwest Georgia.

In the Columbus area it is the same story, and so throughout middle and south Georgia.

In the peach belt the early varieties were marketed with a small loss, but the Elberta harvest will be profitable and the average for the year will be satisfactory, although not as large as anticipated.

The commercial peach income will be nearer seven than ten million of dollars, possibly. On the other hand the melon growers are doing well and the sweet potato grower, who knows how to grade and market, is reaping a harvest. In all of these belts the growing cotton and corn crops are good.

In southwest Georgia, in the larger cotton plantation area, the cotton is more promising in the acre production than in the pre-vee-weil days.

All over Georgia the reports are promising. Farmers have raised their feed and food on a larger scale than ever before, and the adoption of standardized systems of balanced agricultural operations—thereby utilizing surplus acreage formerly devoted to cotton—has made several other-than-cotton money crops. With improved marketing facilities and with systematic cooperation these are proving profitable this year.

Every indication points to a million-bale cotton production in Georgia this fall, but this will depend upon the weather and the farmers' own alertness during the next two or three weeks. This is a critical moment. Cotton has been brought to its present satisfactory condition by the application of the rules laid down by The Constitution in the spring of 1922 for growing cotton successfully under weevil conditions. One of the most important of these rules was continuous cultivation and continuous poisoning until the cotton began to open. Until that time the bolls are subject to weevil puncture. The farmer must work now, with every indication of success in his hands, with as much diligence and intelligence and perhaps even more perseverance than before.

Our farmers are pulling out of the muck and bog of boll weevil depression, and are setting their feet firmly on the open path that ascends the hill of prosperity. The situation today justifies that view.

But the farmer cannot stop. He must keep going with his head lifted and his face to the front.

There is optimism in the Georgia situation, born of travail, but hard work and economy and frugality and an even closer adherence to the principles of better farming, better marketing and a better system will alone carry the farmer to the top of the hill.

AT THE ALL-DAY SINGING.

We get back to old times, old scenes, old friends, and the old meeting house in the shadows of the pines, in the reading of "The Sacred Harp and All-Day Singing," by the veteran editor, John T. Hearn, of Bowdon, Ga., in a recent issue of The Christian Advocate.

This notable article, which gives the history of the inspiring, musical measures of the "Sacred Harp" hymns, will be of interest to Baptists and Methodists alike, as well as the general reader who may have memories of good times at some all-day singing, when the old hymns made the hearts of the brethren keep time to their music.

And, contemplate this alluring, palatable picture of an all-day singing—"even unto this day"—as given in Editor Hearn's excellent reminiscent story—

"One would have to attend an all-day singing to appreciate the fervent devotion and the social hospitality of these wonderful gatherings. Long improvised tables near the church, sometimes in an adjacent grove, are loaded with delicious food, such as beef, pork, chicken, homemade and baker's bread, pies and cakes galore.

"After the feast, in which family reunions and genuine southern hospitality are in evidence, the singers repair to the church and continue the services until a late hour in the afternoon.

"In addition to the regular program, it is proper to say that the social features of the all-day singing result in some happy matrimonial alliances. In fact, many of the young people are content to remain in their automobiles a good part of the time and allow their elders to do the singing. Thus all-day singings are productive of other good besides that of cultivating the art of music and spirit of worship. Many happy homes in the southland date their origin from the ever-remembered all-day singings."

For "automobiles" substitute the jolly buggy, drawn by the family horse and the slow, but certain, ox-cart, and one will realize something of the distance in time the all-day singing has traveled to meet this modern day.

But the spirit of it is the same today as of old, when the singers made the rafters ring with—

"Where, oh, where
Are the Hebrew children, Safe over in the Promised Land," and the other hymns, with an uplifting ring and swing to them.

Of these songs of the "Sacred Harp," Editor Hearn says well, in his introductory historical lines, that "an honorable institution that has survived for nearly a century, and that has had but little publicity through the secular or religious press, is surely, at this late day, entitled to recognition."

And recognition it certainly has, as witness the interest in the all-day singings in Georgia and Tennessee as well as other southern sections.

The mere announcement of an all-day "Sacred Harp" singing is enough to crowd a modern auditorium to the doors.

BOARD'S GOOD WORK.

The Georgia state board of entomology is to be earnestly commended for the good practical work it is doing in helping the farmers combat the boll weevil.

At this writing the board, through the small revolving fund created by the assembly two years ago, has supplied more than 100 car loads of calcium arsenate this year at a price of less than 12 cents a pound. In addition to this it has, with a number of peddlers cars, carried the poison to the very gates of farms all over the state, and left experienced field men in each locality to demonstrate the correct application.

From its offices it has kept in close touch, in the most useful manner possible, with all the farmers, strengthening their morale, and always pounding the tried and proven rules for growing cotton under boll weevil conditions.

The Georgia board of entomology began in 1922, on an intensive, practical basis, to "sell" the farmers of Georgia the correct methods for dealing with the boll weevil. The rules it adheres to are specifically those emphasized in The Constitution's survey in the spring of 1922. They include the use of poison as soon as the cotton is chopped out, and not after a 10 per cent infestation has developed.

The system and persistency of its campaign has been most heartening, and especially in putting theory into practice. In the latter respect it has differed from the work of many governmental and scientific agencies that rely only upon bulletins, the half of which are so technical that the farmer is lost in a maze of phraseology before he begins to comprehend what it is he is supposed to be reading.

Farmers of Georgia have had and are getting a great amount of valuable service from this department of the state government.

BIG TOBACCO CROP.

It is estimated that 25,000,000 pounds of tobacco will be grown and marketed in south Georgia this season.

The marketing season opens all over the south on August 6, and Georgia warehousemen in several counties are prepared for the rush. Anticipating the production to be fully twice that of 1923, the warehousemen and the buyers alike are prepared.

Most of the Georgia tobacco has been cured and is stored by growers, awaiting the official opening. The tobacco is reported generally as of an exceptionally fine quality. The yield per acre has been extra good, and while the cotton farmers are unusually optimistic over production prospects, the tobacco farmers are equally as optimistic.

The tobacco acreage in Georgia is increasing each year. The industry is new and is one of the results of boll weevil infestation, but it has already demonstrated that in a large part of south Georgia counties a perior grade of tobacco can be grown to great advantage, and the farmers—at first unused to the proper methods of cultivation and curing—are learning rapidly, as was proven on a rather potential scale in 1923, and as will be proven in a much larger scale this year.

Marketing associations and tobacco companies have been in open warfare in some states where tobacco-growing is conducted on a large scale, but this is not true of Georgia, although reports have been circulated that the agents of the Imperial Tobacco company of Great Britain have been responsible for the increased acreage in Georgia and for the large number of cultural demonstrators brought into the Georgia belt from North Carolina.

Colonel Burg, head of the A. B. & A. railroad, has recently very vigorously refuted these statements. He has taken a keen interest in the tobacco-growing industry in Georgia from its incipency, and is as familiar with conditions regarding this industry as any man in the state. He says:

"Neither the Imperial Tobacco company nor any other tobacco company has expended any money for the employment of demonstrators or for the culture of tobacco in Georgia, nor have they exerted any influence to control the demonstrators; on the contrary the tobacco companies have been many requests to send buyers into certain south Georgia points in order that warehouses and markets might be established. The demonstrators are employed by chambers of commerce, sales warehouses and farmers.

"There is no obligation on the farmers to dispose of their crops through the auction warehouses, but they dispose of them according to their best judgment. Even after the tobacco is placed on the auction floor and has been sold the farmer does not have to accept the bid but can take his tobacco off the floor and take it back home or to other market."

There is every good reason to believe that tobacco, within a few years, will become one of the major money crops of Georgia. In the meantime it is at the present contributing a large part to Georgia's agricultural prosperity this year.

MUD-BOUND, AND WHY?

The most beautiful section of the eastern mountains, incomparable to any section of country on the Atlantic side of the Rockies and unsurpassed by any section in the Sierras, is that great blending of mountain and lake, stream and lake in the southeastern Appalachians where the four states of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee meet.

Highland, North Carolina, is the heart of this beautiful mountain zone, which runs down through Rabun into Tallulah Falls, Ga. Highland is the highest incorporated town in North Carolina, and the mountains and valleys of Rabun and Union and Towns and the cataracts at Tallulah and Tulepe are world-famous for their beauty.

Thousands of people flock into this country every summer, ten times more, perhaps, now than three or four years ago, before The Constitution undertook the work of a crusader in pointing out the health and recreational advantages of this famed section.

It is yet to be proven that the Volstead act was violated by the Ritz-Carlton management, and for personal profit.

By the arrangement of the president and the secretary-treasurer of the company operating the hotel, it appears that the government is proceeding in an orderly manner, and endeavoring to ascertain the truth, and the rights of innocent investors.

If it is even proven that the lessees of the hotel have so violated law that a padlock must be placed upon the doors, that in itself does not implicate the owners of the property who must suffer an even greater property penalty, though very probably innocent.

The wise course certainly will be for the hotel management to give every aid to the government in seeing that law is respected, and that the rich as well as the poor shall be penalized alike.

If the management has offended the penalty of law is just as deserved as to the humblest and poorest of the east side bootleggers.

In the meantime, however, there are serious faults and serious conflicting features in the intricate machinery carrying the 18th amendment, and the padlock clause, as written, is one of them.

It's time for the fireman of the Sun to take a holiday and let a perspiring world cool off.

As soon as the political rumormonger is in office, the other fellow is working like blazes to get him out.

Is it possible that those white Indians had just passed through the whitewash annex of the Cleveland convention?

A bill to repeal the necessity for work would no doubt meet with "unanimous consent" throughout the country.

It's the go-away season now, but in a few weeks they'll all be coming home to rest-up.

A literary critic ends his review with—"We have more novels than we have time to read."

As ever, the dark horses throw very little light on the situation.

weather is no good road, it matters not how much time and money have been spent in grading and in creating a sand-clay surface.

Most of the mountain so-called good roads have only a clay surface, which is all the more impassable during a season of rain.

Travelers going into the mountains of the far west find paved boulevards everywhere. In the famous Sierras in California every town and hamlet is linked with asphalt. Why is it not so in this great section, otherwise as favored as any in the world, Switzerland not excepted?

North Carolina with all of her boasted permanent road development has not yet reached the Highland section, as she should have done long ago. South Carolina has expended too much in temporary roads, and Georgia is merely doing the best she can under restricted road opportunities, a serious lack of finances and a reactionary road policy.

Mud-bound! That is a poor advertisement for the greatest national asset that these states have in conjunction—their beautiful mountain country.

The authorities should awaken to this situation—and now. In a week or two, perhaps, the roads may be all right again and recreationists will find the Georgia-Carolina mountain country unsurpassed for health and rest and pleasure.

The point is—permanent, and not merely good-weather highways, should be built into this wonderful mountain section. And this character of roads must be built, if we would improve and appreciate that with which nature has so bountifully endowed this section.

THE RITZ-CARLTON CASE.

In the proceedings which may be conducted against the ultra-fashionable Ritz-Carlton hotel in New York, involving a charge of violation of the Volstead act, there is a great deal more involved than appears on the surface.

Under the padlock provision of the act the threat is made to close the entire establishment, thus not only throwing into non-earning idleness an investment of several millions of dollars, but destroying good-will, prestige, loss of permanent business, etc., incalculable in dollars and cents.

And yet laws are made to be obeyed—and to be enforced. They should be obeyed and they should be enforced, but the personal and property rights of the innocent should be protected in the laws; and no law should be so unreasonable that it violate by one of perhaps no financial interest must carry heavy financial penalties to those entirely innocent.

The question at issue is whether or not the federal prohibition authorities have the right to close up an enterprise involving a great capital investment on the ground that liquor had been purchased in one part of its premises, and perhaps from an employee unknown to the management.

As ever, the dark horses throw very little light on the situation.

weather is no good road, it matters not how much time and money have been spent in grading and in creating a sand-clay surface.

Most of the mountain so-called good roads have only a clay surface, which is all the more impassable during a season of rain.

Travelers going into the mountains of the far west find paved boulevards everywhere. In the famous Sierras in California every town and hamlet is linked with asphalt. Why is it not so in this great section, otherwise as favored as any in the world, Switzerland not excepted?

North Carolina with all of her boasted permanent road development has not yet reached the Highland section, as she should have done long ago. South Carolina has expended too much in temporary roads, and Georgia is merely doing the best she can under restricted road opportunities, a serious lack of finances and a reactionary road policy.

Mud-bound! That is a poor advertisement for the greatest national asset that these states have in conjunction—their beautiful mountain country.

The authorities should awaken to this situation—and now. In a week or two, perhaps, the roads may be all right again and recreationists will find the Georgia-Carolina mountain country unsurpassed for health and rest and pleasure.

The point is—permanent, and not merely good-weather highways, should be built into this wonderful mountain section. And this character of roads must be built, if we would improve and appreciate that with which nature has so bountifully endowed this section.

THE RITZ-CARLTON CASE.

In the proceedings which may be conducted against the ultra-fashionable Ritz-Carlton hotel in New York, involving a charge of violation of the Volstead act, there is a great deal more involved than appears on the surface.

Under the padlock provision of the act the threat is made to close the entire establishment, thus not only throwing into non-earning idleness an investment of several millions of dollars, but destroying good-will, prestige, loss of permanent business, etc., incalculable in dollars and cents.

And yet laws are made to be obeyed—and to be enforced. They should be obeyed and they should be enforced, but the personal and property rights of the innocent should be protected in the laws; and no law should be so unreasonable that it violate by one of perhaps no financial interest must carry heavy financial penalties to those entirely innocent.

The question at issue is whether or not the federal prohibition authorities have the right to close up an enterprise involving a great capital investment on the ground that liquor had been purchased in one part of its premises, and perhaps from an employee unknown to the management.

It is yet to be proven that the Volstead act was violated by the Ritz-Carlton management, and for personal profit.

By the arrangement of the president and the secretary-treasurer of the company operating the hotel, it appears that the government is proceeding in an orderly manner, and endeavoring to ascertain the truth, and the rights of innocent investors.

If it is even proven that the lessees of the hotel have so violated law that a padlock must be placed upon the doors, that in itself does not implicate the owners of the property who must suffer an even greater property penalty, though very probably innocent.

The wise course certainly will be for the hotel management to give every aid to the government in seeing that law is respected, and that the rich as well as the poor shall be penalized alike.

If the management has offended the penalty of law is just as deserved as to the humblest and poorest of the east side bootleggers.

In the meantime, however, there are serious faults and serious conflicting features in the intricate machinery carrying the 18th amendment, and the padlock clause, as written, is one of them.

It's time for the fireman of the Sun to take a holiday and let a perspiring world cool off.

As soon as the political rumormonger is in office, the other fellow is working like blazes to get him out.

Is it possible that those white Indians had just passed through the whitewash annex of the Cleveland convention?

A bill to repeal the necessity for work would no doubt meet with "unanimous consent" throughout the country.

It's the go-away season now, but in a few weeks they'll all be coming home to rest-up.

In Love's World

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

Singing a song of a world made new,
All for the love of you.
The ship sails safe from the stormy sea;
We're in the land where we longed to be,
And now a kiss and a cross for me—
All for the love of you.

Singing a song of a heaven, faith-true,
All for the love of you.
And what of the seas where the brave ships toss
And Love seems never to dream of loss?
For Love is a sweet dream that clings to a cross
All for the love of you.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

The Vengeance of a Ghost

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

On the right of the road as you go from Daumes to Tirolois stands the huge black skeleton of a medieval castle. Gaunt and naked, weather-beaten by six centuries of summer heat and winter storms, its towers point spectral fingers to the sky on a moonlit night, when its silhouette casts an eerie shadow over the broad roadway. There was someone tugging at its eaves and he went down stairs to join the owner, the young Count de Tirolois, in the great drawing room. Together the two men mounted the stairs again, arm in arm. Halfway the stairs the abbe suddenly turned around. "There was someone tugging at my casock," he said. But nothing could be seen. The abbe, calling upon the unseen visitor to make himself known, "If you are a suffering spirit, tell me and I will do what I can to give you rest," he called in a loud voice. The answer was a terrific noise in the drawing room where the two men had just emerged. Still holding his cross, the priest walked downstairs. Without any warning and without any draft the candelabra which the count carried went out and the priest felt the crucifix in his hand. It was found the next morning torn to bits and smashed in pieces though it was fashioned of solid ivory. In his report to the bishop the curate of Tirolois spoke of "supernatural, demoniacal forces, probably disembodying spirits that had not found rest in the grave."

It was next the turn of Dr. Grevecoeur to investigate the strange phenomena. He went about the matter in a thorough scientific manner. He had the house guarded and he explored the cellars and crypts. He examined the house from corner to corner and finally settled down one night for the reception of the ghostly visitors, armed with a repeating revolver. Overhead he heard a rumble as if a man with a wooden leg was stumbling over the bare floor. His armchair suddenly rolled over and it was as if a strong wind swept through the room. The doctor, now thoroughly agitated, shouted that he was not afraid of any living creature, and that he would have an honorable, open and visible combat. The answer was a hollow mocking laugh. The doctor roared in his rage and daily walking. She describes her greatly increased endurance and tells how her "rheumatism," "stomach trouble" and "nervousness" as well as headaches have disappeared since she began living the hygienic life. She notes as one of the benefits derived from her regimen the fact that Mr. Spratt has discovered in her something resembling the girl he married, and that, too, is a matter of health, which is the same thing as happiness.

Jack Spratt himself is a skinny man. Now and then, when he can take the time, he joins Mrs. Spratt on her daily walk. And the walk has

CORINNE GRIFFITH AT METROPOLITAN

Beautiful Star Plays in "Single Wives" This Week.

A fascinating star, an appealing story, gorgeous home, tuneful music and delightful supporting numbers are promised at the Metropolitan theater this week when Corinne Griffith, famous for her perfect portrayal in "Black Oxen" and "Lilies of the Field," gives an even more finished and human portrayal of a young wife who sees her husband's affection waning.

"Single Wives" is the picture—and one of the finest released under the First National banner. An original story by Earl Hudson, "Single Wives" was written around a typical American society home, where a husband's indifference to his wife brings about a tragic state of affairs.

A wife seeking love and attention is virtually forced into another man's arms through her husband's lack of appreciation. The husband is too wrapped up in his business to take part in their social obligations, accepting the proverbial standard that "a fish should not be fed bait after it is caught."

In "Single Wives" Corinne Griffith, credited as being one of the screen's most attractive stars, has a role ideally suited to her in the part of Betty Jordan, the wife. Milton Sills is the husband and Lou Tellegen the third angle in the triangle. Other prominent film luminaries in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Kathleen Williams, Phyllis Haver, Jack Patrick and Jere Austin.

The musical setting for "Single Wives" has for its central theme D'Arleto's "Beaucaire," and includes some particularly tuneful melodies, many from the best musical hits and recent popular song successes.

Enrico Leide's overture, "Famous Melodies" from famous operas, will feature numbers from "Katinka," "Irene," and "Madame Sherry." The overture was compiled by Mr. Leide from the Standard Musical Comedy repertoire—"Allah's Holiday" from "Katinka," "My Alice Blue Gown" from "Irene," and "Every Little Movement" from "Madame Sherry."

Completing the program will be the Metropolitan News and Literary Digest's "Fun From the Press."

VALENTINO RETURNS IN 'MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE'

At the Howard All This Week in Tarkington's Epic.

"Monsieur Beaucaire," the new Paramount picture which marks the return of Rudolph Valentino to the screen after a two-year absence, will begin a week's engagement at the Howard Monday. The whole world and his wife—particularly his wife—will see in this simple announcement visions of a film feast for which their movie appetites have been hungering these many months.

It isn't difficult to understand why this photoplay is awaited with keen expectations. Aside from the tremendous personal popularity of Valentino to whom millions pay tribute as the greatest lover of the silver screen, film fans who have read Booth Tarkington's novel, with its romantic, colorful and spectacular background of the court of King Louis XV of France, recognize its remarkable pictorial possibilities. It is a story that thrills the imagination, satisfies that fundamental human desire for love, beauty, laughter and truth.

One realizes the painstaking care that went into the making of this picture when the supporting cast is considered. Bebe Daniels, as the Princess de Bourbon-Conti; Lowell Sherman, as King Louis XV; Lois Wilson, as the queen; Boris Kenyon, as Paulette Duval; John Davidson and many others are seen in their best roles.

"Monsieur Beaucaire" not only marks Valentino's return to the screen, but marks the greatest piece of acting that has been done by him in any picture he has ever made. "Monsieur Beaucaire" is the greatest picture that Rudolph Valentino has ever appeared in.

The role of the Duc de Chartres, champion duelist and lover extraordinaire, is a particularly congenial one to the handsome Valentino and the part affords an even wider dramatic scope than any of his previous successes.

The production has a thousand points of interest. It is one of the most extravagantly mounted historical romances, yet preserves its distinctiveness to the tune of "Scaramouche," a new Broadway oddity.

Ben Potter, the Metropolitan's concert organist, will play an organ interlude.

'FOOL'S AWAKENING' IS LOEW'S PHOTOPLAY

Harrison Ford, Enid Bennett, Mary Alden in Big Cast.

"A Fool's Awakening," the Metro picture which will be shown all this week at Loew's Grand theater in addition to the regular bill of vaudeville, is an adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Tale of Triona," and was directed by Harold Shaw. The excellent cast which has been assembled to portray the interesting characters of this exciting story includes Harrison Ford, Enid Bennett and Mary Alden, who play the leading roles. Prominently cast are Alec Francis, Lionel Belmore, Harry Northrup, Evelyn Sherman, John Sainpolis, Pauline French, Edward Connelly, L. R. O. Hatawell, Mark Fenton, Arline Pretty and Lorimer Johnston.

John Briggs (Harrison Ford), a young Englishman of humble parentage, impersonates Alexis Triona, an officer whose diary he finds and publishes as his own. His fame is startling, and still keeping his secret, he marries Olivia Gale, an heiress. Her discovery of his deceit results in her leaving him. This is followed by a serious accident to Briggs, who is almost killed. Myra, Olivia's companion and maid, is the means of bringing the two together again. For Briggs does not think he can ever win back his wife, and attempts suicide rather than live without her. The thrills that lead up to the climax of forgiveness keep the audience interested throughout the production, which is full of startling situations.

Harrison Ford plays John Briggs, whose long association with the Russians makes his impersonation of Alexis Triona possible, and Enid Bennett, the girl who comes into a fortune—Olivia Gale, whom he marries. Mary Alden is Myra, then companion who tries to shield Olivia from the unexpected results of her sudden wealth, for which her experience has not prepared her. They are ably assisted by a well-chosen cast. The picture shows the danger in living a lie, once started. Not that the film attempts to point out any moral, but it simply lays the story before us of one man who did try to live another man's life and his success. This excellent plot basis provides a wonderful opportunity for human and convincing characterizations and members of the cast have taken full advantage of their chances. Beauty, romance, drama and thrills are all here, ready for the spectator to enjoy.

"The Great White Way."

(Alamo No. 2)
Proclaimed as the "wonder picture of New York's main street," Cosmopolitan corporation's "The Great White Way," with its renowned cast, is the stellar attraction for Alamo No. 2 or two days, beginning on Monday. "The Great White Way" is packed with various thrills and spectacular effects, the first of which is a fire, the second a thrilling horse race and last, the biggest of all, a real prize fight. There are some fine comedy situations in the picture, contributed largely by Harry Watson, Tom Lewis and T. Roy Barnes.

It concerns all those things that New Yorkers, sophisticated and unsophisticated, like to talk about. Richard Walton Tully's "Tribe" is the attraction for Wednesday and Thursday. Neil Hart will be shown in his latest release, "Tucker's Top Hand," on Friday and Saturday.

HESTER BAILEY REVUE STAR ACT AT LOEW'S

Clark and O'Neil Well-Known Team on Same Bill.

Hester Bailey, the inimitable vaudeville, comes to Atlanta and Loew's Grand theater tomorrow for a week's engagement, offering to vaudeville lovers one of the snappiest, most entertaining offerings of her career behind the footlights. Her own company, Hester Bailey & Co., with a cast of three girls and two men, is the headline attraction at the local vaudeville house with four other acts, all of the all-star variety. Balancing the vaudeville offering is the great picture, "A Fool's Awakening," with a collection of screen stars rarely seen in one cast.

Hester Bailey and her company offer a real revue of songs and dances, a revue that it will be a pleasure to witness, and one that puts a new angle on the word originality. Catchy songs and dances that are new are in the repertoire of the revue of the popular vaudeville artist, and one will leave the house with the feeling that they have seen a vaudeville act that is really worth while.

Next on the bill of features is the popular team of Clark and O'Neil, two of the funniest and cleverest actors touring vaudeville circuits. Clark and Neil are great at patter, better at dancing, and their work on the skittle will prove a revelation to the theatergoer. Harmony runs through this act, making it one of the big hits of the bill.

Orren and Drew in "The Towel Clown" have a diversion and novelty, and in addition to a great line of comedy offer imitations of birds and animals that is sure to score a big hit.

Winchill and Briscoe in "Just for a Laugh" will come in for a great deal of the applause this week with a very clever skit in which comedy and catchy songs play a big part.

Arthur and Darling in "A Forest Devil," have something new in vaudeville. It is a fantastic act with one of the characters made up as a frog. Some clever contortion work is a feature of this act.

Harrison Ford, Enid Bennett, John Sainpolis, Alec Francis and Lionel Belmore are five screen stars who will be seen in the feature picture, "The Fool's Awakening."

'HELL'S HOLE' STARS 'BUCK' JONES AT RIALTO

In criminal circles, the man who double-crosses a friend is ostracized and oftentimes "bumped off."

In political circles, the man who double-crosses a friend is ostracized sometimes only if he fails as a "tuc-coat."

In an individual's life, the man who double-crosses a friend generally suffers humn wreckage in his waking hours from the curse.

For look you, the word "friend" is derived from an old Teutonic verb meaning to love. While used generally as the opposite to enemy, it is especially the term which connotes any degree, but particularly a high degree of personal goodwill, affection, regard, from which the element of sexual love is absent.

The essence of friendship is robust sincerity, big enough to stand by in fair or foul weather. What more beautiful instance of friendship than that of Robert Ross for the ill-fated Oscar Wilde. When Oscar Wilde left Reading goal after serving his term for perpetrating criminal misdemeanors, he lost absolute moral control of himself. He went to Paris and there degraded as low as a man could in the "mood marsh" he wallowed in. Ross paid for Wilde's last rituals and for his burial.

On the other hand, tragedies are perpetrated daily because of him who "bites that hand that fed him," in every walk of life. An especially dramatic case of this sort is that of Dell Hawkins, a man who double-crossed his friend and nearly caused his death. The dramatic story of the turbulence caused by Hawkins' treachery is to be seen in "Hell's Hole," starring Charles Jones, coming to the Rialto theater this week. Charles Jones, as Tom Musgrave, trusts Dell Hawkins (Maurice Flynn), whom he considers his friend. When it comes to a showdown, Hawkins turns yellow. The romantic, as well as dramatic, situation thus precipitated into an otherwise commonplace life makes of this feature one of the most stirring ever shown on the silver screen.

An installment of the "Leather Pushers," called "Girls Will Be Girls," also will be a feature of the Rialto program. Oscar Micheaux, one of the pioneer producers of negro photoplays, has scored another great success in the production "Birthright," which will be shown at the Paramount theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The picture "Birthright" was made from the popular story by T. S. Stripling that appeared serially in Collier's Weekly.

The cast includes such celebrated colored actors as Evelyn Preer, who will be remembered as the star of the Lafayette Players, who appeared in a local playhouse recently; J. Homer Tutt and Salem Tutt Whitney, late of the "Smarter Set" and "Come Along Mandy" companies, and other noted colored actors. The manager states that there will be no advance in admission.

DRAMATIC ARTS SCHOOL

Beebe and Forbes Add Five New Instructors.

Announcement of the selection of members of the faculty of the Atlanta School of Stage Arts, recently organized by Stuart Beebe and Gus Forbes, popular Atlanta stock actors, will be met with considerable interest in theatrical circles, since it includes some of the foremost instructors in the branches of stage craft in the south.

Here is the faculty, as announced by Mr. Beebe Saturday:

Stuart Beebe, dramatic arts; Genevieve Modena, voice culture and piano; Elinor Davies Schert, French language; Jane Aubrey, business representative and in charge of classes in make-up; Don Carlos Duflois, general manager of the Atlanta Sonnet company, in charge of the classes on stage settings and color schemes.

They need no introduction to Atlantans. Their ability has been well established and recognized. Mr. Beebe is known through his long connection with the Lyric Players and later with the Baldwin Players, which organization recently closed at the Atlanta theater. Miss Modena is a popular Atlanta musician and elocutionist, and Miss Jane Aubrey was formerly second woman with the Lyric Players, gaining a wide popularity while there.

Registration for the classes begins Monday. The classes begin on August 4, at 545 Peachtree street. Some of the first plays to be produced by the pupils of Mr. Beebe's "class" include "The Green Monk," by Mark Swan; "Pomander Walk," by Louis N. Parker; "Rollo's Wild Oats," by Claire Kummer; "The Rectory," by Rachel Crothers and several one-act classics, such as "The Sicilian," by Moliere.

LYRIC FARCE COMEDY IS 'SWEET SEVENTEEN'

Edith King Has Flapper Role in Play That Surprises
New York.

Miss Edith King, stunningly beautiful new leading woman of the Lyric players, is cast in a charming flapper role in "Sweet Seventeen," the play of this week at the Lyric theater, which opens with ladies' bargain performance Monday night and continues each night and at Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees the rest of the week.

"Sweet Seventeen," incidentally, has the record of having surprised everybody connected with it by the popular success it achieves in New York and on tour. Scheduled for a three months' run on its first presentation, the usual average for a farce comedy, it played to capacity crowds for more than a year, outlasting four leases on as many New York theaters before finally it was taken out of New York for a successful tour of the big cities.

A pleasing melodramatic plot is made the basis for an exuberant farce comedy of young romance, involving a group of delightful characters which are ideally suited to the talents and personalities of the Lyric players. "Peeks" Farnum, the sub-plot to be played by Miss King, realizes that the only way to keep her father, Gus Forbes, from going broke is to marry off her older sister, Marion White, to some rich man. A penniless suitor, Rankin Mansfield, is sent away and Peeks sets out to capture a rich one, Wilfred Lytell, for her sister.

The love campaign develops into a Miles Standish-John Alden affair reversed and embellished with situations which would have been impossible where the fair and conventional Priscilla was the prize. Women, it would seem from the play, will take greater risks for love than men.

A character new to Lyric patrons is to be introduced in the person of "Boon," a mut who masquerades as a Persing egg hound. Miss King is mistress of the mut, which has played a big part in keeping rehearsals interesting for the last two days.

The play is another "dress up" affair, as is necessary for the success of a society farce comedy, and Miss King, as will the other feminine members of the company, will wear some stunning new gowns, modeled after the last word from Paris for late summer and early fall attire.

"Sweet Seventeen" involves the entire acting strength of the company in its maze of laughable situations and charming characters. Loraine Bernard, Ramona Weaver and a new character actress brought here from New York just for the week complete the feminine cast of characters. William Lloyd, William Macaulay, Edwin Vail and the other masculine members participate in important parts.

New devices for assuring the coolness and comfort of Lyric patrons have been installed to safeguard against another spell of such weather as Atlanta experienced last week. An entire new battery of noiseless electric fans has been installed. The theater is to be maintained at a temperature from 15 to 20 degrees cooler than the street at all performances, both afternoon and night.

Advance reservations for each of the nine performances have been larger than usual since announcement that the play of the week was to be real hot weather entertainment, a breezy farce comedy.

The usual scale of popular prices will prevail during the week.

Jimmie Hodges Is Back.
Jimmie Hodges is back at the Forsyth with a lot of new ideas and some fine new equipment for his show.

Hundreds of Atlantans who saw the production last week offered by members of the popular musical comedy company wondered where their favorite comedian could be, that he did not appear on the stage.

And not until his return from New York was it made known just where he was. As a matter of fact, Jimmie Hodges went up to the home of things theatrical to get some new thoughts in production work. He got them, and a lot of new costumes and a raft of new scenery, and this week will be back in his usual place, addressing members of the "Laughing club."

HODGES CO. PLAYS NEW YORK SUCCESS

"45 Minutes From Broadway" at the Forsyth This Week.

If you like to laugh—and who doesn't—you'll be interested in this announcement:

Jimmie Hodges, the versatile comedian, endearing to the hearts of every fun-loving Atlantian, is to be seen at the Forsyth theater this week in his funniest and with his most successful comedy play.

lating musical comedy success of George M. Cohan—"Forty-five Minutes From Broadway."

Here, say those who have seen Mr. Hodges play the part in other cities, the versatile comedian finds real opportunity for his amusing antics, an outlet for his effervescent supply of wit and humor, a mouthpiece for the thousands of funny sayings that cram his head.

Mr. Hodges says it's his favorite role. And in it he returns to the Forsyth stage from an absence of one week, which time he spent in New York, accumulating new features for his show, such as additions to his costume and scenic equipment. Atlanta missed him during his absence, too. Enough so that this week the applause will perhaps be a little longer and the laughs a little louder.

"Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" needs no particular description to Atlantian audiences. It is said that there never was a piece that one ex-prize fighter, of New York's east side, who races through the scintillating musical comedies for almost twenty years.

"Kid" Burns, of course, is the lead. He is funny and Mr. Hodges likes to play it. Maybe that accounts for his great success in the part.

It provides splendid opportunity, too, to several other members of the company in the way of specialty numbers. Don Armand, becoming more and more popular through his melodious tenor voice, will offer several song selections. Miss Irene Sari, beautiful blond subterfuge of the company, will do some novel steps and some comedy songs that are sure to entrench her wide popularity with Forsyth patrons, while the King sisters have prepared another selection of songs and dances like the ones which have made them so well liked.

But the play's the thing, as the bard remarked, and because it is such an excellent vehicle, members of the musical comedy company are putting every ounce of ability and talent they have into making it the best offering of their summer season of musical comedy successes.

VICTOR RECORD RELEASES REVIVE MANY FINE AIRS

One always hears the announcement of new records by Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra with agreeable anticipation. Their record of the prelude to "Carmen" was nothing short of marvelous, and this week they make it a trilogy with the addition of the "Soldiers Changing the Guard" and "March of the Smugglers."

Dame Nellie Melba will sing Massenet's "Sevillana" (Fair Maidens of Seville) from "Don Cesar de Bazan" on a record. This week Amelia Galli-Curci sings it and both are prize records. On the other side she sings "Obsessions quand leur voix appelle" (Hear the Voice of Youth), the favorite from "Mignon."

This week in a soprano and tenor duet record Helen Clark and Lewis James sing "Swanee River Rose," "You're in Love With Everyone," by Franklin Bauris on the other side.

Two new duet records by Aileen Stanley and Billy Murray, "Nobody's Sweetheart" and "It Had to Be You" are sung in explosively powerful manner of these artists in duet.

Shannon Quartet Revives Old-Timers. "My Creole Suzie" and "Little Alabama Coon" revive two of the most popular numbers of the past. The first is an old favorite, while the second is a popular favorite.

The long arm of Victor now makes generally available to all George Olsen and His Music, borrowed by "Kid Boots" from the Hotel Portland, the west coast city. The first records, "A New Kind of Man" and "He's the Hottest Man in Town" are very musical.

"Maytime" by Waring's Pennsylvanians, with dripping flute and cello combinations, and "Plain Jane," a jolly tune by International Novelty orchestra are good.

Jan Garber and his orchestra wind up the bill with two fox trots, "Pretty Soon" and "Please."

CRIPPLE SOLVES PROBLEM OF WIFE BY USE OF CHAIN

Haverhill, Mass., July 26.—(Determined that she should remain safe from the attentions of other men while he was away, Charles Bradley, 40 years old and crippled, bound his wife by chains before he left home each day.

Bradley's stern method of keeping his wife at home came to light when a woman, the mother of six small children, hobbled into the police station with an eight-foot chain wound around her.

The chains extended over her shoulders and around her ankles. In back of her neck was a padlock. According to Mrs. Bradley's story to police, her husband put her in the chains every time he left the house. While thus shackled, she said she did the house work and cared for the children.

In district court Thursday, Bradley was charged with assault and battery. After examination by three doctors he was committed to the state hospital for an indefinite period. Bradley lost one of his legs in an automobile accident about a year ago. Since then, police say, his mind has been affected.

John L. Cravo Leaves Lyric After 16 Months

BY LORENZO JONES

John L. Cravo is to leave Atlanta. The skillful hand that for sixteen months has guided the Lyric players through a stormy theatrical sea as any stock company has been able to sail is to release the helm.

The magnetic personality that has held thousands of friends in close sympathy and support of the players lives has gradually been replaced by new managers selected largely from within the Famous organization. The passing of John Cravo marks, in a way, the end of a transitional period in the local amusement world. The old order has now given way entirely to the new, as far as the Famous chain of theaters is concerned.

Announcement of Mr. Cravo's resignation may well be expected to bring a storm of protest and appeals for him to reconsider from hundreds of the Atlanta playgoers who, after sixteen months of association, have come to consider him not only as a warm personal friend, but as the personification of all that is good in the show business.

That will be no novelty for John Lawrence Cravo.

During the twenty-four years he has spent in the theatrical game, and in all lines and all positions from ticket chopper to district manager, he has never left a town without arousing the protest of the people with whom he has come in contact.

In Greenville, S. C., the city in which he was manager for the Southern Enterprises before he came to Atlanta, a special meeting of the chamber of commerce was called when plans for his removal to Atlanta were announced, and resolutions were adopted and sent to Dan Michalove, then a Lynch executive, "to protest against transferring your present manager from Greenville."

That sort of thing has come to be the usual course of events with this man. And with all the popularity he has enjoyed in every place he has been, he has never become calloused against friendship and, it would seem, the more friends he gets, the more he wants, and the more he wins.

Mr. Cravo began his career in the theater in 1900, a protégé of the late "Marse Henry" Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, whose autographed photograph has been hung over every desk at which John Cravo has sat in an official capacity during the last score of years.

The man who is now leaving the Lyric began his life as a reporter on "Marse Henry's" paper during his early teens. His father had educated him into being a habitual theatergoer since he was old enough to sit in a theater seat without falling off and his interest inclined to the theater rather than to the newspaper world.

"Marse Henry" knew what John wanted to do, so he arranged with a bosom friend, Colonel Macaulay, then active owner and manager of Macaulay's theater, Louisville, to give the boy a job. He was still a boy's first pair of long trousers when he started out as ticket taker twenty-four years ago.

Since then he has been identified with theatrical interests in most of the larger cities of the south, usually as manager, and for a long time as southern district manager. He was especially successful in Louisville, Charlotte, Greenville, Jacksonville, Montgomery and Atlanta.

It is an interesting sidelight to know that he has been with only two concerns in the last twelve years, the Lynch Enterprises and Famous Players-Lasky.

Locally Mr. Cravo's popularity has been equally great with all the types of people and all the business and social interest with which he has come in contact.

Society leaders have picked the Lyric for their theater parties, as much through friendship for the manager as for interest in play or players.

The newspaper fraternity of the city has been solidly behind him almost from the first week of his arrival. It is a seemed a pleasure to do favors for him and a very few requests have been made of the newspaper men of Atlanta have been refused.

Mr. Cravo said Saturday that he had made no plans for the future and probably would not give any thought to his next season's work until he had spent two or three months at home, making a long visit to his home in Louisville, and probably making a holiday trip to New York later in the summer.

He will be at the Lyric theater all this week, usual and will spend several days more next week in winding up his personal affairs here in preparation for leaving.

The name of his successor as manager of the Lyric will be announced during the week.

Epileptic Slain by Brother Years of Tantrums End in Family Tragedy Who Shot to Protect Mother

Irvington, N. J., July 26.—Embittered by recurrent fits of congenital epilepsy, Harold Himpele vented his resentment at his lot by badgering and abusing his family and finally died at the hands of his own brother, whom he had goaded past endurance.

Robert Himpele, the epileptic's brother, who shot Harold to death, is in jail where he is said to have admitted his fratricide.

"I told my mother not to cry," Robert declared to the police. "I did it for her sake."

Harold, who was 28 years old, became enraged, his mother said, because Robert, six years his junior, preferred to look for a job instead of accompanying Harold to a barber shop. Harold feared to go alone as he might at any time be overcome by a fit of epilepsy.

When Robert returned from his search for work Harold berated him and then roared fought until their mother separated them. Harold went for a few minutes in the cellar and returned to the kitchen where Mrs. Himpele was washing dishes. He insisted that he be allowed to help her and when he was told to go away he seized a handful of table knives and threw them in his mother's face.

Robert and his mother agree on that and when Harold dashed for his own room, Robert says he remembered that a revolver was kept there. Robert beat his brother to it. In the mixup that followed Harold was shot dead by a bullet which plowed through his brain.

When police arrived at the Himpele home Robert was sitting calmly in the kitchen, awaiting arrest. His sister, Josephine, was completing the job of washing dishes at which Mrs. Himpele had been interrupted when one of her sons killed another and the mother stood guard over the fatal revolver which Robert voluntarily had turned over to her.

Mrs. Himpele told the police that

Harold had bitterly upbraided his family for years.

The six Himpele children are three sets of twins. Harold was one of the eldest pair; Robert one of the youngest.

New York, July 26.—The absence of rain in the southwest, notably in Texas, with its threat of serious deterioration, furnished the basis for another sensational upturn in cotton prices today that elevated October contracts to 29.41 and December to 28.50, a net advance of 154 to 155 points.

Buying was on a big scale, and after the liquidation of the past two days, found the market in a very much healthier technical position. Not only were most of the big bull interests prominent in the market, but there was a good deal of outside buying and local covering on the part of the continued dry weather in the south-west over the week-end, as indicated by the western belt forecast. Although some outside buying was reported, the market still stands considerable dry weather without serious damage, the impression in market circles that the crop had already been deteriorated extensively and that if the drought continued much longer it would seriously impair crop prospects in that section.

Profit taking was on a big scale during the afternoon, but new buyers appeared in such numbers that all offers were readily absorbed and the market continued its upward movement with very little check throughout the entire forenoon.

Although cotton goods were still lagging behind raw cotton in the advance, there has been a decided improvement in business. Some of the estimates placed the week's sales of unfinished cloth here at fully one million pieces.

At the highest levels today the market was only about 15 points under the top for the week.

GAINS SEEN

AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, July 26.—The cotton market made a quick recovery from yesterday's decline in today's session. Not only was all the loss regained, but the gains for the present upward movement were nearly reached again. With the July option out of the way the market was controlled entirely by weather and the rains privately reported in Texas yesterday were not confirmed by official sources, those who sold so freely on the previous day bid the market up without restraint in their eagerness to buy back what they had sold. October opened at 27.40 and December at 27.18 or 40 to 45 points net higher, and these prices were low levels of the day. In the final trading October sold at 28.55 and December at 28.41 or 165 points above the previous close.

Private reports yesterday claimed that there had been beneficial rains in Texas and Oklahoma, but the weather map when posted showed that no rain worth mentioning had fallen in the western belt and little rain elsewhere. The weather forecast for the entire belt over Sunday, temperature in the west were somewhat cooler, but traders feared that with continued weather the temperature would return again by Monday.

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, July 26.—Stocks forged ahead again today, but activity was most pronounced in a number of stocks, which the public are not usually interested. United Dry Goods was an excellent example. This stock is sound and has real value. Montgomery Ward continued strong under good news.

Kilgus Tobacco moved up about three points. General Electric, which has been beyond the average trader, ran up to 100 in the afternoon. There was pronounced strength in some of the medium-priced rails.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, July 26.—Real moves in American Gas, some of the roads, Caterpillar, the gas stocks, and General Electric gave the market a very buoyant appearance through the trading this morning. With the market holding well yesterday in the afternoon, the day was a number of solid bulls who have been waiting for a rally to buy came into the market this morning.

PUBLIC UTILITIES
LEADERS IN BONDSNews, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, July 26.—Public utility issues assumed the leadership of the bond market today, as the week closed with prices holding around their highest levels.

Spirited trading in the public utility issues virtually monopolized interest in the abbreviated Saturday session. Announcement that the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey would sell next week $20,000,000 6 per cent bonds to retire obligations bearing higher interest carried a brisk rally in the company's five, which mounted 3 5/8 points. Northern States Power and Brooklyn Union issues also were in demand at rising prices.

Railroad mortgages were neglected, although advances of a point or more were scored by St. Paul General, Iowa Central, Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 6s, and Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 6s.

Bethlehem Steel 6s and Wilson & Company convertible issues, which were down today by unfavorable developments during the week, recovered one to three points today.

New financing already in sight for next week was said to exceed this week's total of about $35,000,000.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

National Realty Board Issues New Code of Ethics

In accordance with many public announcements of its plans to oust all undesirable from its ranks and maintain the person of the real estate professional on a parity with other professions, the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at its last convention, held in the nation's capital, adopted a code of ethics by which all members of the profession are to be bound in their dealings with the public. This action is in keeping also with efforts that have been made by state and municipal real estate boards, many of which have secured state and city laws covering the granting of licenses to real estate brokers and agents and otherwise seeking to raise the standard of its membership.

In several states these laws are extremely drastic and only men of the highest character are able to secure admission to the ranks of the real estate fraternity.

The code of ethics adopted by the national association, which is looked upon as a splendid business and professional document, will be printed in "The Constitution Real Estate Review," in three installments. The paper is of great length, but it is looked upon as of great value as a guide to members of the fraternity and it is hoped that the readers of this page, The first installment, including the "preamble" and "Part One," follows:

PREAMBLE

Under all is the land. Upon its wise utilization and wisely allocated ownership depend the survival and growth of free institutions and of our civilization. The realtor is the instrumental through which the land resource of the nation reaches its highest use and through which land ownership attains its widest distribution. He is a creator of homes, a builder of cities, a developer of industries and productive farms.

Such functions impose obligations beyond those of ordinary commerce; they impose grave social responsibility and a patriotic duty to which the realtor should dedicate himself, and for which he should be diligent in preparing himself. The realtor, therefore, is zealous to maintain and improve the standards of his calling and shares with his fellow realtors a common responsibility for its integrity and honor.

In the interpretation of his obligations, he can take no safer guide than that which has been handed down through 20 centuries, embodied in the Golden Rule:

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them."

Accepting this standard as his own, every realtor pledges himself to serve his spirit in all his dealings and to conduct his business in accordance with the following code of ethics.

SHAEFER WEARS OVERCOAT IN MIDDLE OF JUNE.

Fred Shaefer, popular secretary of the Atlanta Building Owners and Managers' association, who has just returned from Denver, Colo., where he attended the annual convention of his national association, has caused some of his friends many moments of envy during the summering days by exhibiting a photo of himself on Pike's Peak, wrapped in overcoat and muffler and shopped in the act of tossing a snow ball at a fellow delegate.

Mr. Shaefer reports a splendid trip and declares that the westerners showed the delegates at Atlanta the kind of hospitality that made them feel at home. The delegates at the national association from this city, who made the trip with Mr. Shaefer, were C. F. Wilkinson, H. H. Arnold, A. Jones, H. R. Ott, W. H. Ott.

The convention was held in Denver, beginning June 25th, and the delegates from Atlanta were accorded the highest honors. C. F. Wilkinson placed on the nominating committee; W. A. Jones, on the committee to select meeting place for 1925; H. H. Arnold, on the apartment house committee, and Fred Shaefer was given the signal honor of being elected vice president of the association. Mr. Shaefer is the executive secretary of the Atlanta Building Owners and Managers' association, and is well known to the business men of this city.

BUILDING OWNERS CONGRATULATE REPRESENTATIVES.

The official bulletin of the Atlanta Building Owners and Managers' association, which is published periodically by Fred Shaefer, executive secretary of the association, prints in the current issue just off the press, an enthusiastic congratulatory note on the action of Representatives John W. Smith and Hattie Kempton, of the Fulton county delegation, in opposing the recent effort to secure a referendum on a proposed emergency tax levy of one mill for 1924 for school purposes.

"At last," said the bulletin, "someone with authority has the courage to come out and say: 'We will put a stop to this ever-increasing taxation,' and after presenting a number of statements and figures presented by the above-named representatives, the bulletin continues, 'After buying the ticket, we will have Miss Kempton and Mr. Smith as our representatives in the legislature.'"

HORNE HONORED BY NATIONAL BUILDING OWNERS.

E. M. Horne, head of the Atlanta Building Owners and Managers' association, and one of the best-known men in the business life of the city, was honored at the recent convention of the national association, his name being placed on the board of directors of the organization representing the building owners in Atlanta.

Working with large staff of wide-awake real estate salesmen in the office of John J. Thompson company, J. E. Shields has won the distinction of adopted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards:

ARTICLE 1.

Article 1—In the best interest of society, of his associates, and of his own business, the realtor should be loyal to the real estate board of his community and active in its work; and he should willingly share with his fellow members the lessons of his experience.

Article 2—The realtor should conduct his business as to avoid controversy, and he should be loyal to the real estate board of his community and active in its work; and he should willingly share with his fellow members the lessons of his experience.

Article 3—Controversies between realtors who are not members of the same real estate board should be submitted for arbitration to an arbitration board consisting of one arbitrator chosen by each realtor from a real estate board of his community, or a sufficient number of members to make an odd number, selected by the arbitrators thus chosen.

New Real Estate Business Opened

By Fred C. Disbro

Fred C. Disbro, who is well-known to the business men of Atlanta, announces the addition of a real estate department to his construction establishment. Mr. Disbro's office is at 606 Peters building, where he invites clients to consult him with reference to all classes of real estate.

Although he will handle all kinds of realty, Mr. Disbro will make a specialty of homes. He has spent a large proportion of his business life in handling lumber and building materials and in the erection of various kinds of structures.

"The experience I have gained through the selling of lumber and building materials, which has been materially added to by the building of houses, taken in connection with the experience I have had in the real estate field, has equipped me for the work of aiding people in the selection of homes," said Mr. Disbro to a representative of The Constitution.

Mr. Disbro is a native of Atlanta, having received his education in the local schools and his business experience in the lumber trade, the building profession and in the selling of real estate. He is looked upon as a my business to aid clients in finding suitable homes.

Granada Apartments on West Peachtree Street

The Granada Apartments, at northwest corner of West Peachtree and Sixteenth streets. Designed by Havis & Constantine, architects. The Granada corporation is the owner and R. L. Langston is the general contractor in charge of the work. Weyman & Connors are the renting agents for the building.

Announcement has been made by the Weyman Connors company, prominent renting agency of Atlanta, of the completion of the handsome new Granada apartments, at the corner of Sixteenth and West Peachtree streets.

It has also been announced that the books for the multiple dwelling are open in the offices of the company and that reservations may now be made for space by prospective patrons.

The Granada apartments, which have been erected on Atlanta's beautiful north side at a cost of practically a half-million dollars, bears the distinction of being the first large building in the city to be constructed entirely of red brick.

The building is a masterpiece of modern architecture, and its construction is a landmark in the city's building history.

They Seemed to Think It Was the Only Thing Of Which She Could Be Proud. Poor Linda. More and More She Felt the Urge to Impress Dick's Family.

Of course, she was far from being the only person to be irritated by them. Only they struck her at a peculiar angle; she couldn't escape from them. They were, so to speak, a life sentence. And bumping your wings only made the feathers come out. She had been, she reflected, so feathery once. Besides, when, as she put it to herself, she tried to keep her own end up, they would put their fingers in their ears mentally, just as if she were a noise. They always behaved as if the language of their thoughts was Russian to her (which it was), and when they talked to her they instinctively translated what they had to say into words which they would never have used with one another. So whenever she was with them she spent her time between being bewildered and being humiliated. What if they were clever? Cleverness isn't everything.

One day she overheard her mother-in-law saying: "It's not so much that poor Linda isn't very intelligent—lots of unintelligent people are so understanding—but it's such a pity that she can't be a little more acquiescent. She was so much sweeter before she married."

"That is our fault," her daughter had retorted.

It was so characteristic of them, Linda thought furiously, even to see that. And why poor? Because she was not like them, or because she was not liked by them? And how dared they assume that either constituted a cause for pity?

"I don't know why she should be so on the defensive," Susan had continued. "We welcomed her with open arms."

"And open minds," Lady Tarleton added, "only I suppose that our arms have never quite closed round her and that she wants a niche in our minds. We haven't given her that, either, have we?"

"Perhaps not," her daughter agreed, and then, with that resolute attempt to do her justice which Linda found most unbearable of all: "She has such lovely hair—a real burning bush."

Linda's hair was beautiful. It flamed riotously all over her head. But for it her face would have been entirely commonplace—a little mouth, too little; a nose like two nostrils in an inexperienced full face drawing (you felt that it could not exist at all in profile); pale blue eyes white skin always on the brink of freckles. But nothing emphatic, nothing to arrest your attention except her hair.

It was her hair which might make people think her romantic if they didn't think.

It was her hair which had first made Dick's eyes wander toward her, and had subsequently made him follow them until it's glowing mass became entangled in his thoughts and his dreams, and out of its glinting fabric a web was woven from which he could not escape.

At dinner at Tarleton, with a hundred ideas like colored balls in the air together, and every one (so it seemed to Linda) talking at the same time and yet managing to hear what every one else said—sometimes, she couldn't imagine why, a silence would follow one of her own remarks, Dick's eyes, lit by the intellectual battle that he loved, would soften a little as he saw the light itself nestling in the red gold swiftness of his wife's head, and his thoughts would wander—was it to her or to his homage of her?

A Blue Ribbon
Short Story

Linda enjoyed talking about books. Like all people who don't read much, she was impressed by the last thing that she read, urging it upon everyone else. Each book to her was a wild thing which she had tamed, strange and remote as a desert island, discovered by her resource and courage. Not, of course, that she had not been brought up in cultivated circles. She had once known a great friend of W. L. George's. But when she brought this cat out of her bag as if it had been a beautiful purring Persian full of slow pride, Lady Tarleton, looking past her with shortsighted friendly eyes, had murmured absent mindedly: W. L. George, dear? Who is W. L. George?

And Linda, instead of feeling elated, proud to be able to confound such gross ignorance, had, on the contrary, felt small and crushed as if, by some absurd loaded dice of providence, only the things that her mother-in-law knew about had importance.

Lady Tarleton's effortless preeminence was a continual source of surprise to Linda. Haphazard in her methods, shortsighted, with friendly absent minded manners, how had she managed to be an influence, a comfort, and an inspiration to so many different and divergent people?

Susan appeared far more positive. Penetrating and clear with a certain hard fineness, mastering with difficulty the impatience of her fastidiousness, but softening all the same under her mother's gentle chidings. "After all, darling, pretenses are so consoling."

"Pretending," Susan amended with a smile. "You are so much nicer than I am, mamma."

LORD TARLETON was gentle and remote and aloof. Linda would twine herself into his arms—half creeper, half cat—and he would say: "There, there," patting her nervously from the depths of his embarrassment.

"I never know what she is thinking about," he would explain to his wife, who would answer gently, "She is just purring at you. It is rather nice, don't you think?"

"Well, you may be right, my dear, he would agree vaguely. He found his daughter-in-law disconcerting.

"They are all very good at their books," Linda would explain to her family—and the phrase clearly conveyed a perfectly definite meaning to them.

"What can she and Dick talk about when they are alone?" Susan asked her mother desperately.

"Perhaps they don't exactly talk, dear."

"But Dick! Think of Dick!"

His mother thought of him. "There is always her hair," she murmured vaguely.

"Well, he can't stay entangled in that forever."

"Perhaps not. But we mustn't—whatever we do we mustn't try to unwind him."

"Dick of all people!"—Susan was bitter—"with his uncompromising sensitiveness."

"Don't you think," her mother protested gently, "that we are a little inclined to want everything paid in our own currency?"

"Dick's currency."

"Perhaps in a sort of unconscious way he wants to escape from it."

Susan met this without flinching. Then they heard Linda's high tinkling laugh and her high shallow voice saying, "I find it so difficult not to see both sides of a question."

Her companion's answer was inaudible, but the breeze brought them a gleam from Linda.

Susan raised her eyebrows. "Paper money," she said. "Tissue paper money."

Semi-unconsciously Linda tried to keep Dick away from his family as much as possible. She didn't enjoy being at Tarleton. There were always people sitting about talking, talking, talking. "I don't see why they think themselves so clever," she would say sarcastically. "Anyone can talk."

But all the same these eternal conversational orgies mystified her. One could discuss people and clothes and books and plays, but when one had explained that something was "perfectly rotten" or "perfectly lovely" there was really nothing more to be said; whereas the Tarletons and their friends went on and on until everything got so buried in words that one really didn't know what one was talking about.

And their standards were so queer. Dick, who never looked at another woman, talked so oddly about marriage, and when she laughed a little coily to show that she knew that it was nonsense, no one said, as her father certainly would have done, "What does little Mrs. Home Ruler think?" And when she had commented brightly, "We women know all about you men," there had been a startled silence asking, "What exactly do you mean by all?" To which she had not unnaturally answered: "Ask the cat."

At that moment Lord Tarleton had come in and said, "Ca's? What ca's are you talking about?" And there had been an awkward pause, breathlessly curtailed by Susan's saying: "I love the little short haired gray ones. They have so much more outline than Persians." And the young man had looked at her with loving eyes and murmured, "Yes, you would—you, who love trees in winter, shorn of obliterating leaves."

They were wrong headed, Linda reflected. That was what it was. Trees were meant to have leaves. And what did they mean by obliterating? They always seemed to get their words wrong. It was so confusing. "Marriage is such a silly form of hate," Susan had said earlier in the day, and nobody had corrected her. No doubt it was talking so much that was at the bottom of all the mischief.

Linda often longed to ask Dick about his family. There were, she felt, a large number of things that he could explain to her. But he always looked so puzzled when she asked him questions.

On the night of the cat conversation Susan was sitting in her mother's bedroom.

"And marriage is called a sacrament," she said bitterly.

For a moment Lady Tarleton's short-sighted eyes looked over the wall that sacrament had been to her into distant spaces of unknown vivid realizations.

"I think perhaps it is," she dissented gently—almost apologetically.

"And one has to be strangled for life by a few red hairs?"

Lady Tarleton smiled.

"We all have our red hairs, don't we? At least I do hope we have."

"But not nothing else—absolutely nothing else."

"No one could be more positive than Linda. As she says herself, she always knows her own mind."

"Yes," Susan was still bitter, "when once I make up my mind, I make up my mind," as if there were the smallest hope of ever untying it."

"I think, darling"—her mother's voice was very soft—"you would be happier if you never thought of the word 'mind' in conversation with Linda. Just face the fact once and for all that she hasn't got one."

"There are so many years to come. What will Dick do?" Susan moaned.

DICK tried to be impartial or rather, equally partial to both sides. Thinking of his wife, he would feel her curling herself into his arms like a little warm fluttering bird with a frightened beating heart subsiding gently into confidence; or he would see her tousled scarlet head spreading over the pillow and her half-awake, wholly surprised eyes beginning anew each morning to get accustomed to the world. And when she murmured: "What did Mr. Dyke mean by 'obliterating leaves?'" he would laugh and kiss her and burn his finger in her hair.

As for his family—well, they didn't need protection. Love—how much he loved them; admiration—how much he admired them; confidence, in the sense in which it meant trusting rather than confiding—all of these things he felt. But defending them would be like defending an army against a humming bird—an operation which could only be necessary if the army knew the meaning of a humming bird.

In dealing with the relations of his wife and his family, Dick instinctively sought refuge in metaphors. Insidiously they would lead him astray until he drifted away with them out of reach of reality.

Dick was rather like his father.

"And it never gets any darker,"

Lady Tarleton's shortsighted eyes were almost touching Linda's hair as it swirled about over her pillow.

"No; it has always been the same," Linda said.

Susan was getting a little tired of the zest with which Mr. Dyke believed in free will. It contrived to make her so responsible for herself—not on broad generous lines of theories and achievements and personality, but in the most exasperating precision and detail. The fact that Mr. Dyke, who was in love with her, though her habit of biting her nails and all of the other tricks with which she had for years carried on a sort of trench warfare, divine exhalations of her perfection was not really consoling. It was more restful to assume that her great height (which she hated) had been foisted on to her by God and that when she was irritable it was because she was tired. But Mr. Dyke could admit none of these compromises between deities. Her tallness was the shooting up of her soul; her irritability, sparks from the fire of her intellect. All of which was fatiguing to Susan, who was, in addition, annoyed with Mr. Dyke for being called Demetrius—an annoyance which she admitted would have been more justified by his philosophy than it was by hers.

The topic was being discussed after dinner.

"After all," Dick said, "if you tell a woman she is beautiful, you give it and she accepts it as a compliment to herself rather than to God."

"And pray, when did you last tell a woman she was beautiful?" asked Linda roguishly.

Susan ignored her.

"I suppose one does stamp one's own looks—trade mark them, so to speak," she agreed. "But admitting that you pour expression into your eyes, what about their shape? Surely, you can't be asked to accept responsibility for a poached egg when you wanted an almond?"

"Your own poached egg," Mr. Dyke spoke with gravity, "is better than anyone else's almond."

"Clearly," Susan was dry. "But not better than one's own almond would have been."

"One man's almond is another man's poached egg," said Dick flipantly; but Mr. Dyke was not to be put off so easily.

"It is immaterial whether it is a poached egg or an almond," he explained almost reproachfully. "The point is that it is your own."

"There is a time for everything," Linda said. "No one wants a poached egg for dinner or an almond at breakfast."

Dick laughed. Mr. Dyke looked at Linda, opened his mouth, and then shut it again.

SUSAN said under her breath, "What on earth does she imagine we're talking about?" and then reproached herself for her odious habit—of which she was always guiltily conscious—of saying things under her breath hoping that they would be heard.

"I think," Lady Tarleton said gently, "that in a way people achieve their own looks. Not the outlines, perhaps, but the filling in. A way of walking, a way of moving your head, certain laughs, certain gestures, so that it is not really your height that

Secrets of Last Great Harem

By Maud Waddell

One of the most remarkable pictures ever given of the hidden life in the harem of a Turkish aristocrat is disclosed in the following article by an English woman who spent six months as governess in the Dolma Baghtche, the white marble palace by the Bosphorus from which Abdul Medjid was driven when the new Turkish government deposed him as Caliph early this year, thus ending a tradition which went back 1,300 years.

OR six months, I, an English woman, have been an inmate of a Turkish harem. In—but not of it. The master of that harem was Abdul Medjid, successor to the last of the sultans of the Ottoman empire, as Caliph of all the Musselmans of the world.

A few weeks ago, the master of the faithful ruled and dreamed his dreams of destiny in the great white marble palace on the Bosphorus. Today Abdul Medjid is an exile. At the Grand hotel in Territet, with his four wives, his two eunuchs and the other members of the imperial family, he has held his first taste of real luxury.

To those who have been brought up in the Arabian Nights tradition, my story will seem incredible. It was not because life was full of glamour, danger, mystery, that my stay in the palace was such a strange and unexpected ordeal. It was because one by one my illusions were stripped from me. The exterior grandeur was only a shell, a beautiful screen hiding a life of sordid dreariness.

I was sitting at tea in London one afternoon when the maid brought me a letter from Constantinople—an offer of a post as "companion to the wife of Abdul Medjid and governess to his daughter." A friend gave reassuring particulars. Abdul Medjid was entirely European in his ideas and way of living and the chaplain from the British Embassy went once a week to give his highness an English lesson. When my friend said there was an English housekeeper in the palace my family

Miss Maud Waddell, the English girl who became governess in the Caliph's palace and whose last instructions before taking the post were, "Don't cross your legs."

The Truth About the Inside of a Turkish Harem Is Told by An English Girl

was reassured. I signed a contract for six months.

MY parting injunctions about my behavior were: "Don't cross your legs. Wait to be dismissed from the imperial presence. And above all maintain the prestige of the British, for many watchful eyes will be upon you."

In five days I stepped from the Orient express at Stamboul. An official advanced: Ekrem Bey. He had an automobile. In a few minutes I caught my first glimpse of the palace. It lay beside the blue Bosphorus, an immense structure of marble and stucco, dazzling white. A colossal Bey announced that her highness the princess was ready to receive me.

Ekrem Bey paused in a kind of awe before a door, then opened it a few inches. Through the crack he hastily said a few words in Turkish, and, motioning me to enter, he bolted. I was on the threshold of the haremlik. I was in no man's land—no man, that is to say, except the prince himself.

Beside a long green baize table stood a large lady, silent, statuesque and alone. She was robed entirely in white. Over her head was a broad embroidered white silk scarf, reaching to her feet. It fitted so closely round her face that what there was to be seen looked oval and narrow. Her cheeks were pale, her nose wall shut it off from the street for a quarter of a mile.

Instead of spacious lawns and gardens behind the inner wall I found a yard with turkeys and chickens and sheep. Scattered about were groups of negroes. They were the tallest, longest, leanest looking men I have ever seen. In their black frock coats and red fezzes they looked curiously as though they had been put into a stretching machine and pulled out. It did not occur to me that I was looking upon the eunuchs, those traditional guardians of the harem, without whom that dying institution could never have existed. They looked curiously at me. In time their curiosity turned to resentment. I was the only woman in the harem over whom they had no control. Twenty minutes on the threshold of a new experience may seem a long time. I had been sitting for what I thought was an hour, in a splendidly gilded and ornate state room on the first floor of Abdul Medjid's palace, when the door suddenly opened and Ekrem curved, and her eyes a rather remarkable greenish color. She did not fit my preconceived idea of eastern royalty. Yet she might be.

We talked awkwardly. Two little girls shyly entered. She introduced them as her daughter and her niece. I realized that I was in the presence of her imperial highness.

The little princess might have been any pretty little girl of ten anywhere. She was dressed in a sailor suit and her eyes, large and round and blue were full of questions.

Formalities over, I was led to a short dark passage opening into a narrow lofty gloomy chamber facing north. Some mistake? Surely the English housekeeper would have prepared a room suitable for a fellow countrywoman. Almost no light penetrated through the windows. They were double windows and the outer pane was of frosted glass. Beyond this was a closely woven wooden lattice. I did not know that this was the unmistakable sign of the haremlik: the grille that shuts the women from the outside gaze.

With signs I tried to make the children understand that I wanted to see the English housekeeper. They scampered away and left me to take stock of the room. I found a stopperless basin, a waterless tap and a sheetless bed. Heavy red plush curtains hung at the windows and, above, festoons of fringed red plush.

Then in a burst of courage I decided to look for the housekeeper myself. In the dark passage I found several women talking excitedly.

"What do you want to see her for?" came a strangely familiar voice. I recognized the princess, looking now totally different without her veil.

I felt taken aback that I should have dared to make my trivial wishes known to royalty.

"Write down what you need," she said, and walked majestically away.

The housekeeper, then, was a myth. I was quite alone. Except for the Princess, who knew French, there was no other woman in all the harem to whom I could speak.

I first saw Abdul Medjid in the library. He was at a long table—a kindly looking elderly man, with a fresh complexion, blue eyes, and a bristling gray moustache. He was dressed like an English or American business man.

That night I was requested to take coffee with their Royal Highnesses. It was carried in by a girl in a brass brazier full of glowing charcoal, suspended on chains.

"Ah!" said I to myself, "the real Turkish coffee." Alas, a disappointment! It was a sickly sweet, gritty concoction.

NEXT morning I took up my work in the harem. I had no instructions except that I was to teach the children English. Never did days pass so slowly. Unlike princesses of fairy tales, my little charges had few playthings. I took the ropes from my trunks and taught them to skip, and

"Please Don't Send Mother

But Even the Crippled Love Child's Plea Could Not Save Mrs. De Marco From Punishment for Stealing a Baby With Which to Deceive Her Husband

Mrs. Mary De Marco, overcome with grief after confessing that she stole the Mondell baby to fill the place of the one which was denied her and on which she believed her whole happiness depended

ONE afternoon last May Mrs. Harry Modell tucked her ten-week-old baby into its carriage and wheeled it to the sidewalk just outside the little store which she helps her husband to run at No. 115 South Sixtieth street, Philadelphia.

And then the stage was all set for what proved a most remarkable drama of denied motherhood.

Mrs. Modell had done the same thing on many previous afternoon. Her baby was perfectly safe there, she thought. From her post behind the counter the mother could keep a watchful eye on the child while she attended to the business of the store. If it awoke and cried she could be at its side in an instant.

But this afternoon Mrs. Modell happened to have to wait on a number of customers in quick succession. She was so busy making change and doing up bundles that for five or perhaps ten minutes she failed to glance out at the carriage.

When finally she did she was amazed to see that it was empty. The tiny girl who had been sleeping so peacefully there just a short time before was gone!

Mrs. Modell was anxious, but not alarmed. She thought one of her neighbors had found the child awake and taken it away. So she hurried from house to house to see which of her friends had her daughter.

But the baby was nowhere to be found, and after a thorough search of the neighborhood the now frantic mother discovered that a strange woman, with blonde hair streaming over her shoulders, had been seen to lift the child out of the carriage and disappear down the street with it.

Mrs. Modell sent for her husband and he hurried to the nearest police station. Within an hour the whole city was alarmed and before nightfall the police of other cities had been asked to help solve the strangest kidnaping mystery on record.

Even then, before the reason for the theft of the baby girl had become known, the case was unusual. It was unusual, first, because of the child's age, and, second, because of its sex.

Kidnapers for ransom rarely steal girls, as the history of the famous cases will show, and they also avoid very young children for fear of the extra death hazard.

A New York mother mourning over the clothing of a child that was kidnaped but later recovered

When the stories of some twenty witnesses had been brought together the parents of the child began to fear that the kidnaper was a demented woman. Her trail was followed to a point fifteen or twenty blocks from the scene of the kidnaping; then it was lost.

But within forty-eight hours it was picked up again. Through the persistence of several women who had seen Mrs. Mary De Marco hurry into her home the afternoon of the kidnaping with a bundle in her arms the police were brought to the De Marco home.

They found the front door unlocked and, walking into the hallway, called. Getting no answer, they went up to the second floor.

There they found Mrs. De Marco in bed with a baby by her side. When they told her they were looking for the kidnaped Modell baby Mrs. De Marco laughed at them.

"This is my child. It was born last Monday," she said. "You have made a mistake. See my doctor."

The police went away convinced that a mistake had been made. They were so sure that at this time they did not even visit the doctor whose name had been given them. The search was carried elsewhere and $3,000 in rewards were offered for the return of the stolen child.

Then the women neighbors of Mrs. De Marco became more insistent that she had no baby of her own. Detectives went back to her home. Anthony Gorman De Marco, the woman's husband, met them in the hallway and threatened dire consequences if they disturbed his wife.

"This is our baby," he said, in broken English. "See the doctor if you do not believe us. The child was born last Monday."

Detectives saw the doctor. He informed them that Mrs. De Marco had been married only for a year and a half. During all that time, he said, her husband had been demanding a baby. His insistence had finally driven the woman nearly crazy, and brought her to the verge of nervous prostration.

After the physician had repeatedly explained to Mrs. De Marco that it was impossible for to have a baby of her own, she asked him to help fool her husband. She planned to get a very young infant from some asylum and wanted the physician to assist her in deceiving De Marco into thinking it was actually his child and hers. But the doctor was out of the city when the kidnaping occurred and knew nothing of what his patient had done in her desperation until he read the newspapers.

To Prison"

Accordingly, the police made a third visit to the De Marco home, and this time the father of the kidnaped child went along to try to identify the baby. He recognized it instantly.

In spite of his claim Mrs. De Marco, still in bed with the child in her arms, insisted that he had made a mistake. She excitedly told him and the police that she would fight for her own.

Modell became frightened at her passionate vehemence and to pacify the woman admitted that he had made a mistake. But at the same time he whispered to the police, "That is my baby. Don't let her hurt the child."

After the woman's arrest she quickly confessed her guilt. And when the story of how she had been driven to the dreadful crime of kidnaping was told in court there were many who thought that if ever an erring woman merited forgiveness it was Mrs. De Marco.

"There is no doubt that the mother of this kidnaped child suffered untold agony," said Mrs. De Marco's lawyer in urging clemency for her, "but the defendant had no idea of the agony she was causing. I wish to tell you of the mental attitude of this woman at the time she took the baby. I have to go into her past.

"Ten years ago this woman became the mother of a love child, a boy, crippled from birth. Eighteen months ago she married De Marco. She loved him and she saw a chance to redeem herself before the world by a lawful wedding and by having another child to whom she could give a father's name.

"De Marco's one thought in life was to have a child of his own. As the months went by and there was no sign of his wife gratifying his desire he grew more and more dissatisfied and angry with her.

"For a long time this woman really thought she was going to become a mother. When she learned from the doctor that this would not be possible, she became obsessed with the idea that she must in some way pretend to have the child her husband wanted.

"This woman's life has been a hell because of the impossibility of motherhood. The husband was constantly nagging and criticizing her.

"As his anger grew, he frequently chided her about the disgrace of her crippled son. She began to fear that unless she could satisfy her husband's demand for a child she would lose his love and her chance of a respectable future.

"Goaded by this fear, her nerves got the best of her, and I believe she went temporarily insane. All the circumstances of her crime show that she took this baby for unselfish reasons, not for ransom or meanness. She took it because she thought that was the only way for her to retain her respectability and hold her husband's love.

"The crippled boy limped to where his sobbing mother stood before the judge. 'Please don't send my mother to prison,' he cried"

"This woman deserves pity. She is a broken-hearted, wretched creature. She feels herself ruined and thinks her future will be as much of a hell as her past has been."

THE story the lawyer told of how this cruelly tortured woman had been driven to the stealing of another woman's baby evidently made a profound impression on the court. But remarkable as the facts that had been presented so dramatically were they could not save Mrs. De Marco from a prison sentence.

"We will assume that this woman is a law-abiding citizen," said the judge. "The court is not unmoved by what has been said in her behalf. At the same time I am bearing in mind that the mothers of our city must have no fear of their little ones being taken from them.

"This unfortunate woman must be punished for what she has done. The court must take into consideration the misery and anguish she has caused the parents of the child she stole."

As the judge was about to pronounce sentence pathos added its last poignant touch to what seemed the complete ruin of unhappy Mrs. De Marco's hopes. Her ten-year-old crippled son broke away from the

Mrs. Harry Modell and the 10-weeks-old baby which Mrs. De Marco stole court officers with whom he had been sitting and limped to where the sobbing mother stood in front of the judge.

"Please don't," he cried, his childish voice ringing shrilly through the courtroom, "please don't send my mother to prison."

But the little "love child's" plea could not save Mrs. De Marco any more than her lawyer's had been able to. She received an indeterminate (Concluded on Page 11.)

Romantic and Tragic Secrets Of the Famous London Theater Revealed by the Keeper Of Its Stage Door

IR JAMES BARRIE has said that by far the most romantic figure in any theater is the stage doorkeeper. To that I would add," says James Jupp in the volume of reminiscences he has recently published, "that by far the most romantic theater in the world is the Gaiety theater in London.

"I have been stage doorkeeper of the Gaiety for thirty years. I suppose I have taken round to stars and chorus girls more chocolates, bouquets and presents from admirers than have all the other stage doorkeepers in Great Britain. I was the connecting link between the patron and the players who made the Gaiety."

In the hey day of the Gaiety's success there were probably no more petted and pampered young women in the world than those who tripped across its stage. Each one of them could, if she wished, take her choice of scores of rich and titled men who flocked about the stage door eager for a sight of her and a chance of winning her favor.

There were only a few score of the Gaiety beauties and since there were hundreds of men who admired and sought them, it was inevitable that many had to be turned away disappointed at the stage door. A large part of the responsibility that fell on Mr. Jupp's shoulders lay in protecting the beauties from the importunities of admirers who did not appeal to them and this often led him into some amusing experiences.

He tells of a rich young nobleman who became infatuated with one of the prettiest and most eagerly sought members of the chorus, and who for months went to all sorts of expense and effort to arouse her interest in him.

But this particular little beauty had other admirers whose society she greatly preferred to that of this young nobleman. In fact, she thought he was too conceited to be endurable and was determined not to have anything to do with him.

Getting rid of his attentions proved a difficult matter for he was madly infatuated and proved about as persistent a suitor as romance ever saw. The fact that the object of his admiration steadfastly refused to answer his notes or accept any of his costly gifts did not in the least discourage him and he kept coming back night after night to the stage door with more of them.

AT LAST the pretty chorus girl decided it was time to put an end to the nuisance his attentions were becoming and to teach her unwelcome admirer a lesson he would not soon forget. So one night, after he had sent her a box of gorgeous roses and a note pleading with her to keep an appointment with him the next day, he was delighted to have Mr. Jupp hand him a pleasant little note from her.

In this she thanked him very gracefully for his gift and agreed to meet him at 12:30 o'clock the next afternoon near the bandstand in Lincoln's Inn Fields.

She expressed the fear that, having seen her only across the footlights, he would be unable to recognize her in her street costume. To prevent any such unfortunate occurrence she described how she would be dressed—in a pale blue gown and a large picture hat. As a further means of identification she would carry or wear in her dress three of the exquisite roses he had sent.

As he read this note the young nobleman could not hide his delight. He pressed a couple of gold pieces into the stage doorkeeper's hand and hurried away, beaming as only a young man can when he thinks he stands a chance of winning the woman he loves.

The chorus girl had let James Jupp into the secret of the joke she had planned to discourage any further attentions from this young man, and so he was one of more than a hundred men and women connected with the theater who traveled to Lincoln's Inn Fields the next afternoon to see what happened.

Long before the hour set for the appointment the nobleman was on hand, dressed in the height of fashion and carrying a costly bouquet which he had brought to present to the young woman who had so fascinated him. He paced nervously up and down, scanning the passersby eagerly for a young woman bearing the marks of identification which had been so thoughtfully supplied him.

Not until just as a neighboring church clock was booming the half hour was his search rewarded and his reward came in a way that left him more thunderstruck than he had probably ever been before.

Approaching him from every direction he saw scores of smiling young women all wearing pale blue gowns and large picture hats and every one of them bearing three roses like those he had left at the theater the night before.

The image of the young woman he had come to meet was multiplied nearly a hundred times. Wherever he looked he saw an apparently exact duplicate of the bewitching vision he had expected her to be.

For a minute or two he faced in blank amazement the merry smiles that were turned on him. Then suddenly the truth dawned on him—that the whole Gaiety chorus had conspired to make him the butt of a practical joke.

Dropping his costly bouquet, he fled from the romantic

Old Mrs. Ladybird, calling on a neighbor, Sipping dew from buttercups and having lots of fun, Heard Daddy Longlegs running past and shouting:
"Fire at the ladybirds';
water-bugs, run!"

Poor Mrs. Ladybird, tying on her bonnet, Spread out her wings and hurried down the street.
"Fire, Mrs. Ladybird! All your children burning!
Fly away home!" she heard everyone repeat.

Old Mrs. Ladybird's children had been sleeping.
While Mrs. Ladybird was out and having tea;
They heard the fire crackling and smelled the fire smoking,
And running to a window
each cried, "Save me!"

Clang! went the fire-bell and bang! went the engine,
And all the brave water-bugs raced pell-mell;
Up went the ladders and down came the children.

Each of the seventeen safe and well!

Poor Mrs. Ladybird wept to see them,
Patted their feelers and smoothed their wings;
Each of the seventeen wept to see her.
Such a fright! Poor little "Way for the law!" came a pinch-bug shouting,

"Who set fire to the lady-

"I didn't do it!" cried sixteen voices,

But the seventeenth lady-

"I must pinch him!" cried the pinch-bug.
"Please," said the ladybird, "'twasn't me!

It was an accident, you

"Ah! A firefly turned a fire-

Cried the pinch-bug.
"H'm! That's bad!"
And he hurried away to

Which was right, but very

SOME TROUBLEMAKERS

Here are four of the smallest and meanest animals in the world: the germs of cholera, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and lockjaw (tetanus). It is only fair to these small "bugs"

THE BUGS WHICH GIVE US DISEASES

to say that they are not intentionally harmful. They don't know any better and they can't be taught—so they have to be killed or they will kill us.

Notice the funny little tails on the typhoid germs—tails which they whip around madly in order to move from place to place. These pictures are greatly magnified because it would be impossible to see the bugs with the naked eye.

Each one of these little bugs is distinctly alive and can carry on all the functions of life. They eat, drink, play, work, have children and die—just as people do. Of course, they haven't any intelligence and can't think, or maybe they wouldn't be so ruthless in killing folks. How do you like the looks of them? They don't look so vicious, but if you should happen to meet a couple of them coming down the street, get on the other side as quickly as possible.

DID YOU KNOW?

Did you ever believe that a scar on a tree grows upward with the tree? As a matter of fact, a blaze mark struck shoulder high by a trapper a hundred years ago will still be shoulder high today. A tree expands in girth with the seasons, but greater height is attained only by new growth at the top.

In Australia there are birds that actually build incubators, great mounds of decaying vegetable matter that, acted upon by the rays of the sun, generate a heat sufficient to hatch the eggs.

Japan is famous as the home of the queer long-tailed fowls. The tail feathers of one specimen measures twelve feet and it takes two years to produce a full-grown tail. The whippoorwill, night hawk and all of their family make no nest, but deposit their eggs directly on the ground or upon the dead leaves which cover it.

The home of the flying squirrel is usually a hole in a stump excavated by one of the woodpeckers. This little animal, one of our least-known North American animals, is very gentle and tameable. It is seen at night.

The snake is really the friend of mankind. A single snake will eat 150 mice in a season, thus ridding us of rodents which do great damage to trees and crops.

LUCK OF WILL O' THE WISP

"Will-o'-the-Wisp" the neighbors called him, with contempt in their voices. Some one, seeing his brilliant red hair against the setting sun as he crossed the moor, had nicknamed him that, and the name had stuck.

There was another reason why the name was suited to him. He was an odd boy who would not or could not make friends. He wandered off a great deal by himself across the black moor and through the forbidding hills beyond it, part of which belonged with the farm, and folks would often look up to see him perched on some high rock, his red hair aflame in the wind.

His mother, a hard-working, always-scolding woman, complained because Will wasn't more "steady." Will was quiet and obedient with his mother, but he paid little attention to her nagging. She had reason for being cross, he thought pityingly, what with his father having lost his mind and their only income being the little which came every month from the tenants who had leased part of this, his grandfather's estate, once a fairly well-kept farm, but now in very bad shape.

There was a strange sympathy between Will and his sad-faced father who sat all day in his chair in the sun or by the fireplace. His father had been a gold miner in Alaska and there his health had been wrecked. He had returned to marry the girl who had waited for him, but soon after Will had been born the father's mind had gone the way of his health.

"Will," called his mother, hands on hips, "here, you're late for supper again. What do you do out in the dust and dirt all day? Just look at your clothes! I declare, sometimes I think you're as daft as your father."

Will winced but said nothing. He slid into his place at the table. "If you don't settle down," she went on, "you'll be crazy one of these days yourself. Will-o'-the-wisp they call you. A good name! Always chasing around after nothing the way your father did."

For once Will couldn't keep silent.

"It isn't as though he's feeble minded," he protested hotly. "You know Doctor Fisher says it's because of something pressing against his brain as the result of an accident when he was prospecting. And if we had enough money for an expensive operation he would be all right again."

"Well, we haven't," answered his mother shortly. "And what's more, by the way, I was down to see Mr. Smothers today and he's decided you're big enough to take into his store to work the rest of the summer. You'll have to quit fooling around with rocks the way you do. Why can't you collect stamps, if you must have a hobby?"

Will had turned very pale. "I can't work in a store," he said in a low voice. "I'd hate it. I like to be outside."

His mother's voice almost rose to a shriek, the way it did when she was very angry. "Don't you say a word to me. You'll do as I say!"

There was a knock at the door. Will got up to answer it. A tall man stood in the doorway and behind him Will could see a big automobile in front of the house. "Is this where Will Dalton lives?" asked the man.

"Yes," Will answered. "I'm he. Won't you come in?"

"I'm from the geological survey," answered the man, as he stepped inside. "I drove down myself to tell you that there is no doubt, from the specimens you sent me, but what you have found oil on this farm. I will be glad to do all I can to help you."

Will's eyes shone, while his mother gasped. "Tomorrow I'll take you around and show you where I found the oil seeping up," he said. "Gee, it must be great to be a geologist. I'm crazy about it. I'm going to be one myself some day. Now I can study it and everything, since we've struck it—"

"Struck it rich!" cried his father from his chair in the corner, his dazed mind having caught those magic words of his youth. "No will-o'-the-wisp this time!"

Of course watchyourstep is more or less tied down, seeing how his nose grows into, or out of the ground. He'll get a noseage, bye and bye, and the flowers that bloom in the spring (tra la) will be nothing compared to those that bloom on his nose. (More tra las.)

If you know a bank whereon a Wild Time grows, why just you take your bank book and run down with it to the bank and write in all the names of the minute men and second story men and the night watchmen and Hour Marys that you see, and then you can put your bank book on the market, for it will not only be timely, but there will be lots of interest in it.

In this picture the old Grandfather Clock is kicking up his heels with no little alarm, for he has taken all his Daylight savings from the bank and spent them on planting a garden of bird seed to grow a flock of cuckoo clocks.

realize that he was making something that could be used for a block print.

We hear a great deal about wood block printing and linoleum block printing, but stamps made from these two materials are more or less difficult to cut. An eraser, however, even the ordinary pencil or ink rubber, is a material which can readily be cut with a penknife so that a design stands out in relief on its surface. When ink is painted lightly on the pattern with a brush the stamp can be pressed on paper or cloth, with the result that your design is transferred to the object with which it comes in contact.

An eraser has an added advantage in being about the right size for a convenient stamp, and its cost is so very small. The designs shown here are examples of simple ones that can be drawn on an eraser and cut out. Remember that the part that is to print must be the raised part. Cut away to a depth of about 1-4-inch everything that is not to print. Then the design will stand out in bold, clean-cut lines. Water color paint or writing fluid can be used for the printers ink. Use may be made of such stamps for individual letter monograms or motifs, for borders which can be produced by a repetition of the printing shapes, or if India ink is used, small designs can be printed on towels or handkerchiefs for a laundry marker instead of initials. Every time that the stamp is used a fresh supply of paint must be applied before it can be used again.

the Gaiety Beauties

Wherever he looked he saw the smiling faces of alluring young women, all dressed exactly as the object of his infatuation was to have been—pale blue dresses and picture hats, and every one of them displaying three roses."

of the most admired twinkled behind the footlights.

some of the less trustworthy employees and made their way without the management's permission into the forbidden regions behind the scenes.

One of these men was Lord Victor Paget, and the reason for his desire to break the theater's ironclad rules was Miss Olive May, whom he later married. It was while Miss May was playing the principle role in "Our Miss Gibbs" that his lordship began to be seen night after night at the theater, feasting his eyes on the graceful dancer.

"He obtained an introduction to her," says Mr. Jupp, "and then divided his time between his seat before the footlights and the stage door. He was a very persistent lover, and I remember one occasion when he got behind the scenes after I had refused to admit him.

"On that night it was very inconvenient for Olive May to see him, and I told him that she was studying a new scene with the stage manager and asked him to excuse her for not seeing him just then.

"He went away from my door, and somehow or other made an entrance, because not much later in the evening our manager came to me and asked why Lord Paget had been admitted when Miss May had particularly requested that she should not be disturbed.

"I told the manager that his lordship had not come through my door, so the only solution to the situation was that some of our attendants could not have been too superior in the matter of bribery. A golden coin has been known to work wonders, and there is no doubt that the private door in the Strand leading to the dressing rooms had been opened by a golden key.

"OLIVE MAY and Lord Paget were married shortly afterward, but their happiness was not of long duration and the finish of their brief romance was in the divorce court, where she regained the name of Olive May."

In his volume of reminiscences Mr. Jupp admits having come into personal touch at the stage door with the late King Edward VII, but he insists that the meeting was due entirely to his majesty's mistaking the entrance to the royal box, and not at all to his desiring to have a few quiet words with one of the stage beauties.

"His majesty arrived a little earlier than the appointed time," says Mr. Jupp, "and, although attended by people who should have known the royal entrance next to the stage door, he came to me. I conducted him to the entrance where he should have gone in the first place, and shall always remember his great amusement when he discovered his mistake."

Just because their beauty was the talk of England and they were showered with rich gifts and sometimes offers of marriage from distinguished men is no sign that the life led by the Gaiety's singers, dancers and chorus girls was only a bed of roses. They had to work tremendously hard for all the fame and pleasure, all the love and luxury which they seemed to attain with little or no effort.

"When I began to understand things at the Gaiety," says Mr. Jupp, "I appreciated what an enormous 'factory' it really was. I had seen the chorus girls and the ballet dancers come on the stage and do their parts in the usual easy and graceful way, and, like the ordinary playgoer, thought their efforts excellent, but I never dreamed that it was the result of such hard and strict training.

"This training reminded me of the army I had just left, but our 'physical jerks,' as they are irreverently termed nowadays, were not nearly so strenuous as the leg exercises that our ballet girls continually had to be going through.

"Dressed up in their ballet skirts, they would spend a whole morning under Katti Lanner's instruction, and perhaps even then only one particular movement had been perfected. Talk about discipline!"

IN his very readable book Mr. Jupp has some interesting things to say about the considerations which governed Manager George Edwardes in his selection of show girls.

"Show girls are chosen," he says, "not only on account of their figures, height and beauty—necessary attributes, it is true—but chiefly on account of their drawing power. Brains are not asked for so long as the show girl knows how to wear the beautiful gowns provided for her, but the most important question is: how many stalls and boxes can she fill? With whom is she well acquainted?

"If she is a woman of great personal attraction and boasts a lover of the aristocracy, she is certain of a position. She is then the means of attracting to the theater nightly thrice or four times her weekly salary. She is paid a good one, too, because, don't forget, she usually has a beautiful flat or house to be kept.

"Some show girls, in addition, are really clever, and, having once been intrusted with a few showy lines, come speedily to the front and turn out to be very fine actresses of a very grand and statuesque order. The majority, though, retire, and I cannot recall one case of any being deserted and left in poverty.

"Maudie Darrell was a show girl who was quickly promoted to a singing and dancing role and became the town talk.

"After her debut," says James Jupp,

of a Real Hero

sank his teeth into the moccasined foot.

The beating that had gone before was as nothing compared with the beating he now received. Gray Beaver's wrath was terrible; likewise was White Fang's fright. Not only the hand, but the hard wooden paddle was used upon him; and he was bruised and sore in all his small body when he was again flung down in the canoe. Again, and this time with purpose, did Gray Beaver kick him. White Fang did not repeat his attack on the foot. He had learned another lesson of his bondage. Never, no matter what the circumstances, must he dare to bite the god who was lord and master over him; the body of the lord and master was sacred, not to be defiled by the teeth of such as he. That was evidently the crime of crimes, the one offence there was no condoning nor overlooking.

When the canoe touched the shore, White Fang lay whimpering and motionless, waiting the will of Gray Beaver. It was Gray Beaver's will that he should go ashore, for ashore he was flung, striking heavily on his side and hurting his bruises afresh. He crawled tremblingly to his feet and stood whimpering. Lip-lip, who had watched the whole proceeding from the bank, now rushed upon him, knocking him over and sinking his teeth into him. White Fang was too helpless to defend himself, and it would have gone hard with him had not Gray Beaver's foot shot out, lifting Lip-lip into the air with its violence so that he smashed down to earth a dozen feet away. This was the man animal's justice; and even then, in his own pitiable plight, White Fang experienced a little grateful thrill. At Gray Beaver's heels he limped obediently through the village to the tepee. And so it came that White Fang learned the right to punish was something the gods reserved for themselves and denied to the lesser creatures under them.

That night, when all was still, White Fang remembered his mother and sorrowed too loudly and woke up Gray Beaver, who beat him. After that he mourned gently when the gods were around. But sometimes, straying off to the edge of the woods by himself, he gave vent to his grief, and cried it out with loud whimpers and wailings.

It was during this period that he might have hearkened to the memories of the lair and the stream and run back to the Wild. But the memory of his mother held him. As the hunting man animals went out and came back, so she would come back to the village sometime. So he remained in his bondage waiting for her.

BUT it was not altogether an unhappy bondage. There was much to interest him. Something was always happening. There was no end to the strange things these gods did, and he was always curious to see. Besides, he was learning how to get along with Gray Beaver. Obedience, rigid, undeviating obedience, was what was exacted of him; and in return he escaped beatings and his existence was tolerated.

Nay, Gray Beaver himself sometimes tossed him a piece of meat, and defended him against the other dogs in the eating of it. And such a piece of meat was of value. It was worth more, in some strange way, than a dozen pieces of meat from the hand of a squaw. Gray Beaver never petted nor caressed. Perhaps it was the weight of his hand, perhaps his justice, perhaps the sheer power of him, and perhaps it was all these things that influenced White Fang; for a certain tie of attachment was forming between him and his surly lord.

Insidiously, and by remote ways, as well as by the power of stick and stone and clout of hand, were the shackles of White Fang's bondage being riveted upon him. The qualities in his kind that in the beginning made it possible for them to come in to the fires of men, were qualities capable of development. They were developing in him, and the camp-life, replete with misery as it was, was secretly endearing itself to him all the time. But White Fang was unaware of it. He knew only grief for the loss of Kiche, hope for her return, and a hungry yearning for the free life that had been his.

CHAPTER 3.

LIP-LIP continued so to darken his days that White Fang became wicked and more ferocious than it was his natural right to be. Savageness was a part of his make-up, but the savageness thus developed exceeded his make-up. He acquired a reputation for wickedness amongst the man animals themselves. Wherever there was trouble and uproar in camp, fighting and squabbling or the outcry of a squaw over a bit of stolen meat, they were sure to find White Fang mixed up in it and usually at the bottom of it. They did not bother to look after the causes of his conduct. They saw only the effects, and the effects were bad. He was a sneak and a thief, a mischief-maker, a fomentor of trouble; and irate squaws told him to his face, the while he eyed them alert and ready to dodge any quick-flung missile, that he was a wolf and worthless and bound to come to an evil end.

He found himself an outcast in the midst of the populous camp. All the young dogs followed Lip-lip's lead. There was a difference between White Fang and them. Perhaps they sensed his wild-wood breed, and instinctively felt for him the enmity that the domestic dog feels for the wolf. But he was that as it may, they joined with Lip-lip in the persecution. And, once declared against him, they found good reason to continue declared against him. One and all, from time to time, they felt his teeth; and to his credit, he gave more than he received. Many of them he could whip in single fight; but single-fight was denied him. The beginning of such a fight was a signal for all the young dogs in camp to come running and pitch upon him.

Out of this pack-persecution he learned two important things: how to take care of himself in a mass-fight against him; and how, on a single dog, to inflict the greatest amount of damage in the briefest space of time. To keep one's feet in the midst of the hostile mass meant life, and this he learned well. He became cat-like in his ability to stay on his feet. Even grown dogs might hurtle him backward or sideways with the impact of their heavy bodies; and backward or sideways he would go, in the air or sliding on the ground, but always with his legs under him and his feet downward to the mother earth.

When dogs fight, there are usually preliminaries to the actual combat—snarlings and bristlings and stiff-legged struttings. But White Fang learned to omit these preliminaries. Delays meant the coming against him of all the young dogs. He must to his work quickly and get away. So he learned to give no warning of his intention. He rushed in and snapped and slashed on the instant, without notice, before his foe could prepare to meet him. Thus he learned how to inflict quick and severe damage. A dog, taken off its guard, its shoulder slashed open or its ear ripped in ribbons before it knew what was happening, was a dog half whipped.

Furthermore, it was remarkably easy to overthrow a dog taken by surprise; while a dog, thus overthrown, invariably exposed for a moment the soft underside of its neck—the vulnerable point at which to strike for its life. White Fang knew this point. It was a knowledge bequeathed to him directly from the hunting generations of wolves. So it was that White Fang's method, when he took the offensive, was: first, to find a young dog alone; second, to surprise it and knock it off its feet; and third, to drive in with his teeth at the soft throat.

BEING but partly grown, his jaws had not yet become large enough nor strong enough to make his throat attack deadly; but many a young dog went around camp with a lacerated throat in token of White Fang's intention. And one day, catching one of his enemies alone on the edge of the woods, he managed, by repeatedly overthrowing him and attacking the throat, to cut the great vein and let out the life. There was a great row that night. He had been observed, the news had been carried to the dead dog's master, the squaws remembered all the instances of stolen meat, and Gray Beaver was beset by many angry voices. But he resolutely held the door of his tepee, inside which he had placed the culprit, and refused to permit the vengeance for which his tribespeople clamored.

White Fang became hated by man and dog. During this period of his development he never knew a moment's security. The tooth of every dog was against him, the hand of every man. He was greeted with snarl by his kind, with curses and stones by his gods. He lived tensely. He was always keyed up, alert for attack, wary of being attacked, with an eye for sudden and unexpected missiles, prepared to act precipitately and coolly, to leap in with a flash of teeth, or to leap away with a menacing snarl.

As for snarling, he could snarl more terribly than any dog, young or old, in camp. The intent of the snarl is to warn or frighten, and judgment is required to know when it should be used. White Fang knew how to make it and when to make it. Into his snarl he incorporated all that was vicious, malignant, and horrible. With nose serrulated by continuous spasms, hair bristling in recurrent waves, tongue whipping out like a red snake and whipping back again, ears flattened down, eyes gleaming hatred, lips wrinkled back, and fangs exposed and dripping, he could compel a pause on the part of almost any assailant. A temporary pause, when taken off his guard, gave him the vital moment in which to think and determine his action. But often a pause so gained lengthened out until it evolved into a complete cessation from the attack. And before more than one of the grown dogs White Fang's snarl enabled him to beat an honorable retreat.

Behind the Scenes With The Gaiety Beauties

"the box office was crowded with West End swells, eager to come within range of her sparkling eyes and under the witchery of her twinkling feet. Every night my office was packed with floral tributes and gifts for her."

Like so many other of the Gaiety favorites, Maudie Darrell made a brilliant marriage. She became the wife of Ian Bullough, member of a rich and fashionable English family. But ill health overtook her and she lived for only a short time to enjoy her proud position.

RED HAIR

counts but your carriage, not your mouth that matters but the way you smile."

"Clearly," approved Mr. Dyke, "clearly." And he cast a surreptitious glance at Linda with the secretly satisfied feeling that to her it would probably be everything but clear.

But Susan was out of temper. "I shan't feel responsible for the color of my hair till I dye it," she said. "Will you Linda?"

There was a horrified pause, as everyone except Dick believed that Linda's hair was the only thing for which she could conceivably feel proud of being responsible.

"I should never dye my hair," the victim explained, "any more than I would curl it if it weren't naturally curly. As mother says, nature knows her own business best."

Lady Tarleton said gently, "She certainly did in your case, my dear."

"I can't see why one shouldn't receive credit for transforming a mouse into a raven or a fox," Susan, who was cross, couldn't get her teeth out of the subject.

"I shouldn't have thought you went in much for changing yourself," Dick retorted quietly.

Susan flushed.

"In your sister change would be disloyalty," flashed Mr. Dyke.

"I always longed to have red hair," Lady Tarleton smiled at them all. "I wanted it so badly that I used to look through my whole hair colored crop for one symptom."

"Think," Susan laughed, "if you had plunged quite young and achieved your own head."

"One achieves so many failures as it is," observed her mother a little grimly.

Dick and Linda walked out on the terrace.

"Your family are always achieving things," she said plaintively.

He was silent.

"Would you like me to achieve?" she asked, curling into him.

"The important thing is to be," he said gently.

The moon caught her. Her head was lifted up to him like a thirsty flower.

"I love you," he said, kissing her passionately.

As she entered the drawing room she began smoothing her hair.

"Father's made a riddle," Linda, who was reading her letters, informed an unexpected breakfast table. "Why are two men no match for one woman?"

Susan, who was feeling guilty, tried to look puzzled.

"Because no woman can make a match with more than one man."

"How clever," Lady Tarleton said.

"I have never guessed a riddle in my life. It would be so nice to be able to just once before I died."

"And he wrote it himself," Linda explained triumphantly. "Father's a funny one," she added. "Why sometimes I feel I must go home just to have a good laugh."

"How nice," murmured Lady Tarleton a little wanly.

"Not but what there's a funny side to everything," Linda continued brightly, "but father's a rare one for seeing it. I don't know what he'd do here," she added candidly, "though, of course, it's not everyone likes a joke."

Demetrius felt strongly that she ought to be told—what, exactly, he didn't know. Nevertheless, when breakfast was over he asked her to show him the kitchen garden. Linda was delighted. She arched her neck at him, smiled through half-shut eyes, allowed the smoke to come through her lips in slow blue coils—in fact, she treated him just as if he were one of her own "young men."

"I do like for a woman to be womanly, don't you?" she asked sweetly, unconscious that to Mr. Dyke a woman was invariably either a goddess or a female.

"What exactly do you mean by womanly?" Demetrius was always anxious to be sure that other people knew what they meant.

"Feminine," Linda explained. "Mother always says men should be men and women women. Of course, not everyone can have a way with them, but that's no reason for behaving like a man."

Mr. Dyke was bewildered. Linda had never known him so silent.

"Susan's not like other girls," she went on.

"Your sister-in-law is not a girl," Demetrius interrupted. "She is a woman."

It sounded rather lame.

"Quite," Linda agreed, "she's never been young. That's what it is. Of course, it keeps men off, her being so like a man herself."

Mr. Dyke stared. He was speechless.

"Of course, I dare say she'd change if Mr. All Right came along," his companion added magnanimously.

"How dare you talk about her," Mr. Dyke shouted. "How dare you, you shallow, empty headed—you—thing? God hasn't given you eyes you can see with." Demetrius was spluttering with hate.

Linda shrank back. Then she said in a low voice: "Shallow—empty headed. That's what they think me, isn't it?"

Then she burst into tears. "I didn't want to come here. I never asked to live among clever people."

Mr. Dyke was horribly embarrassed. He didn't know what to do.

"Please, Mrs. Tarleton, please don't cry. I didn't mean it—really I didn't. I lost my temper. You see I—I—love Susan, and I couldn't bear the way you spoke of her. You do see, don't you?" Demetrius' pleading became suddenly human.

Linda, who dearly liked a love affair, dried her eyes and dabbed a little powder on her face.

"That's all right," she said. "I'm a bit hasty myself." And then—"All's fair in love and war."

Mr. Dyke felt abashed. She had, after all, been very generous.

THAT night Linda thought—or rather, the words "shallow, empty," went round and round in her head.

Yes, that was what they thought about her. She had always been an alien to them—somebody else's pet—a nasty little yapping dog—the sort they never would have dreamed of having themselves. Of course, they patted her. It was the easiest thing to do. And then Linda thought of herself—tenderly and a little romantically.

She had been sweet and gentle and pretty, soft and alluring and womanly. Intelligent—yes; but not intellectual. What was the point of an intellectual woman? "Intuition," reflected Linda with satisfaction; that was what she had got. Women arrived by instinct at the point which men reached—more slowly—by reason. The eternal feminine, ever since she had first heard of it, had always dominated her conception of life. The functions of the two sexes were quite distinct and different. Charming women weren't meant to bother their pretty heads. Men by plodding logic dominated the material world, while woman attracted and distracted, keeping hidden away her primeval wisdom.

Femininity. Linda knew just the blend of the sentimental, the plitudinous, and the coy out of which it was made. In her world women turned men round their little fingers; the male was manager without his knowing it. It was a matter of being dainty and pouting, of having pretty ways, and not showing how clever you were. And as an outlet there was always a giggling free-masonry of female friends.

But after her marriage somehow or other her values wouldn't fit into her new life. Dick never complained of the food, never grumbled about the money she spent, never objected to her gentleman friends—in fact, from the point of view of being managed he could hardly be said to exist. When she had told him that Bertie had kissed her in a taxi, he had said: "Poor Bertie," which had seemed to her an altogether absurd thing to say, though not quite so absurd as Susan's "Surely not as bad as that" when Linda told her that Bertie was "quite the gentleman."

The Tarletons really were as queer as they could be. "Quaint," she called them to her family, because one must be loyal. You couldn't talk anything over with Susan. She really didn't seem to know what you meant.

"I always think that we women should stick together," Linda had explained to her. "I tell my young men straight out: 'Don't you believe that women can't be friends. It may suit your book to think so, but it's not true.'"

Susan had agreed rather vaguely, while Linda continued: "I always say, 'Now, don't you play the Lords of Creation. We women can do quite well without you,'" and Susan had answered: "I have never seen a woman who could. I can't myself."

Linda had been quite horrified. Nice women didn't talk like that. What would her mother have said?

The relations between the Harrises and the Tarletons had always been a little strained. Mr. Harris had said to Lord Tarleton: "Well, the young people may regard us as old fogies, but we're not too old to remember kissing time."

And Mrs. Harris had said to Dick: "Whip her when she's naughty and kiss her when she's good. That's the language a woman understands."

But it had clearly not been a language that Dick understood.

Mrs. Harris had always been anxious to explain to Lady Tarleton what a lot of chances Linda had had, her stories ending triumphantly with phrases like "And we all know how difficult it is to make a naval man take 'no' for an answer." But Lady Tarleton had clearly not known.

They were an odd family, Linda reflected: ignorant with all their book learning. What irritated her most of all about them was their calm way of not seeing things. There was nothing they couldn't overlook if they wanted to. She herself would frequently explain to her mother, "I just ignored him." But it always meant a toss of the head, a deliberately turned back, an ostentatiously hummed tune. Lady Tarleton, on the other hand, simply didn't seem to notice. She would look at you with smiling friendly eyes, and what you had said or done was irretrievably lost, dissolving altogether in her non-recognition. Susan was much less masterly than her mother. If you had annoyed her she would look through you, not at you; and her snub would set you on your feet again.

"You can always make things vanish," Linda had heard her say to Lady Tarleton, "with your unseeing and all-seeing eye, reducing irrelevant, disagreeable things to their proper unimportance. I endow them with my indignation and, of course, it gives them a new lease of life."

THAT mother and daughter adored one another, Linda could not deny. And yet how odd they were together—always generalizing. Lady Tarleton never seemed to take a proper mother's interest at all. She asked no questions, laid down no rules, invited no confidences. And yet what was it that Mr. Dyke had said? That their whole relationship was irrigated by understanding. Linda remembered wondering if he meant "irritated," but, of course, that wouldn't have made sense either.

Poor Demetrius! To think that he was in love with Susan! It seemed so odd, Susan, who was so tall and erect and trim, so pitifully without what Mrs. Harris called the "je ne sais quoi."

It really was odd, Linda thought, but she brightened a little when she remembered that there was, after all, no accounting for tastes.

"Mr. Dyke wants to marry Susan," she told Dick, a little triumphant at being able to impart such exciting information.

"Poor Demetrius; she will never marry him. People are always wanting to marry Susan."

Linda was wide eyed with amazement.

"Do you mean to say she's had several proposals?"

Dick laughed. "Dozens. But she's so uncompromising. She says that every marriage represents a certain lapse of fastidiousness. Of course I see what she means."

"I don't," snapped Linda, and she left the room.

"My precious!" Catching up with her in the passage, Dick caught her in his arms.

He still loved the things she didn't see.

Linda felt that her knowledge of Mr. Dyke's secret created a bond between them. She would sit down next to him and have a little talk.

"I do like books," she would say. "I've always said to father, 'There's a great art in writing.' He would tease me so when I was little and say: 'What sort of a stocking are we knitting today? Blue, I'll be bound.'"

Mr. Dyke never knew what to answer.

"Your father must be an exceptional man," he would murmur truthfully.

"I wish you knew him," Linda was eager. "He's so original. He says a man who's made a good joke has done a good deed. He told Mr. Norris—that's our clergyman—so. 'Healthy laughter,' he said, 'wholesome laughter is a benefit to mankind.'"

"And what did Mr. Norris say?" "He quite agreed. He says you please God if you play heartily and work heartily."

Demetrius was a little disappointed by Mr. Norris, who clearly didn't come up to the Harris standard.

Susan said to him later in the day, "Do you think it is quite honorable to draw poor Linda out?"

"Mrs. Tarleton is a nice woman," he answered unexpectedly. "And without her red hair she would probably have been a happy one."

"She is happy," murmured Lady Tarleton, and then, gently rebuking Susan, "So is Dick."

"It isn't being in love; it's loving that makes you happy," Susan said passionately. "It's like the difference between beauty and charm. What is left when your beauty has gone, when the tide is out, and all the hidden boots and sardine tins are revealed? Charm is high tide forever."

"Some tides go out and leave starfish and little pink shells and the sunset reflected in wet sand."

"It's safest all covered up," Susan said harshly.

Linda became more and more conscious of the way her in-laws harped on her hair. "One would think it was my only feature," she would say resentfully, and indeed it did sometimes seem as if it were the only cushion on which the whole family could fall back with relief.

Susan had refused Demetrius, who had returned to London; but there had been no talk about it. Linda wanted to know from Lady Tarleton exactly what he had said.

"I don't know, dear. I didn't ask." It was most unnatural, Linda thought, and as she was feeling cross, she added, "Susan is getting on."

"Getting on, dear? Getting on with what?"

It was hopeless, Linda thought. One couldn't make them understand anything. They simply weren't normal.

After Mr. Dyke had left for the station she had gone to put her arms round Susan to cheer her up.

"You can confide in me, darling. I know all about it. Just treat me as if I were your own sister."

Susan had looked altogether bewildered.

"Did he try to kiss you? I know he was terribly in love."

Susan had looked at her for a moment with the most absolute contempt. Then she had given a short laugh and said: "Linda, you are impatient without being funny."

Linda had complained to Dick, but for once he had taken his sister's side.

"My dear child, you can surely see that that wasn't a question you could ask or she could answer."

"I don't see it at all," Linda had said. "Unnatural, that's what you all are," and she had refused to kiss him good-night.

It was not till some time after that that she discovered that Susan was writing a book.

"Did you find the plot abroad?" she asked wonderingly.

Increasingly she felt the necessity of impressing the Tarletons. But how was one to set about it?

Love affairs were no good. They never seemed surprised or shocked or even interested. Nothing that she did or was affected them at all except with slight distaste. They praised laboriously. They reproved rarely. They commented never. There was only one way in which she dazzled them—her hair. And even that, she supposed, she had not achieved.

SHE remembered the conversation with Demetrius and how Susan had said, "I shan't feel responsible for my hair until I dye it." Then she looked at herself in the glass. Her head really was lovely—spun out of cellos and violins, squirrels and mahogany and October. Surely it was much more her own coming from God than from a beauty specialist? Yet she had been told that it was "not the gift but the thought that mattered." That clearly was what the Tarletons meant.

Every cliché was to Linda an open sesame. Suddenly she felt that she understood her in-laws. They were revealed to her in the terms of little china vases with "A present from Margate," bazaar tea cosies and shell-work boxes. Isn't the concrete, too, a metaphor? Reading without tears, the picture of the cat that precedes the word, the image of a madonna which does duty for a conception, all of that process of simplification and consummation which takes refuge in or rises to symbols—had not Linda discovered it when suddenly the Tarletons were revealed to her in the phrase, "It is not the gift but the thought that matters?"

No one was staying at Tarleton. It was just a family party. It would, after all, Linda thought, have been impossible to do it in front of strangers.

Dinner had been characteristic. Lord Tarleton had said that it was surprising how few people went to Iceland. The whole family had agreed that P. G. Wodehouse was a man of genius and that if you were foolish enough not to see his profound exquisite distinction you need only put it next to Galsworthy "Ladies and Gentlemen" presumably intended to show breeding.

Linda had said, "But I thought you didn't like slang," and Dick had answered, "That is where the genius comes in."

Then Linda had protested, "But Mr. Galsworthy is very intellectual," and Dick had said that the danger of making a rule about humanity was that either your characters were exceptions or else they were not human beings; and Susan explained that profiteering unhappiness was artistically ruinous, and that she could forgive people everything except being misunderstood.

Linda had said "Christ was misunderstood," and Susan had retorted, "How cynical you are."

Then Lady Tarleton had come to the rescue with: "What a lovely gold dress, dear. It catches gleams from your hair."

Linda straightened herself; she tossed her head. All of the gentility which had been alike her standby and her downfall fell from her.

"You like my hair, don't you?" she said. Because the tone of her voice was painful to them all, Lady Tarleton smiled a little vaguely. Susan curled her lip. Lord Tarleton averted his eyes and withdrew his attention, and Dick looked straight at his wife.

"Well, I don't suppose you ever guessed it, for all your cleverness. But it's dyed."

Lord Tarleton heard the last word. "Who has died?" he asked.

Susan said consolingly: "No. I never should have guessed."

Lady Tarleton murmured, "It's very pretty, all the same."

Linda looked at them. Where had her bombshell disappeared to? No one had even asked her how she had done it, by what means the miracle had been achieved.

An overwhelming feeling of discouragement came over her. Her eyes filled with tears. Uncertainty, as if she couldn't quite see where she was going, she left the room.

"It was brave of her to tell us," commented Lady Tarleton with gentle decisiveness.

Dick dashed out after his wife.

"My darling," he said, "my very own absurd, magnificent liar."

Please Don't Send Mother to Prison

sentence of from two and one-half to five years.

In Pennsylvania kidnapers are usually sent to prison for twenty years and the lightness of Mrs. De Marco's sentence leads to the belief that she will receive further clemency from the law.

When she has served six months of her term application may be made to the judge who imposed the sentence for a parole. It is regarded as a certainty that this application will be made by citizens whose sympathies have been aroused by this strange case.

What consoles Mrs. De Marco even more than the prospect of early freedom is the attitude her husband has taken.

"My wife only did this to please me," says De Marco. "I am going to see her. I will do all I can to get her out of prison. I have forgiven everything."

When these words were repeated to Mrs. De Marco she was overcome with joy. At last she knew that the sacrifice which has brought her to a prison cell has not been in vain. Her husband's love, a home for her son and the chance to live down the past are still hers.

Secrets of the Last Great Harem

they and the onlooking harem loved it. One day I bought them a game of tiddleywinks and it made a sensation.

Day in the harem began late and frequently the residents did not go to bed until two in the morning.

His Highness was out early and led a brisk and busy life in spite of all his restrictions. He painted and played the violin. Twice a week there were household concerts.

One day an upright piano appeared. A famous pianist was coming that afternoon. At four o'clock two eunuchs beckoned me to follow. I expected to find a crowd. There were only the prince, his aide, his secretary, and the Little Princess and the visiting artist. In a distant doorway stood a group of eunuchs.

We took our places in a solemn row. The prince, his head thrown back, listened with rapt attention. The Little Princess was bored. All through the performance I kept thinking what a pity the women were missing the treat. "Yes! but they are here," smiled His Highness as I remarked it. "They are behind those screens." Sure enough, there they were, on flat cushions around the princess who was seated on a chair. They looked as placid as always.

Whatever else one may do in a Turkish harem, it is no place in which to be seriously ill. One cold winter evening (I had been there five months) I became suddenly quite sick.

I was left alone, thinking of awful tales of Turkish doctors who bleed patients. But I got word out. By the time my friend arrived that evening I was quite delirious. During what lucid moments I had that night I resolved to come back and haunt the place. The next day an English army doctor came with an ambulance.

THE princess was naturally resentful at the intrusion of the strangers but my friends explained that influenza was contagious. Two weeks later I sent His Highness my resignation.

Even then my imperial employers refused to believe that I was going.

"I shall be sultan—perhaps sooner than you think," said Abdul Medjid. "All will be changed. You shall have your English servants and everything as you like it."

Abdul Medjid was both right and wrong. Shortly after my departure all was changed. For a brief hour half of his dream was realized. The Sultan Vahaeddim, Mohammed VI was deposed, and Abdul Medjid was proclaimed caliph by the National Assembly at Angora. At the same time the Assembly did away with the temporal power of the sultan and abolished the dynasty which through the reign of thirty-eight sultans exercised a mighty power.

And now I find my sympathies going out to those women who are exiles, the ex-caliph's wives.

Finding "The Fountain of Youth"

A Long-Sought Secret, Vital to Happiness, Reported to Have Been Discovered.

By Walter S. Dean

*Alas! that spring should vanish with the rose!
That youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!*
—OMAR KHAYYAM.

A SECRET vital to human happiness has been discovered. Affirmation of it comes from many people. An answer to an ancient problem which, sooner or later, affects the welfare of virtually every man and woman. As this problem undoubtedly will come to you eventually, if it has not come already, I urge you to read this article carefully. It may give you information of a value beyond all price.

This newly-revealed secret is not a new "philosophy" nor a financial formula. It is not a political panacea. It has to do with something of far greater moment to the individual—human happiness, especially in the later years of life. And there is nothing theoretical, imaginative or fantastic about it, because it comes from the coldly exact realms of the practical where values must be proved. It "works." And because it does work—most delightfully—it is one of the most important discoveries made in years. Thousands already bless it for having rescued them from disappointment and misery. Millions will rejoice because of it in years to come.

The peculiar value of this discovery is in its virtue for lifting the physical handicaps resulting from the premature waning of the vital forces of life, whether due to overwork, overworry, sickness or the general over-expenditure of nervous energy in the strenuous living typical of the modern day. True happiness does not depend on wealth, position or fame. Primarily, it is a matter of health. Not the inefficient, "half-alive" condition which ordinarily passes as "health," but the abundant, vibrant, magnetic vitality of superb manhood and womanhood.

Unfortunately, this kind of health is rare. Our civilization, with its wear and tear, rapidly depletes recuperative capacity, and, in a physical sense, old age comes on when life should be at its prime.

But this is not a tragedy of our era alone. Ages ago a Persian poet, in the world's most melodious epic of pessimism, voiced humanity's immemorial complaint that "spring should vanish with the rose" and the song of summer too soon come to an end. And for centuries before Omar Khayyam wrote his immortal verse, men had searched—and in the centuries that have passed since then have continued to search, without halt, for the fabled "fountain of youth"—the means for renewing energy and extending the summertime of life.

Now, after many years of seeking, joyful reports from thousands show that lives clouded by the haze of too early autumn have been illuminated by the summer sun of health and joy; old age, in a sense being kept at bay, and the physical and mental vigor of former years again enjoyed in work and recreation. And the discovery which so adds to the joy of living is made easily available to every one who feels the need of greater energy and vitality.

The discovery had its origin in famous European laboratories. Brought to America, it was developed into a product that has won the highest praise in thousands of cases, many of which had defied all other treatments. In circles the discovery has been known and used for several years with extraordinary gratifying appreciation for the success it has demonstrated. It is now put up in convenient tablet form, under the name of Korex compound, for distribution to the general public.

Anyone who finds life losing its charm and color or the feebleness of old age coming on years too soon, can obtain a full-strength treatment of this compound, sufficient for ordinary cases, under a positive guarantee that it costs nothing if it fails to prove satisfactory and only $2 if satisfied. In average cases, the compound usually brings about gratifying improvements in a few days, as evidenced by the numerous letters of joyous praise from people in many parts of the country.

Simply write in confidence to the Melton Laboratories, 3588 Melton Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and this wonder restorative will be mailed to you, sealed in a plain wrapper. You may enclose $2 or, if you prefer, just send your name without money and pay the postman $2 and postage when the parcel is delivered. In either case, if you report within ten days that you are not satisfied, the purchase price will be refunded on request. The Melton Laboratories are nationally known and thoroughly reliable. Moreover, their offer is fully guaranteed so no one need hesitate to accept it. If you need this widely praised and remarkable rejuvenator, write for it today.

GUARANTEE COUPON

Foreshadowing
the Distinctive Beauty that Fall
Will Reveal

After a season has reached its full height and is on the wane, we naturally tire somewhat of its styles and the things which it has brought us to wear no matter how tasteful and beautiful they may have been. It is then that we begin to look anxiously and with a degree of wonderment toward the new season and the styles which it will produce. And how welcome they are when they come!

Such a time it is just now. Thoughts have turned from summer things and are bending toward the Fall with the New which it will bring. What good news that many of these new things are here now! With what a thrill you'll inspect and select from among them!

Featured especially for tomorrow is this collection of Silk Dresses at $29.75. They show clearly the lines which fashion is to follow during the coming season—and along with it, value of the most unmistakable kind, giving you the double advantage of early, authentic selection at a price that is moderate indeed.

Crepes are to have a big place again this season—cantons, satin back cantons, prints, and so on. Emphasis, too, will be placed on satin as a favored fabric in the new scheme of things. These are all here in quite a varied array, most tastefully trimmed in unique and distinctive ways. See them tomorrow—you'll like them!

Woman's Division To Entertain At East Lake Dinner-Dance

A delightful social event of Monday evening will be the dinner-dance at East Lake Country club, to be given by the woman's division of the chamber of commerce.

Dinner will be served on the terrace at 8 o'clock and members are requested to make reservations not later than Monday morning, sending same to the division secretary.

This occasion will take the place of the regular monthly business meeting, and will be an important social event of the week.

What's What in the Shops and about town

Variations.

I have heard so many housekeepers say that they dreaded the approach of hot weather because it was so hard to plan appetizing menus and so uncomfortable to prepare the foods after they were decided upon.

Summer should really be no bugbear at all—with a Rogers store around the corner from every home! They are featuring so many hot-weather foods, exceedingly easy to prepare! You can get fruit salads that need only to have the can opened and the contents placed on a lettuce leaf and capped with a dab of Rogers' mayonnaise. Peaches, pineapples, apricots, peaches and other fruits are ready for salads or tempting desserts.

Rogers' tongue, tuna fish, boneless chicken, salmon, sardines and other meats make a cold plate the center of the meal.

Wholesome breads, baked in Rogers' own ovens, and the many fillings they have, tempt one to have slanting sandwiches for supper with a tall glass of iced tea, or Z-Bex, that refreshing new drink that needs only cracked ice to make it complete! Another new item of interest in the drink line is ginger ale—American Dry Ginger Ale, Canada Dry Ginger Ale and Cielique—each delightfully refreshing and at very low prices.

No need to bother about making mayonnaise, either: Rogers makes it daily, pure, fresh and delicious. Jams, jellies and preserves provide the necessary sweets for a balanced to you—all quickly prepared.

Again I want to remind you of their Peach Display in the Constitution Building—I have never seen such a beautiful sight. A crate will make a wonderful surprise for your family at the seashore or mountain resort—or to friends in the north or west. These peaches, the Murray-Hales, are especially adapted to shipping and are being sent all over the United States. The Rogers company will look after the shipping for you—just stop by and make your selection and pay only $3.75 and express charges and they will look after the rest—your friends will be delighted.

Fall Fashions.

From rumors I have heard about town it seems that the next performance of the Lyric Players will be almost a Fall Fashion Show.

"Sweet Seventeen" is another "dress-up" affair, as is necessary for the success of a society farce comedy, and Miss Edith King, the stunningly beautiful new leading woman, as well as the other feminine members of the company, will wear some stunning new gowns modeled after the latest word from Paris and late summer and early fall attire.

This play is another of the Broadway shows that delighted New York for a record-breaking period. "Sweet Seventeen" involves the entire acting strength of the company in its maze of laughable situations and charming characters. Two there is a new character actress brought from New York especially for next week's show. You will be delighted with the cool temperature of the theater, and if Atlanta has another hot spell like last week's you will find the Lyric the most delightful place in town to entertain.

The many jewels of the moderns reminds us we were but a few centuries ago primitives and the larger the ge-gaws the higher in fashion circles.

"Made in Atlanta." Made right here in Atlanta for the benefit of the busy working woman who has no time to master the art of cooking, or our dear little bride of the spring who has not yet learned the art and doesn't know how to make the delicious breads hubby claims "mother used to make"—is Uncle Sam bread, made by Schlesinger-Meyer!

Uncle Sam bread is delightfully wholesome and has a delicious taste and makes excellent toast. This good bread is on sale at most of the grocery stores in Atlanta and vicinity.

Speaking of milk, I wonder if you know that the milk sold at Rogers' stores is from their own dairy a few miles out of Atlanta. Here they have fine registered stock and a most sanitary dairy. Rogers company found that in this way it could always be sure of the quality of milk and give it to you fresh each day. There's really no end to the summer menus at Rogers—I have not scratched the surface—though I talk of them every week. A visit to any one of their stores will suggest a hundred and one dishes and drinks

Miss Mary Frances Cornog Weds W. H. Cousins, at Lavonia

Lavonia, Ga., July 26.—An event of interest throughout the southern states was the wedding of Miss Mary Frances Cornog, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Wallace Cornog, of Lavonia, Ga., and Walter H. Cousins, of Danville, Va., which was solemnized at high noon Wednesday, July 23, at the First Baptist church in Lavonia.

Rev. James N. Shelburn, pastor of the First Baptist church of Danville, Va., assisted by the Rev. George C. Steed, of the Lavonia Baptist church, performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

Handsome Decorations.

Potted ferns and baskets of cut flowers on pedestals in an artistic arrangement enhanced the simple elegance of the interior of the church. The altar was a bower of greenery banked with a mass of ferns and Shasta daisies with a trellis of ivy over the chancel. White pedestals, on each side of the altar, holding baskets of crepe myrtle made an effective background for the bridal party.

Pews reserved for the family and intimate friends were marked with white tulle bows affixed to the seats with clusters of maidenhair fern and Shasta daisies.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. E. Boyd Conwell, at the piano, and Mrs. May C. Crawford, sister of the bride, with the violin, played appropriate wedding selections.

First to enter were the ushers, Misses Doris Cannon, Maude Smith, Sarah Maret, Eloise Burton, Janie Wilbanks and Alton Haley, wearing georgette dresses in pastel shades, who entered singly, removing the tulle from the reserved seats and taking their position before the altar.

Next to enter were the groomsmen, Lieutenant William W. Cornog, Jr., U. S. M. A., brother of the bride, with John W. Mason, a cousin of the bride, of Lavonia, Ga., and A. S. Clarke, of Danville, Va., with William A. Crush, of Richmond, Va. The bridesmaids entered singly and wore gowns of plaid georgette and silk lace trimmings in rainbow hues with hats trimmed with their frocks and carrying bouquets of field flowers.

Miss Mary Cousins, of Greenville, N. C., sister of the groom, wore a peach-colored gown and was followed by Miss Monelle Cleveland, of Lavonia, Ga., who wore yellow. Next came Miss Clara Poole, of Lavonia, Ga., in a frock of green, and Miss Sarah Yow, of Lavonia, entered next in a dainty frock of lavender.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Thomas B. Davis, of Raleigh, N. C., sister of the bride, wore a beaded frock of powder blue, her hat being in the same shade. She carried a bouquet of pink gladioli.

The groom entered with his best man, Berney S. Warren, of Greenville, N. C.

Preceding the bride was the little flower girl, Sarah Beasley, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Beasley, of Lavonia. She wore a frock of white net which hung in graceful folds from her shoulders.

She carried a small Marie Antoinette basket filled with pink roses, the handle being tied with tulle. Martha Julia Davis, a little niece of the bride, was the ring bearer, wearing a dainty little frock of white and carrying the ring in a white rose.

The bride came to the altar with her sister, Miss Augusta Cornog, of Lavonia, Ga., who was maid of honor. Miss Cornog's lovely gown was a model of flowered georgette and lace over pink. She wore a becoming hat of tulle in pastel shades and trimmed in pink roses.

The bride was beautiful in an exquisite gown of white georgette over satin. The bodice was fashioned with bateau neck line and the wide, flaring skirt was trimmed in panels of handsome shandeller lace. Her hat was a creation of elegant simplicity fashioned of georgette with a graceful satin bow held in place by a rhinestone buckle. Her gorgeous bouquet was of bride's roses and swainsons, showered with valley lilies. The only ornament was a rope of pearls, gift of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The house was decorated throughout in cut flowers and ferns. Large baskets filled with pink and white flowers and tied with tulle were placed in the rooms.

Mrs. Ligon Maret and Miss Nelle Poole were assisted by Misses Clara Gurley and Berthine Osborne kept the bride's book. Others assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Ethel Hubbard, Mrs. R. L. Beasley, Mrs. M. I. Allison, Miss Ella Siler, Mrs. O. D. Cannon, Mrs. C. A. Addington, Mrs. S. R. Yow, Mrs. J. H. Burton and Miss Grace Cook, of Atlanta, Ga.

Immediately after the reception the bride and groom left for Savannah, from where they will leave by boat for Boston and other eastern cities. After August 10 they will be at home at their apartment on Mount Vernon avenue, Danville, Va.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Wallace Cornog and has a wide circle of friends throughout the southern states. She is a graduate of the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville. Mr. Cousins is a native of Virginia and for several years has held a responsible position with Dan River mills, of Danville. He is also post commander of the American Legion of Danville and one of the official hosts of the American Legion of Virginia which meets in Danville in August.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Warren and son, Misses Kathleen and Mary Cousins, of Greenville, N. C.; A. S. Clarke, of Danville, Va.; W. H. Crush, of Richmond, Va.; Dr. J. M. Shelburne, of Danville; Mrs. Montine Skelton and Bas Hall, of Hartwell, Ga.; Miss Grace Cook, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy, of Martin, and Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Brewster, of Cedartown.

Miss Frances Marion Potts Younger Set To Wed Dr. Henry Thomas Jones

The announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Fanning Potts, of Gabbettville, Ga., of the engagement of their daughter, Frances Marion, to Dr. Henry Thomas Jones, is of interest to friends in both Georgia and Alabama.

Miss Potts is a graduate of West Point High school and of the Georgia State College for Women. Since her graduation three years ago she has been a popular and successful teacher in the public schools of Atlanta. She is the second of three lovely sisters; the oldest, Mrs. H. O. Burgess, 18 Oxford road, Atlanta, and the youngest, Miss Edna Potts, who has spent the past winter studying in Atlanta. Paul A. and Frank Potts are her brothers.

On her paternal side Miss Potts is the great-granddaughter of Morris G. Towles, whose wife was Mary Eanning Fawcett of French descent. The Towles family were among the early settlers of this country. They were prominent in politics, Tolliver Towles, a brother of Morris G. Towles, having served twice as a member of the constitutional convention of Alabama.

Miss Potts' mother was Miss Pearl White and is directly descended from men who have helped to make history. Captain Robert Hill Sledge has her great-grandfather and Lieutenant-Colonel W. A. Marcus, a Scotchman, was her great-grandfather. These two commanding officers drove the last British and raiding Seminoles from LaGrange to Horseshoe Bend on the Tallapoosa river in 1836.

Miss Potts has spent much of her life on her father's plantation in Troup county, which is adjacent to that of his father's, the late Francis M. Potts, a pioneer citizen of Atlanta. This plantation was a land grant from George III, of England, and has never been out of the family.

Dr. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Jones, of Jones Mills, Ala. James W. Jones has been a member of the state legislature of Alabama.

Mrs. Jones is a daughter of the late Col. Richard S. Hughes, officer in the War Between the States, and a staunch democratic member of the state legislature from Butler county during the reconstruction period.

Dr. Jones' brothers are James Houston Jones, prominent real estate and lumber dealer of Century, Fla.; Burnice E. Jones, a member of the law firm of Hamilton & Jones, Evergreen, Ala.; R. Earle Jones, member of the law firm of Merrill & Jones, Heflin, Ala.; Ralph L. Jones, county attorney of Monroe county, Monroeville, Ala. The four are members of the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

Dr. Jones' sisters are Mrs. J. R. Griffin of Excel, Ala.; Mrs. W. R. Merrill of Heflin, Ala.; Mrs. J. A.

York, Monroeville, Ala.; Mrs. S. E. Driskell of Jacksonville, Fla.

Dr. Jones went to Auburn, and the University of Alabama, from which institution he received his A. B. degree, graduating with high honors and being chosen to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship fraternity. He received his medical education from the University of Alabama medical school, Mobile Ala., and Emory university medical department, receiving his M. D. degree from the latter, graduating with the highest average of anyone in his class for four years, for which his medical fraternity awarded him the Kappa Psi Key for scholarship. He was president of the sophomore class, Dr. Jones is a member of the Phi Kappa literary fraternity, Kappa Psi medical fraternity and Asklepius scholarship medical fraternity.

Miss Lary Weds W. D. Pope.

A marriage of much interest to friends throughout the state was that of Miss Alma Lary and William David Pope, which was solemnized Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, July 16, at the home of the bride's mother in Hapeville, Ga.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joe Thrall, of Stockbridge, Ga., under an arch of ferns, pink gladioli entwined with pink and white ribbon and smilax. At intervals around the arch and throughout the house were tall vases of pink gladioli.

Preceding the entrance of the wedding party Mrs. James L. Lawson, sister of the bride, played "Romance," after which she sang "At Dawning." With the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march she announced the arrival of the wedding party.

Little Josie Lawson, dressed as a fairy, carried the ring in a rose.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Zack Adams, sister of the groom, and Sam Lary, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride and groom entered together. During the ceremony "To a Little Rose" was softly played by Mrs. Lawson.

The bride was lovely in a model of powder blue Canton crepe elaborately beaded and she carried an armful of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. A. Lary, mother of the bride, was becomingly gowned in gray Canton crepe.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Lary and Miss Elizabeth and John Lary, of Huntsville, Ala.

Emory Students Plant Tree.

Wednesday students in the newly established kindergarten department of Emory university celebrated the close of the first term's work with a tree planting.

The instructors and representatives of the Atlanta Kindergarten Alliance and the little children from the demonstration kindergarten gathered on the campus in front of the educational building and planted a cedar tree with appropriate ceremonies.

After a group of songs and speeches, Miss L. L. Pritchett, representing the summer class of 1924, climbed the tree Willett Allen, in honor of the head of the department, Miss Jennie Dargen, president of the Atlanta Kindergarten club, and an instructor in Emory summer school, placed the first shovel of dirt around the tree and Miss Madge Bigham, a member of the first graduating class of the former Atlanta Kindergarten normal, with appropriate remarks, placed the next shovel of dirt over the roots of the tree, and after her, all the students and visiting guests participated in the ceremonies.

The most interested participants in the planting were the little children, representing the demonstration school. They were Helen Mowell, Hazel Haddock, Marcellus Steadman, Douglas Acosta and Joseph Hutchinson. Dr. R. E. Wager, director of the summer school, made the dedication address and expressed the hope that this tree might represent life and development of the kindergarten department of the Teachers' college, which Emory some day hopes to possess.

The program was closed by a brief prayer offered by Dr. Akin Smart, and the guests and students gathered around the punch bowl and drank to the health of the tree.

Out of the 47 students who took these courses offered in the newly established kindergarten department, 41 were from Atlanta, six from other cities in the state, and one came from Havana, Cuba.

The students in the summer classes were Mrs. H. R. Acosta, Dr. Nina B. Beckham, Mrs. Ethel Bean Clark, Georgia Cleedy, Mrs. H. M. Cline, Alma Craddock, Harriette Crawford, Zilpha Dismar, Margaret Doonan, Nellie Dibble, Bessie Fant, Mrs. A. C. # ATLANTA WOMAN'S CLUB WILL DISTRIBUTE MANY SCHOLARSHIPS

Seventeen Georgia Schools Help Worthy Girls and Boys

Seventeen scholarships have been placed at the disposal of the Atlanta Woman's club by presidents of the various colleges in and around Georgia, and much good has been accomplished with these scholarships through the committee of the club, with Mrs. Thomas R. Harmon as the chairman.

Mrs. Harmon has served in this work for the past year with splendid success, having benefited fourteen girls and boys through these gift scholarships. Other reappointments will possibly be made within the next few weeks.

Young people who are anxious to complete their education and are situated so that it is impossible without assistance, may apply to the committee and receive the attention necessary to get them placed where it is possible to go on with their education, and it is the desire of the committee to help these worthy girls and boys in every way possible.

Mrs. John R. Hornady will assist Mrs. Harmon in securing new scholarships for the Atlanta Woman's club, as well as placing the students in the remaining scholarships now available.

Mrs. Hornady is especially familiar with the work, since she served the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs in the capacity of scholarship chairman for several years, handling more than fifty scholarships in the various colleges over the country.

Mrs. Harmon, in talking of her plans for the coming year said:

"After having handled the scholarship work of the Woman's club for a year, I find that nothing has ever appealed to me as more interesting and worthwhile, than to see the results of the benefits gained through this work by the youth of our community, and it will be my sole purpose during the coming year to add many more scholarships to the number we now have in order that every boy and girl applying for assistance may be given an opportunity to complete their education, if they have an ambition to do so."

"What is more noble in a young man or woman than to seek an education through trying difficulties?" asked Mrs. Harmon, "and who should be treated with more consideration than such young people? There are thousands of girls and boys who have everything in life to make them happy and still have no money to go to school, so what more worthy work could a woman's club accomplish than to seek out those who are ambitious and have not the means to perfect their education and assist them in becoming future worthy citizens by gaining the knowledge that is so necessary in this day and time?"

"At the present time we have at the club's disposal 17 scholarships and several have not been taken for the coming school season; if there are young people interested in the list given here, I will be so pleased to hear from them as early as possible so that arrangements may be made to enter them in September. Our scholarships at this time are in schools and colleges in our own state, but I believe in a short time we will have a broader field and will be able to offer scholarships in other states over the country."

Following are the scholarships placed at the disposal of the Woman's club for 1924-1925: Washington seminary, North Avenue Presbyterian school, Mrs. J. M. Moseley's school, where reappointments have been made for the coming year; others available are one at Mrs. J. W. Cherry's school, Riverside Military academy, Woodberry school and University School for Boys; part scholarships at Bessie Tift college, Columbia institute, Piedmont college, at Demorest, Ga.; a full scholarship at Young Harris college, at Young Harris, Ga., and one at Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson's School of Oratory. Part scholarships at Southern Business college, Crichton's Business college, Bryan-Hatton Business college and two half scholarships at Simplex Short-hand and Business college. One full scholarship at Marist college. One dancing scholarship at Miss Nellie Sullivan's school held in her new and lovely studio on Ponce de Leon avenue, and two dancing scholarships with Miss Margaret Bryan, who specializes in ballroom and feature dancing.

All of the above scholarships are in accredited schools of the highest standing, and Mrs. Harmon urges the young people to apply early so that all appointments may be made in time for entering in September. Each scholarship covers tuition promised and not board. In making application, please send testimonials as to character, ability and need of assistance to the scholarship chairman, Mrs. Thomas R. Harmon, 105 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Heinsohn Writes Of Plans and Work In Second District

Mrs. Robert Heinsohn, of Sylvester, president of the second district federation of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, writes: "All the clubs of the district disbanded during June, July and August, and many remain so through September."

"There are no clubhouses in the district to be kept open during the summer as social centers and the many club rooms in use during the winter months are mostly deserted through the hot weeks."

"Of course those of our clubs who are working for a clubhouse are never altogether idle; the Sylvester Woman's club is one of these. We serve the Kiwanis luncheons every Friday, which is indeed no small undertaking during hot days."

"We have been able to add quite a nice little sum to our building fund by this means, and also have most gratefully received and accepted their (the Kiwanis') offer of real substantial help when we begin our building."

"Our district convention takes place in Thomasville in the fall, immediately following the state convention. We expect to have a most enjoyable and profitable convention with lots of beautiful music, as the second district, and particularly Thomasville and Bainbridge, has unusually good talent."

BRIDGE SERIES TO BE GIVEN IN BANQUET HALL

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president of the Atlanta Woman's club and chairman of the banquet hall committee, announces a series of bridge parties, to begin after August 1, in the banquet hall of the club, where the members may invite their friends to apply early so that all appointments may be made in time for entering in September. Each scholarship covers tuition promised and not board. In making application, please send testimonials as to character, ability and need of assistance to the scholarship chairman, Mrs. Thomas R. Harmon, 105 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

The first party of the series will be sponsored by Mrs. D. F. Stevenson and Mrs. Arthur Hazard and already many reservations have been made. Mrs. Smith will be assisted by several members of the club in arranging these parties and everything possible will be done to make them attractive and delightful.

Mrs. J. L. Wheeler and Mrs. P. C. Fable will sponsor the party of the second week in August, and each week following there will be two club members who will assemble many visitors and friends in the banquet hall to enjoy a game of bridge and at the same time to feel that they are benefiting the club by assembling there for these social entertainments.

Mrs. Price-Smith has served as chairman of the banquet hall building fund committee for several years and has proved excellent leadership in raising large sums for financing the building. She is a woman of unusual ability and renders invaluable assistance to the club constantly, having just staged a successful golf exhibition match, between four of Atlanta's star players last week, under the auspices of the Atlanta Woman's club, particularly Thomasville and Bainbridge, has unusually good talent."

Mrs. T. T. Stevens Calls the Board Of Atlanta Federation of Women

One of the most important meetings held by the executive board of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs is called for Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at East Lake Country club.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president, in issuing the call for the meeting states that matters of importance to the federation are to be brought before Wednesday's meeting, which is the first to be called to begin plans for the entertainment of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs when it meets in Atlanta November 11 to 14, as guests of the Atlanta federation.

The executive board of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs is composed of the officers, past presidents, all chairmen and the president or her representative of each of the 114 federated clubs.

Mrs. Stevens urges a full attendance of the board at Wednesday's meeting.

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the fifth district and vice president of the Atlanta federation, will entertain the board at tea following the meeting which will open promptly at 3:30 o'clock.

Interested reports were given by the various chairmen. Mrs. A. H. McDonald, chairman of the ways and means, reported $100 for the piano fund, proceeds of the recent bridge party sponsored by her committee. The house chairman reported a substantial amount on hand from the Friday afternoon teas which are increasing in popularity each week.

A donation of $25 was given by the club to the Tallulah Falls school, as its part in the work of preparing for a "greater Tallulah."

An interesting present came from Mrs. Murray Howard, Mrs. S. B. Strickland, Mrs. A. L. Smith, of hand embroidered card table covers.

Details were perfected for the house party to be entertained by Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Strickland at their summer cottage at Dahlonega the first week in August. An invitation is extended to every member of the club. The party will travel by auto and those who contemplate going are asked to get in touch with Mrs. Edward Medlock, chairman, or Mrs. James Hill and Mrs. A. H. McDonald.

At the conclusion of the business session, the following program was rendered: Mrs. Kennon Caldwell, in a melody of her own composition, Frank Caldwell, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Kennon Caldwell, in a group of songs and several banjo solos. Miss Mary Jo Merritt gave a reading, "The First Quarrel," followed by a humorous selection.

Mrs. Helbig Honors Mrs. Nanette K. Ball.

One of the largest teas held on Friday at the Atlanta Woman's club was given by Mrs. Edwin M. Helbig in honor of Mrs. Nanette K. Ball, of Chicago, who is the house guest of Mrs. W. E. Floding of Myrtle street.

Yellow was the predominating color and the tea table was prettily arranged with a silver basket as a centerpiece holding old-fashioned garden flowers of brown-eyed susans and shasta daisies.

Silver and glass candlesticks holding unshaded yellow candles were at the four corners of the table while at each guest's place there were souvenirs tied with yellow ribbons. Place cards and individual nut dishes were carried out in the same color scheme.

The guests were Mrs. Nanette Ball, Mrs. W. E. Floding, Mrs. W. E. Quillian, Mrs. Della Alden, Mrs. Frank Burgin, Mrs. George Denman, Mrs. Mary Campbell, Mrs. Phillip Essig, Mrs. Cheston Weems, Miss Mary Floding and Miss Bonnie Nesbit.

Mrs. Lary Hostess At Dinner.

Mrs. A. Lary entertained at dinner on Friday at her home in Hapeville, Ga. The centerpiece for the table was a silver vase filled with Sweet Williams and ferns. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Lary, Elizabeth and John Lary, of Huntsville, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Pope, Miss Mollie Garland, Sam Lary, Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Garner, Dr. and Mrs. James L. Lawson and Mrs. A. Lary.

Business and Professional Women Hold Convention

West Baden Springs, Ind., July 26. The sixth annual convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs convened at the West Baden hotel at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon, July 21. The meeting was called to order by the national president, Miss Adelia Pritchard, of Portland, Ore. There were more than 1,500 women assembled from every state in the union except one.

The address of welcome was made by Mrs. Ethel M. Bailey, of Indiana, and the response was made by Miss Margaret Stewart, of Utah.

Miss Pritchard, the national president, gave an address which was very inspiring. Miss Elinor Conrod, of Chattanooga, Tenn., executive secretary, in her report showed the actual workings of the federation. The increase in membership as reported by Miss Conrod during the years of 1923 and 1924, have been 130 clubs with a membership of 5,000 members. The entire federation now numbers 558 clubs with a total membership of 37,970 members. The enthusiasm of the entire convention was aroused when Miss Turin of Honolulu, in a speech, brought a short greeting from the club of Hawaiian islands.

Other reports given during the afternoon were from the national treasurer, Miss Mary L. Johnson, of Trenton, N. J., and corresponding secretary, Miss Lila Ashby, of Little Rock, Ark., chairman of program and of credentials committee.

During the convention reports from the national chairmen have been read in general assembly and round table discussions have followed, from which discussions the various club delegates and their alternates have gathered valuable material to take back to their local clubs.

There have been a number of notable speakers brought before the convention. Mrs. Martin Kent Northern, of Evanson, Ill. spoke of the "Political Responsibility of Woman." Feans Woolen, of Indianapolis, Ind., spoke on the education of the young girl going into business. Guy Gundaker, of Philadelphia, Pa., who is the retiring international rotary president, spoke on rotary's purposes and activities. An address was given by Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois.

There have been many social features to the convention, including vocational luncheons, dinners. At the emblem breakfast which was held on Wednesday morning a tableau of the national emblem was presented to the entire assembly wearing the national emblem. Only wearers of the national emblem were admitted to this breakfast.

At noon on Wednesday the birthday luncheon was presided over by the national honorary president, Mrs. Lena Lake Forrest, of Detroit, Mich. A number of talks were made and Mrs. Forrest cut the immense birthday cake, which was embossed in the national colors. Each delegate was given a piece of this cake to take home with her.

On Thursday evening the annual banquet was held in the atrium of the West Baden hotel. The banquet was presided over by Miss Mary Stewart of Washington, D. C.

Wednesday evening was known as club night. Miss Stella Akin, national second vice president, of Savannah, Ga., presiding. Recreation has not been neglected at the convention, many using all the spare minutes from the assemblies to take advantage of the many sports offered—horseback riding, tennis, golf, swimming and hiking.

The young women from Georgia who are either club delegates or state delegates are Miss Dora Mendes, Savannah, state president; Miss Eric Reynolds, Miss Nellie Walsh, Miss Mamie Kling, Miss Ruth Kierman, Miss Mary Bartlett, all of Savannah; Miss Mabel Vining and Mrs. Bulah Wakeford, of Albany; Miss Pauline Steinhauser, Miss Elizabeth Eager and Miss Ada Booth, of Atlanta; Miss Marie Merrell, of Thompsonville.

New Committees Named

As the scope of D. A. R. work broadens in Georgia, Mrs. Talmadge, state regent, has created several new committees. Mrs. Ch. Rice Akerman is chairman of the committee which will seek to place a bronze marker in the English parish house which covers the remains of James Oglethorpe, the founder of Georgia.

One of the striking features of the new program is the innovation of Woodrow Wilson day, commemorating the birthday of the master statesman of the world war period. The committee is headed by Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, who introduced the resolution providing for this observance. Her committee will keep before the chapters the opportunity that is afforded to pay tribute to one of America's foremost patriots. It was he who proclaimed in the language of international diplomacy the brotherhood of nations and it was he who first promulgated a practical plan guaranteeing the largest measure of harmony among the peoples of the earth. It was under his leadership that America took first place among the nations. Such a contribution to world peace and to the prestige of the United States elicits the admiration of all patriotic citizens. It is the highest duty and keenest privilege to pay him homage on this day.

Another new committee is Kenmore, of which Mrs. J. H. Moyer is the chairman. Kenmore is the beautiful home of Betty Washington Lewis at Fredericksburg, Va., and the commission of fine arts of Washington, D. C., makes this comment: "One has but to read Washington's diaries to understand how often and how intimately he was at Kenmore. During the revolution he and his sister removed their mother from Ferry farm to a house on the Kenmore estate, so that she would be safe from the despoiling hands of enemy soldiers. It is now maintained as a memorial of her."

Kenmore was building at the same time Mount Vernon was being enlarged. The same workmen were employed on the mansion. Kenmore faces Mary Washington's monument near her grave. Moreover, it is one of the finest examples of early American architecture.

At the formal opening of this estate the Toccoa, Ga., chapter presented a bronze marker to mark one of the thirteen trees planted by George Washington.

Mrs. Charles Rice, chairman of Constitution and Magna Charta day, prepared eight different papers for use of chapters for Magna Charta day, and will prepare an article on the constitution.

Because the D. A. R. is recognized as a potent factor in combating all perils that threaten to encroach upon the institutions, in truth the foundations of our country, it is desired that every woman who is eligible to membership may avail herself of the privilege. Mrs. Griggs, Athens, is chairman of organization of new chapters that there may be chapters in as many towns and cities as possible.

The ideals of a nation have their birth in the home and childhood, which fills the mind of the child will later give character to our citizenry. To assure the proper reading matter and textbooks a committee with Mrs.

PATRIOTIC EDUCATION

With the growth of the work of Patriotic Education in the N. S. D. A. R. we find new opportunities for patriotic service. There is presented to the society an unusual opportunity. It is invited to become the distributor of the book of the American Creed, and the Patriotic Education committee is named as the channel through which the distribution will be made. The book is delightfully interesting and enlightening. It tells how, why, and when the American Creed was written by William Tyler Page, and sets forth doctrinal authorities on which the American Creed is based, presenting in a most concise manner certain statements invaluable to every patriotic American. The book is not obtainable through the trade or for any purpose except for presentation in educational and patriotic work. Upon payment of $1.00 one may become a founder, which means life membership in the American Creed Fellowship, each founder to receive a copy of the book bearing her membership number. It is hoped that the national chairman, state regents, state chairmen and many D. A. R. will speedily become founders and will use their most earnest efforts to give the book wide circulation, not only through schools of their states, but in all patriotic and civic organizations. As the distributor of the book the nation's society will be honored in having in the title page the name of our President General, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook.

With information complete and accurate data as to the school conditions in the reservations secured from the commissioner of education, the secretary of war, secretary of the navy and others, the national chairman of patriotic education can lay the matter before a committee of the congress of the United States for the purpose of seeking to obtain appropriate legislation.

Mrs. Reed, national chairman, writes: "The generous support given to the schools last year was wholly encouraging and showed the earnest desire of the Daughters to put forth every effort for furthering one of the most important of the many splendid activities on the program of the national society. The call for scholarships, both perpetual and annual, still comes to us, and there is need, too, for new buildings and equipment. Will you urge chapters to continue their co-operation and use every means at hand to keep alive the interest in our southern mountain and Indian schools. Suggest plans for the celebration in September of Constitution week and the proper observance of days of historic significance. Call attention to printed matter listed and urge the use of it. Let us make this a big year in Patriotic Education."

New Zealanders Win Golden Opinions

BY MRS. AUGUST BURDICK.

Mrs. Rachel Don, president of the New Zealand W. C. T. U., sends a message of thanks and appreciation through this column, to the white ribbons of Atlanta for courtesies extended during the recent visit of Mrs. Don and Miss Christine Henderson to the city. She says:

"I tried in vain to express my gratitude to you, dear comrades, for your royal welcome and exceeding kindness to us while in your state. I concluded long ago that California had our first love, Colorado our warm love, Evanston, because of its historic memories, our best love, but Atlanta our lasting love; it is not possible that we would or could forget the love you showered upon us."

"Naturally we loved the very name of Atlanta, Georgia, because of our love to Mary Harris Armour, but now we love it very much because of the white ribbons that truly are our sisters."

"To attempt to name them would not be wise because of the number to tell all we feel to individuals would be impossible; but, oh, I do want you all to know how much we appreciate your kindness, and how I hope, like Mary of old, to keep all these things and ponder them in my heart, until I can tell the story with a fiery enthusiasm that will kindle an unquenchable fire of love in the hearts of my countrywomen as they listen."

"We shall never be strangers any more, but sisters and comrades in our efforts for world prohibition, world peace and world purity."

"For all you did for us, thank you! For all you are to us I say in the words of Paul, 'I thank my God upon every remembrance of thee.' (Phil. 1:3.) So please let all who entertained us know that we are grateful and shall forever carry a most pleasant recollection of Atlanta and its glorious women."

Feted in Eastman.
 When these distinguished New Zealand white ribbons, Mrs. Don and Miss Henderson, came to Macon they were met at the station by a welcome committee. They spent Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. F. Coleman; from the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. Jno. M. Bohannon.

Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. F. Coleman; from the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. Jno. M. Bohannon.

Dr. Mary Harris Armour, a long-time friend of the visitors, introduced them. Miss Henderson responded with a clear and illuminating talk on New Zealand, especially as related to America, showing how their late as to prohibition was bound up with the urging America to hold fast and make a success of prohibition and the rest of the world would follow.

Then Mrs. Don, a speaker of rare ability to win and hold an audience, spoke as only she can speak. One who was present said: "We never applaud in church on Sunday, but when after carrying us up and up with her she reached a thrilling climax, as she described the glorious last fight which will come in New Zealand some day, when they will win the decisive victory, and pictured herself rushing to speak (as she said we would be doing) to the 'Anglo-American' (America, Georgia, Eastman, New Zealand, have gone dry)." The audience was swept in spite of itself, into involuntary and enthusiastic applause. Adding, "Remember the thermometer was 96, some speaker who can enthuse people with the thermometer running about 90 in the shade."

Eastman Gives Public Welcome.
 These charming visitors have been in demand as speakers at missionary meetings and other gatherings, also the inspiration for a continuous series of luncheons, teas, dinners, drives and outings, culminating Sunday evening in a splendid welcome at the Baptist church.

Conspicuous in the elaborate floral decorations were the flags of the Dominion of New Zealand and of the United States, with staffs crossed and united with a white ribbon bow, the badge of the W. C. T. U.

Wellcome were voiced from the city by Col. W. L. Wooten, the churches, Rev. George Acree; from the Kiwanians, by T. W. Oliver; the Girl Scouts, by Mrs. E. R. Smith; from the missionary societies by Mrs. M. H. Edwards; from the U. D. C. by Mrs. W. P. Cobb; from the D. A. R., by

Mrs. Newton C. Wing Becomes Chairman Of Children's Films

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, widely-known Atlanta club woman, has been appointed chairman of the children's work of the better films committee of Atlanta, to succeed Mrs. Porter Langston, who becomes vice president of the committee.

Mrs. Wing's work will be confined largely to the children's matinees that are held each Saturday at the Howard and Alpha theaters.

Mrs. Wing, who is known as one of the hardest and most successful workers in Atlanta club work and whose success with the better homes program has attracted national attention, will assume her new duties at once.

Candidates' Luncheons Continued by Voters' League

The Atlanta League of Women Voters will entertain as its guests at the regular Tuesday candidates' luncheon at the Ponce de Leon at 12:30 o'clock the candidates running for solicitor general of the Atlanta circuit, Solicitor John A. Boykin and Judge G. M. Watkins.

Mrs. Sanford Gay, president of the league, urges that this luncheon be well attended, as it is given for the benefit of all voters and the candidates, and the league has gone to considerable trouble in getting it up.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. W. A. Arnold, try 6549.

League Questionnaires.

The questionnaires gotten up by the Atlanta League of Women Voters have been prepared and decided upon by the league's board, and are now at the printer's. They will be finished and sent to the candidates at an early date.

When the answers to the questionnaires have been received at the league headquarters, from all of the candidates, they will be read before an open meeting of the members, and any others who may desire to be present.

Cabaret Bridge Postponed.

The league's cabaret benefit bridge party to be given at the Georgian Terrace has been postponed to a later date, on account of the absence of so many of the league members, and the heat.

The date will be announced later.

Business Women's Club.

Mrs. J. Milton Wallace, member of the eleventh ward, Atlanta League of Women Voters, is forming a Business Women's club as a branch of the league. Meetings will be held every first and third Monday.

The first of these meetings will be held Monday, August 4, at the Ponce de Leon cafe, at 6:30 o'clock. Supper will be served at that time.

Mr. Richardson, manager of the cafe, has kindly offered the third floor dining hall to the members of this club from 5 to 8, where the girls can rest, or have a business meeting before supper.

Regular Quarterly Meeting.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Atlanta League of Women Voters was held Friday at the chamber of commerce at 3 o'clock.

The meeting was well attended. The standing committees read their reports and the ward chairmen gave reports of their activities for the past three months, and their tentative plans for the rest of the year.

One of the outstanding events of the meeting was the resolution that the league put on a drive for registering at the city hall, and a drive for voting.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters intends to concentrate on these two activities for the next few months. They will not only appeal to the public to register and vote, but will endeavor to get the people to the polls and when there, show the ones who have had no experience in voting just how to go about it. No effort will be made to influence the selection of candidates.

Symphony of Bible Music

This beautiful symphony of biblical music in which many women take part, was arranged by our talented congregational editor, Mrs. D. C. Carson, and will warrant a serial, extending three successive Sundays. It is a fine production for our young people and can be used as a concert program in Sunday schools or in missionary societies.

THE MUSIC IN THE BIBLE.

A Bible Reading Arranged as a Concert Program. BY MRS. D. T. CARSON.

The program opens with the first recorded chorus, when the "morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy," when the foundations of the earth were laid, with Orion and the Pleiades taking the respective parts. The setting for this represents the universe just before the dawn, when the dark is giving way to the stirring of light in earth and sky; when no foot of man or beast had trodden the green grass, no bird-song had floated through the silent forests. Into the profound silence breaks the mighty music of the spheres, which swells through boundless space till the waves of harmony beat upon the throne of God, and in response the Sons of God shout for joy over the wonderful beauty of the emerald earth and the sapphire sky. Job 38:7, 31.

The next number of the program will present Jubal. "He was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ." Gen. 4:21. It is great to be a worthy scholar in music, but how wonderfully greater to be a pioneer in the world of harmony!

Next will appear a man 80 years old, who breaks into song, the words being composed on the spot, on the occasion of a great deliverance. It is a long hymn, exultant and triumphant. "I will sing unto the Lord and He hath triumphed gloriously, the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea." Ex. 15:1-19. The sister of this man Moses, a woman about 90 years of age, Miriam by name, takes up the words, and she and the women in the vast assemblage, shaking their cymbals, and decorously dancing, toss the words back and forth. "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously, the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea."

This wonderful singing takes place near the shore of a great inland sea, a few miles wide at the point near which a company of people, "about 600,000 on foot that were men, besides children, and a mixed multitude (Ex. 12:37, 38), have just safely crossed and the tranquil waters of the sea now cover hundreds of horses and chariots and an army. There has been a great storm, an earthquake, as one account has it: "The clouds poured out water, the skies sent out a sound, thine arrows also went abroad. The voice of the thunder was in the heaven, the lightnings lightened the world, the earth trembled and shook." Ps. 77:17, 18. The next thing on the program is a duet by Deborah and Barak. Deborah was a prophetess and she dwelt under a palm tree. She inspired Barak to undertake to deliver Israel from the rule of Jabin, king of Canaan, whose chief captain, Sisera, had just been killed by Jael, as he slept in her tent. These two, Deborah and Barak, sing responsively—"Awake, awake, Deborah; awake, awake, utter a song; arise, Barak, and lead thy captivity captive." "Praise ye the Lord for the avenging of Israel." Judges 5:12. The scenery for this shows a great palm tree where Deborah holds her court.

St. Paul's Society Holds Meeting.

The missionary society of St. Paul's Methodist church, held its weekly meeting in the main auditorium on Monday afternoon, July 22. The program was under the auspices of Circle No. 1. After singing the song, "O Zion, Haste," the devotional taken from different portions of the Bible on association of ideas was given by Miss Winifred Smith. A solo, "The Ninety and Nine," was rendered by Mrs. Arthur Stinson. Miss Hooper, who is connected with the McDonald Wesley House of Home, La., was the speaker for the afternoon. She related the habits, customs and religion of the French people with whom she works. A reading entitled "The Gospel of the Rural District," illustrating the wonderful work of the missionaries, was given by Mrs. Arthur Stinson. Mrs. McDonald, the president, announced an experience meeting for next Monday afternoon. A large attendance is urged.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

Conference Held At Blue Ridge Was Highly Inspiring

Start saving your pennies! Why? So that you will not be financially embarrassed when time for the next Blue Ridge conference rolls around. The Blue Ridge missionary educational conference held its annual meeting this year from June 27, through July 6, at Blue Ridge, N. C., 17 miles east of Asheville. Surely there was never a more successful, uplifting conference ever held.

The courses of study were most far-reaching and instructive, and the instructors in each course were the best to be obtained in their particular line. Such classes as those in personal evangelism with Bishop Branton, of Mississippi; missions in the local church, with Dr. Herbert W. Gates, of Boston; woman's mission study of China, with Mrs. Lipscomb, of Nashville; and adventures in brotherhood with Dr. C. Q. Le Sourd, of New York, will give the reader a faint idea of the variety of courses offered at this conference. The only trouble was that there were so many good things given that we who attended could hardly decide what to take.

Every morning each denomination held a watch service, beginning the day with prayer and Bible reading, and each evening everybody assembled on the wide front porch facing the beautiful mountains for vesper services. At the 10:30 morning platform hour, we were addressed each day by some wonderful speaker who made up, in many cases, for that particular hour. Such men as Bishop Richardson, of the Episcopal church, Dr. O. J. Gray, of the Presbyterian church, Dr. H. H. McLaughlin, of the Methodist church, and Dr. Weatherford, of the Baptist church, brought us most inspiring messages. One of the most powerful was a stirring address by Dr. H. H. McLaughlin, of the Methodist church, on "The Disciples of Christ, on July 4. Dr. Corey is one of the really big men of the church today, a man who thinks in terms of world Christianity and world brotherhood, and his talk was gripping and vital in its appeal. We must not neglect to speak of "Mother Ross," of the Disciples of Christ, who gave her home as America. Mother Ross has a son, Emory, who is doing a wonderful work at Bangalore, India. There was nobody at Blue Ridge who was a greater blessing than Mother Ross. She is 72 years young, and to see her is to be inspired. To know her is to love her, and to hear her talk about the Savior and His kingdom is to catch a vision of one's own opportunity in connection with that kingdom.

Another tremendous source of inspiration in the conference was the wealth of information Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin and Miss Barber, who have served for years in China, Mr. and Mrs. Corey, missionaries in the mountains of west Tennessee, and Myrtle Smith, who will go as a medical missionary to India; Miss Ravas, who will be sent out to India this fall as a nurse, all these and others brought messages of a white harvest, and the crying need of more workers who will be willing to go and tell the story of "The Jesus Way" to the millions of "The Jesus Way" who do not know Him. Mr. McLaughlin told of an old, white-haired Chinaman who said on hearing the gospel for the first time, "If you people believe this Jesus story, and if it is over 1,900 years old, why have you not told it to us long, long ago?"

Keynote Service. The keynote of the entire conference was service and the imparting of the desire to share with others, this sweetest story ever told, which is so familiar to us, and so tragically unfamiliar to so many others who are as just as precious in God's sight as we are.

But the conference was not all work and "speechifying," not by any means. There were the most delightful swimming pools, tennis and volleyball courts, mountain climbs and other amusements. In fact, Blue Ridge is such a charming summer resort, that after the religious conference is over during the month of August the buildings are thrown open to the general public, and many people spend their vacations there. One of the truly beautiful sights of the meeting this year was the large group of young people, who not only had the benefit of the spiritual uplift and instruction, but who also managed to have the "time of their lives."

The superlative tone of this article sounds like an advertisement. It is not, but if anyone wishes to serve better, come closer to God than ever before, learn more of His word and His world, and at the same time have a thoroughly enjoyable ten days in the mountains, just save one little dollar a week until next June, and let us help make the Atlanta delegation one hundred strong.

MRS. NATHAN T. MOORE, Superintendent of Missionary Education of First Christian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

Trinity Methodist Woman's Society.

The Woman's Missionary society of Trinity Methodist church met on Monday afternoon. There was a good attendance and circle No. 6, Mrs. Fred Cole, chairman, presented a fine program, a travelogue among our foreign missions. Miss Mamie Bass gave a resume of the life of Bishop Lambuth and told of the missions in Japan, Korea, China, Africa and Siberia, founded by his influence.

Mrs. Newton Craig spoke of the new Houchens hospital in which Dr. Houchens has done some of his work. The hospital is of Chinese architecture and the building was supervised by Dr. Manget, who is now in the United States for a year's furlough.

The Southern Methodist church started the first school in China for high-class Chinese girls and now many have become Christian teachers. Several institutional churches have been established. The future king of Bur of the important provinces in Africa is now studying at Clarke university in Atlanta. His father was converted by Christian missionaries and sent to receive a Christian education and introduce civilized customs into the interior of the country. A motion was carried to continue the regular meetings throughout the summer.

Mrs. Ed. Wachendorf and her circle will have charge of the church decorations for the month of August. The meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Griffin.

Mrs. E. D. Crawford, one of the most widely known and best loved of southern Baptist women. As the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. D. Gray, she has a heritage of piety and culture. Mrs. Crawford has been very active in both state and local work and is most loyal to her home church, Druid Hills, of which she is a charter member.

Annual Convention Of King's Children.

The 25th annual convention at Columbus has become a part of the history of the state branch of the King's Daughters and Sons of Georgia, and the day at Grant park, Monday, July 21, having previously studied the textbook, "Stewardship and Missions," at home. A brief review of the questions to be answered was conducted by Miss Cora Anne Brown and a written test given. Members of the circle completing successfully the examination will receive seals for the completion of every delegate in 1922.

Words of welcome from the "federated clubs by Miss Mary Tigner, who spoke beautifully of the King's Daughters work. She spoke of the federated club women as being daughters of Martha and she as a daughter of Martha was most happy to welcome the King's Daughters as the daughters of Mary, who chose the better part.

Of the nine chief justices of the United States, eight were college men and seven of these attended Christian colleges.

Miss Hall then introduced the distinguished guests of the convention: Mrs. F. J. Mansfield, central council member and state president of Iowa, and Mrs. Sarah Gule, council member of Ohio. Mrs. Gule brought greetings from 150 circles in Ohio. Mrs. Gule's Bible lessons given during the convention were the source of much favorable comment on the part of large numbers of hearers.

The features of the Wednesday afternoon session was the memorial service, in memory of the beloved members of the order, who have passed on to the "Great Divide" during the past year. This service was conducted by Mrs. W. A. Reeves, central council member of the state.

Mrs. Fannie McDonald's report of the Silver Cross Magazine was very interesting and novel. She gave a red rose for every five subscribers in a circle.

One of the forward steps of the convention was the increase in state dues from 25 cents to 40 cents. Most of the circles also increased their pledges for state expansion work.

Mrs. Lewis Wright, junior secretary, gave an interesting report and insight into the wonderful work of the younger people are accomplishing in the various circles.

Our president, in urging more organization among the juniors, reminded us of the fact that "our nation marches forward on the children's feet."

Among the social features given for our entertainment was an automobile trip to Fort Benning. After visiting the principal places of interest we were entertained with a beautiful reception given at the home of the commanding general by the general's wife, Mrs. Bryant H. Wells.

Another treat was a visit to the Sacred Bradley House of Old Ladies, which is the special work of the King's Daughters of Columbus.

Our charming guests, Mrs. F. J. Mansfield and Mrs. Sarah Gule, added so much by their wise counsel, their beautiful lessons and their radiant presence.

Miss Kate Hall was selected president by unanimous vote. She was also elected central council member. Other officers selected follow: First vice president, Mrs. G. P. Folk, Waycross; second vice president, Mrs. W. E. Hopper, Augusta; recording secretary, Mrs. J. G. Bea, Waycross; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. N. Smith, Savannah; junior secretary, Mrs. Lewis H. Wright, Augusta; treasurer, Mrs. B. H. Minckley, Waycross.

Executive committee: Mrs. T. P. Wright, Savannah; Mrs. C. M. Truitt, Columbus; Mrs. T. J. Darling, Waycross; Mrs. W. E. Reeves, Augusta.

Consecration service, conducted by Mrs. F. J. Mansfield. Adjournment by state president.

An invitation from Augusta was accepted for the next convention.

MRS. W. E. HOPPER, Publicity Chairman.

BRIEFLY TOLD

In response to an urgent plea, a member of All Saints' chapter, Daughters of the King, has accumulated 100 good books which will be sent in the near future by All Saints' chapter to a prison where there is no library and the prison authorities realize the great need for wholesome literature in dealing with the incarcerated men.

Sunday, July 20, being the third Sunday in the month, was generally observed by the Daughters of the King, who partook of the holy communion in a body. There is inspiration in the thought that throughout the world, wherever there is a chapter of the Daughters of the King, the third Sunday is set apart for this corporate communion.

Coming From China.

Dr. Hattie F. Love, of the China mission of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, will sail for the United States on August 1. Dean W. W. Blume, of the Soochow University Law school, and Mrs. Blume are en route to the States, on account of Mrs. Blume's health.

The Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, have made a fine centenary record, and one that the church would do well to follow. On June 10 certificates were issued to 921 Sunday schools certifying that they had paid their centenary pledge in full. The aggregate paid by these Sunday schools is more than $425,000.

The many friends of Miss Lois Maddox, of Madison, Ga., will be deeply grieved to learn of the illness of her sister at Toccoa, Ga. Miss Maddox sails in August for her new field of work in Japan, being sent out by the woman's council of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, as a kindergarten teacher.

Consecrated as Missionaries. Twenty-eight young women were consecrated as missionaries by the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist church, south, in 1923, and they are now in training at Scarritt College for Trained Workers for missionary service.

The saying, "Information gives inspiration" is true with the women belonging to the mission and Bible study classes of the Methodist Episcopal church, south. In 1923 there were reported 6,402 classes with an enrollment of 176,263 members. Bible study there were reported 5,341 classes, an increase of 635 over 1922.

Address on China.

Baptist women who spent last Monday afternoon at the meeting of the W. M. S. of the Druid Hills church and heard an able address and Christian song so impressively rendered by Rev. Bo S. Ding, were given a new vision and interest in the teeming millions of his native land, the Chinese empire. Mr. Ding is a Christian enthusiast in behalf of his own people and is longing to return after finishing his education to carry back the gospel message where only one in one hundred have ever even heard the name of Christ.

Georgia's First Y. P. S. L. Camp Scores Complete Success

In its initial camp for Young People's Service League members of the diocese of Georgia, the department of religious education, which sponsors the venture, feels that it has scored a complete success. While the attendance was not as large as was expected, the impression made on those who attended wholly justified the camp idea. The attendance included the bishop, thirteen officers and other adults and counselors, twenty young people, and five children, making a total of forty.

The camp was located on St. Simon's island, near Brunswick, at the far end, away from the summer colony, on the edge of a grove of shade trees, about two hundred feet from the ocean. The girls were quartered in a large cottage and the boys in tents; classes were held under the trees, and meals were served on the porch of the Arnold house.

The officers and counselors included the Rev. W. Amison Jonnard, director and vice chairman of the department of religious education; chief counselor, Mrs. F. K. Tollitt, of Johnson City, Tenn.; registrar, Miss Emma Twigg; instructors, Mrs. Olaf Otto, Rev. D. Watson Winn, Rev. Robb White, Jr., Rev. E. W. Hallock and Mr. Jonnard. Beginning on Wednesday morning and continuing through Saturday, the daily schedule was as follows: 7 a. m., morning ocean dip; 8:15, prayers; 8:30, breakfast; 9 to 9:30, intermission; 9:30 to 10:15, first class, Bible class by Rev. Mr. Winn, for boys and girls; second class, instructions on personal religion (ideals of manhood and womanhood), Rev. Mr. Hallock for boys, Mrs. Otto for girls; 11:30 to 12, recess; 12, noonday prayer;

our churches, vacation days have been gladly welcomed by our women. However, vacation days have not meant cessation but only change of activities. The ardor with which our women and girls are serving during the summer in vacation Bible schools and carrying on mission study classes is reminding one of the industrious old woman who said after a full day's work, "While I'm restin' I'll scrub the floor."

First District Rally. Mrs. J. H. Greene, of Fairburn, Ga., announces the first district rally of the W. M. U. of the Fairburn association at Palmetto Baptist church. It will be a great pleasure to some of our Atlanta friends to meet with the choice women who gather at Palmetto Wednesday, July 30. A cordial invitation comes to us from Mrs. Greene, the district secretary.

News comes from the Southern Baptist foreign mission board, located in Richmond, Va., that it is through the magnificent gift of a woman, Miss Varian Broke, of Anderson, S. C., that the board has been enabled to appoint, equip and send into the field ten new missionaries, without expenditure of a cent. Such a gift should be inspirational to many who have read this cheering announcement, as the work on all the fields is sadly in need of reinforcements.

Special Summer Rates, $9.00 per day up, Grove Park Inn, Asheville, Finest Resort Hotel in the World.—(adv.)

12:05 to 1, third class, missionary course, "The Other Side of the World," by Rev. Mr. White; 1 to 1:30, intermission; 1:30, dinner; 2:30 to 4, quiet hour, rest of afternoon recreation; 6, supper, followed by stunts, camp fire and good night service.

Big Feature. The big feature of the camp was the Rev. Mr. White's class and before the camp was over many of the boys and girls were asking questions about the duties of missionaries, and as a result of these lectures at least one member volunteered for service to the department of missions.

The real inspiration of the camp came at the good night service on the beach when the camp director led the prayers and inspirational talks. Saturday night the whole service was given over to preparation for the corporate communion the next day. Sunday morning the campers attended service at historic Christ church, Frederica, on the island, and the bishop preached a special sermon and was the celebrant at the holy communion service. Before the service a Bible class was held under the trees, after which the young people ran around and sang the "Vesley Oak," under which the Wesleys preached. After service they drove to the old fort at Frederica, built by General Oglethorpe, the founder of the colony for defense against the Spaniards.

To Rev. Mr. Jonnard is due the success and inspiration of the camp. He was at all times the life of the camp, and the members felt that they are unusually lucky to have as their young people's leader one who is so exceptionally gifted in this work and who makes an appeal to youth.

EDITH D. JOHNSTON, Publicity Director.

Bad Complexions Now Removed by Absorption

It has been found that ordinary mercurized wax has the power to absorb an old, faded or discolored complexion—or more literally, the old cuticle, or outer skin—revealing the fresher, healthier under-skin, blooming with the pink of life and the glow of youth. The dead and half-dead cuticle comes off so gradually, in fine, flour-like particles, that there is no pain, no discomfort, no detention from one's every-day duties. Of course such troubles as tan, freckles, moth patches, liver spots, and fine lines, go with the discarded skin.

Mercurized wax, which druggists supply in one-ounce tins, should be spread lightly over the face before rising and washed off in the morning.—(adv.)

The Clubwoman—Here, There and Everywhere

BY LESSIE STRINGFELLOW

Viola Smith, chairman of the district of the American Woman's club in Shanghai, China, has just sailed for the Orient on the President Pierce, after a six months' visit here, during which she represented her club at the Los Angeles biennial.

Before leaving she gave me for our benefit a copy of Volume No. 1 of the Shanghai Woman's Club bulletin. This publication, while small in size, about 5 by 9 inches, is big in aim, its object being to inform all who are interested in the activities of the clubwomen in China.

Mrs. P. L. Bryant, 40 Avenue Duval, Shanghai, is editor and will be assisted in her work by an advertising manager and a business manager. The club is 25 years old, and is just embarking on a building program and steps to put itself upon a sound financial basis. It has long had clubrooms, however, at 66 Szechuen road, Hankow, China, and members will continue to keep those open during the summer.

Clubwomen from all over the world met Mrs. Smith during her stay in Washington, and in Los Angeles, and found her a woman of charm, worthy of cultivation in the matter of friendship. She has just been elected vice president of her club.

"Old Lady 31"

Eight hundred dollars was cleared by the Shanghai club recently by the selling of "Old Lady 31," to which the Shanghai Times and The North China Daily News devoted much space. The event was a comedy of village life, written by Rachel Crothers, and giving the Chinese some idea of life in America, in which many of them are interested. The play centers around thirty old ladies of gentility, who, old age, have come to be inmates of the "Old Ladies' home," and one man, "Old Lady 31," husband of one of them, who succeeds in smuggling in his life partner whom she does not intend shall go to the poor farm, the only place open to aged men. There are both pathos and humor in the play, which has been proven a good money-maker. It has been suggested that clubs in this country interested in staging it might secure a copy by addressing the Shanghai club.

$900,000 Home

Not every club can boast of a $900,000 clubhouse, with an annual income of $75,000. Such a clubhouse, according to one of the biographies, Kate K. Lobinger, was built by courage, faith, loyalty, brains and love with which most clubwomen are richly endowed. A comfortable fact that probably will make other $900,000 clubhouses possible. "The most beautiful clubhouse in the world," the Friday Morning club, of New York, has been called. It is not a material building, but a spiritual one, some claim for it. Anyway, it has set women all over the world a new standard. June biennial to thinking, planning, dreaming, working, hoping, which is the first step to achievement. First the dream, then the realization of the dream.

Miss Irby Is Hostess

Miss Elfrida Irby entertained at a card party Wednesday afternoon at her home in compliment to Miss Reetha Dorsey, Miss Margaret Mary Voths, Miss Eleanor Schroeder and Miss Irma Anchors.

Beautiful summer flowers were used as the attractive decorations.

Mrs. Ely Honors

Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. J. S. Ely was hostess to a large number of her friends on Thursday afternoon at her new home near Decatur in honor of Mrs. S. E. Wilcox, who is soon to leave Decatur. The home was decorated with garden flowers on mantels and tables and the tea table was lovely with a large basket of these flowers in the center.

It's not hard to tell "Laundered" Clothes

Clothes that go to the laundry have a through-and-through cleanness that gives them that crisp, fresh look.

You can spot "laundered" clothes anywhere. There is a distinction, a "professional" air about them that the washerwoman cannot even imitate.

Why not begin this week to try your laundry's family wash service? Stop worrying with old-fashioned, unsanitary washerwoman methods. You'll be surprised how little difference there is in cost and how much difference there is in quality.

For your clothes' sake, use your laundry.

University Confers Doctor of Letters Degree on Mrs. Hays

Montezuma, Ga., July 26.—So many honors have come to Mrs. J. E. Hays, of this city, that it is almost impossible to chronicle them all, but the honor that is delighting her friends and which has caused her to be the recipient of countless congratulations is the one recently bestowed by the University of Georgia in conferring upon her the degree of doctor of letters.

Mrs. Hays received the diploma a few days ago, signed by Chancellor Barrow and Dr. Read, of the university board of trustees, along with a letter of congratulation from the trustees.

Mrs. Hays recently returned from Los Angeles, Cal., where she attended the biennial meeting of the recording secretary for the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Chancellor Barrow Writes Letter.

Chancellor Barrow replied to the beautiful resolution of thanks written by Mrs. Walter Hodges and her committee to the authorities of the University of Georgia at the close of the remarkably successful club institute held the first week in July by writing the following letter of appreciation to Mrs. A. M. Brenner, first vice president of the Georgia Federation.

University of Georgia, office of the Chancellor, Athens, Ga.

Dear Madam: It is very gratifying to me indeed to know that you were satisfied with your stay at the university. It is a privilege to have you with us and to see the interest which the daughters of the state are coming in increasing numbers.

I thank you for your letter.

(Signed) DAVID C. BARROW, Chancellor.

3,000 Clubs Added In Past Four Years.

In the last four years the General Federation of Women's Clubs has added to its rolls more than 3,000 new clubs, and the number of affiliated clubwomen has grown to more than 1,000,000. Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, of Minneapolis, reported at the biennial in Los Angeles.

Besides the addition in membership and affiliations, some of the outstanding accomplishments of the last four years were outlined by Mrs. Winter as follows:

The purchase and equipping of headquarters in Washington. "The movement toward universal membership, made actual in 14 states.

"Junior membership organization and club institutes.

"The closer relation of state officers to each other and to the general federation.

"Every year with our growth in numbers," added Mrs. Winter, "with our awakening and greater civic consciousness, the demands upon us grow. Possibilities loom upon us suddenly for great accomplishments, and if we hesitate or turn away they seek other agencies and warmer hearts."

"Paralleling certain changes and movements within the organization, there has been a personal friend and a cousin of Mrs. Richards, Mr. Whitcomb, of Seattle, is president of the chamber of commerce of that city, who both as a personal friend and a citizen official entertained the royal family of Japan following their flight to this country from Tokyo during the earthquake disaster. Both Mrs. Richards and Mr. Whitcomb are persons worth meeting. Mrs. Richards' book, hailed in the east as one of the best, is now being followed by a second one from her able pen.

Tick-Tock Says the G. F. Clock.

The general federation headquarters has a new clock. After it has just been given an old clock, Connecticut Federation of Women's Clubs were donors. "Standing beside the great fireplace in the living room of American clubwomen whose motto reads: 'I cannot warm you if your heart is cold,' its musical chime help to radiate cheer in a room where the atmosphere warms and heartens all who enter," writes Mrs. A. C. Wurtz, editor of the fine Connecticut Club Courier, now in its second year.

Leads in Federation Activities

Doctor of Letters Degree on Mrs. Hays

Mrs. E. Downer Dimmock, of Waycross, elected president of the 11th district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the district convention in Ocilla the last week in May. Mrs. Dimmock is not only active in furthering the work of the Georgia federation but is the chairman of the committee on marking historic spots in Georgia for the Georgia division of the U. S. D. C.

Writing of Biographies Urged By Dr. Loveridge

Second honor was accorded the biography of Martha Denson Miller, of this city, in the biographical contest conducted by Dr. Blanche Loveridge, chairman of the division of literature in the department of fine arts.

These biographical sketches from clubwomen of Georgia women who lived between 1850 and 1900 are requested by Dr. Loveridge, as a means of adding to the historical data of that period in the south's history.

Dr. Loveridge will welcome all manuscripts of this character which they will be published from time to time on the club page.

"The women of our state were marvelous of heroism and progressiveness in the changing aspects of those days," Dr. Loveridge says, "and I feel that we clubwomen can aid materially in perpetuating their memories by brief biographies of those we ourselves remember."

"These biographies should be a labor of love to every clubwoman and the richness of the material at hand should inspire every writer to immediately sketch at least one life and its achievements."

Mrs. Winter explained that she added two very important developments for linking up the new and old and pouring fresh currents of life into our veins; first, inspiring the continuity of our efforts by getting more and more young people into our organization, which resulted in creating the committee on junior membership; second, the equally important right about face in our attitude toward our jobs that has lifted them out of the amateur stage and made us realize that club work is not a catch-as-catch-can affair, nor to be administered by rule of thumb, but that we needed to school ourselves in the best ways of doing the work to make ourselves efficient. This meant the training school of the club institute.

MARTHA D. MILNER By Patsy Cheney

The name of Martha Denson Miller will never be inscribed upon Fame's immortal roll. She was only one of many southern women who symbolize adaptability, unselfishness, genius and courage between 1850 and 1900. Faith in God, culture of the antebellum south, and the desire to serve usefulness, predominated, and it was the resulting strength of character which made these women so wonderful; which explains why the "Lost Cause" takes on more dignity and glory with each passing year.

Born in Pike county, in November, 1821, she grew to womanhood on her father's large plantation, surrounded by slaves and every luxury of the Old South. Her mother, Mrs. John Milner, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. John Milner, were women of high character and high life-experience. She was handi-capped in this new age.

Married, and settled in her own home, she put into practice what she had learned in carding and spinning, weaving, sewing, knitting and cooking. Even with slaves one has to learn how to manage well. With the coming of the children, of whom there were ten in all, and with Jonathan's success, happiness and love filled life. A favorite saying of hers, "Jonathan makes the living. I make the home," was true, for her paramount desire was to give her best to her family and to guide her children always toward perfection.

Manages Plantation.

Then came the war between the states. Joy was turned to bitterness as she saw her husband and sons away. Managing the plantation with never a man to help was a strenuous task, but she carried on. Her eldest son fell in battle, and by one, her three youngest children died. With her own hands she made three small clothes and brought the bodies to her father's plantation, where the aged John Milner buried them. Her faith endured and she was the pillar of her family during that awful conflict.

When the enemy marched through, devastating all in their path, Martha proved her bravery. The horses and slaves she had reared in the plantation, via a swamp, miles from the house. The enemy found her ill in bed and demanded that she surrender silver and gold. She refused. She ended her when she defied them, and one was striking a match to set fire to her bed when she picked up her Bible, took the book and threw it at the eye and said, "I have no fear of you, for my God will see me through. And though it is not mine to judge you, I shall pity your future if you destroy a helpless woman and her children." The soldiers moved on after that, and from the feather bed beneath her she later extricated her watches and other family jewelry and several hundred dollars in gold, while from its place beneath the bedspread she removed the family silverware.

Her husband was sent home wounded, and she had no more to do but wait for the day when she could see him again. But soon after, on December 17, 1864, she died of a heart attack. She was 42 years old.

This is not an attempt to sing exaggerated eulogies to Martha's life. She made her mistakes, for she was ed and he had no sooner returned to the conflict than news came that her second son was a prisoner. Sadness and suffering were hers, but she was a woman of faith, and only her 40-year-old years of training in efficiency, her inherent courage, and her faith in God carried her through.

With the surrender at Appomattox came the period of reconstruction. Slaves were free and the carpetbaggers' propaganda filled these old southern hearts with unbearable impudence and deavity.

Crops were poor, financial panic rendered the markets unstable, prices on necessary supplies were exorbitant, and those few at the helm of government were trying to help the south seemed helpless. Poverty, hard labor, disappointments and heartaches seemed to blot out any hope of a silver lining to the clouds of despair.

Canon Is Scene Of Club Gathering

Numbering 600

The meeting of the Franklin County Federation held recently in Canon was attended by six hundred people from Canon, Franklin county, and adjoining territory.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, second vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Walter Hodges, president of the eighth district, were distinguished guests of the occasion.

Mrs. Dan T. Barnes, president of the Franklin County Federation, presided and welcomed the guests.

Bowersville club welcomed the delegates and guests through Mrs. L. H. Ridgeway.

Mrs. L. H. Turner, first vice president of Franklin County Federation, read to the meeting the request published in The Constitution from Mrs. Archibald Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation, to clubwomen to utilize the facilities for furthering club work offered by the establishment of state headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce building in Atlanta.

Reports were heard from Mrs. J. A. Dyer, of Royston, second vice president of Franklin County Federation from Miss Miriam Harrison, of Carneysville, corresponding secretary, and from Miss Clara Ray, of Lawton, treasurer.

Chairmen reporting included Mrs. W. S. McDaniel, of Carneysville, home economics; Mrs. Clara Ray, of Lawton, education; Mrs. J. C. Bowers, president of the Canon Women's club, publicity; Mrs. W. S. McDaniel, resolutions; Mrs. J. C. Bowers, membership; Mrs. Lamar Harber, of Carneysville, country life; Miss Miriam Harrison, forestry; Mrs. H. L. McCarty, legislation; Mrs. S. D. Brown, of Royston, music; Mrs. S. D. Brown, of Royston, finance.

Special addresses on ways to raise money for financing club work were made by Mrs. S. V. Sanford and Mrs. W. F. Wilhoit, president of the tenth district federation.

Mrs. Clara Ray, of Lawton, gave a program, Mrs. Ridgeway reported on the work of the Canon Women's club, hostess club for the meeting. Mrs. E. A. Dyer reported on the work of the Royston Women's club, of which she is president. Mrs. Frankum and Mrs. S. E. Vandiver spoke on the work of their clubs.

Culpepper reported for Carneysville, Mrs. L. H. Ridgeway for Bowersville, Mrs. Ayers for Comer, Mrs. B. C. Harber for Hartwell, and Mrs. J. E. Davis, of Toccoa, described the manner in which funds were raised for the club house in Toccoa.

A statement which proved of marked interest to the listeners was to the effect that not only did the work done in Atlanta and Chicago create active interest in Tallahula school, but it acted upon the public at large and drew full houses for the play, "Sun Day," for the remainder of the week, which closed the Chicago run of the play, a realistic presentation of southern mountain life by Laik Volmer, former of Georgia.

Enthusiastic Attendance Marks Parent-Teacher Course at Athens

The second week of the Parent-Teacher course at the University of Georgia has been marked with increasing attendance and enthusiasm—130 registered from six different states, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee, two state presidents, two national chairmen, and a large group of Georgia state officers and chairmen attending with many local presidents, principals and superintendents.

On Monday the instructor, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, began with the work of Fathers' clubs and the rounding out of the Parent-Teacher association which is no longer "lapsed in being merely mother-sided," the fathers now coming in for their share of responsibility in child development.

Prof. Paul Chapman and Mrs. Lottin W. Orr dealt with the subject of "Continuation Schools" providing opportunity for further (1) regular education, (2) trade preparation and (3) trade extension.

In the third period Mrs. Watkins lectured on the activities of P.T.A. "The rock on which we split," she said, "is what have we the right to do." Study the school as it is, the surrounding community, make a survey of homes and their conditions. Are the homes standing together? Are they agreed on social regulations and hours for the young?

On Tuesday Dr. James H. Simmons, of Brenau, lectured on "Five Imperatives for the 20th Century Teacher." (1) Knowledge of the field in which he offers his teacher. (2) Must have work and ideals on the doctrine—not so much what is taught but what is taught and how it is taught. (3) Must take keen and intelligent interest in her and things of the world—be a real citizen of the world. (4) Must be a real "messenger from the world of books to the world of business, make men want education. (5) Must be willing to work hard for 11 months of the year. Right use of vacation—in order to keep giving out must keep taking in. Recreation or recreation in order to keep giving out "hard stock" to be "marked down."

During the second period Mrs. Watkins discussed the church P.T.A. which is organized to help those who work with young children, (a) parent in home, (b) teacher in school, (c) teacher in church. The Protestant church, said Mrs. Watkins, has become unwise in that its laws and provisions have heretofore been applicable only to adults. "The public school stresses the physical and moral, church school does its work in one hour; the home must bear upon the child 24 hours. The church must be wise in that its laws and provisions have heretofore been applicable only to adults."

Wednesday, Mrs. Watkins lectured on the duties and responsibilities of church P.T.A. members—the questions one should ask oneself:

1. Do I realize that the church school is at present the necessary link in education supplied by no other agency?

2. Do I know anything about the aim and method of the modern church school?

3. Do I appreciate the difficulties under which the churches work?

4. Is my attitude right? Do I give my child respect for the church school?

5. Do I realize that the success of the home with the church school is an ideal even more than success with the day school?

6. Am I personally acquainted with the church school teacher?

7. Have I ever volunteered to take a class?

8. Have I ever really graduated from the need of a church school myself?

9. Do I study the lessons with my children, encouraging them to take them seriously?

10. In the church P.T.A. while the spiritual is stressed, it is well to check up on the physical, mental and social development of the child. In one association seven men joined the church.

National Director of Scouts Will Arrive Thursday

The arrival in Atlanta of Mrs. James Deeter Rippin, of New York, who is national director of the Girl Scouts, Inc., will be the fulfillment of a long-hoped-for pleasure and likewise one of the most interesting events of the week. Mrs. Rippin will arrive Thursday, and will stop at the Biltmore until Saturday morning.

Accompanying Mrs. Rippin will be Miss Cooke Moore, who has come to America from London to study American camps for girls. Miss Moore is a Girl Guide, which in England is equivalent to a Girl Scout. In fact, it is from the Girl Guides that the Girl Scouts have sprung. It is the same organization, with one name in the old world and another in the new. Mrs. Rippin and Miss Moore will go to Camp Juliette Lewis, leaving Atlanta Saturday morning, for a week's stay. Mrs. Rippin will be the camp executive for the week of August 2 to August 10, during which time there will be held a leader's conference to be attended by commissioners, directors, captains and council members of the Girl Scouts.

On Thursday "The Value of Affiliation with the State and National Congress" was stressed by Mrs. Watkins and Chancellor Barrow gave a talk on "The Teacher's Part in Community Life" in which he suggested for high schools a survey made by the pupils as a project—a survey, for instance, of local industries—pointing out that the best method for a teacher to influence a community is through the pupils themselves.

Judge Brand, member of the legislature from the eighth district, explained his opposition to the child labor amendment in light of the opposition of various members of the legislature.

State organization was discussed by Mrs. Watkins, who explained in detail what the state organization is, its functions and how the local group should use the state branch.

Friday Mrs. Watkins took up the work of the departments and committees, using a large chart which visualizes the great field covered by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. She explained in detail the functions of the field secretaries and the national headquarters as well as the national board of managers and executive committee.

Dr. Andrew M. Soule of the Agricultural college talked to the class on "The Value of Play in Education." He stressed the importance of physical education for girls as well as boys. In his contact with the first group of rural girls (180) enjoying camp Juliette Lewis, he found that the need of education in play for them.

Particularly appropos to the Parent-Teacher course was the course of lectures during this week by the celebrated Bible scholar, Dr. Campbell Morgan, which accentuated and elaborated on "Four-Square Program for the Child." The course was held in the child grew in wisdom and increased in favor with God and man. Dr. Morgan's lectures were on "Jesus, the Child," "The Young Manhood of Jesus," "Jesus, the Teacher," and "Jesus and the Child," and the Parent-Teacher group drank in his words with heartfelt appreciation.

Socially the week was full of interesting things. With the coming of the Georgia legislature, when the legislators were given an opportunity to talk to their representatives "from home," the Parent-Teacher leaders were honored guests with the legislators when a splendid pageant was given at Hardman hall portraying the life of the child, from birth to death, and the influence of the church, the school and the home.

Monday Miss Katherine Dozier, of Gainesville, state vice president, entertained at luncheon at the Georgian hotel and this was followed by several informal luncheons among Parent-Teacher leaders during the week. Mrs. Stewart entertained the "celebrities" of the summer school in honor of the Parent-Teacher group at a beautiful al fresco supper preceding one of Dr. Morgan's lectures and later in the week the Athens council gave to the entire group an automobile ride about the city, winding up at the lovely country home of Mrs. J. Phil Campbell (state chairman of health) near Watkinsville, where supper was enjoyed on the lawn, followed by speeches from Mrs. Watkins, Mrs. Wessels, Mrs. Warren (chairman of the course) and Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones.

The week-end found several interesting trips planned to nearby points of interest. Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. Anderson, of Florida, motored with a congenial party up to Tallulah Falls and spending Sunday at Mountain City and Clayton.

Atlantans Feted In Summerville.
Summerville, Ga., July 26.—Honoring Mrs. William Leak, of Atlanta, Miss Evelyn Fox entertained with a theater party at Trion on Friday afternoon. The guests were Mrs. William Leak, of Atlanta; Mrs. C. C. Hill, of Fort Payne, Ala.; Mrs. C. C. Cleghorn, Mrs. F. W. Hall, Mrs. A. W. Hill, Mrs. J. H. ## Pledges and Relics Urged On Attention of Daughters

Two important lines of work calling for the immediate attention of Georgia Daughters are completion of Georgia's pledge to the Georgia room in the Confederate museum at Richmond, Va., and the collection of Confederate relics in Georgia, these relics to be sent to Richmond for safe-keeping until the memorial hall at Stone Mountain is ready to receive them.

Miss Lilly Martin, of Hawkinsville, chairman of the committee which has in charge the collection of the memorials of a great period in the south's history, urges that every chapter president give particular thought to this important work at this particular time of the year when in many instances meetings are suspended and the various other interests of the division are not so greatly to the fore as in other seasons of the year.

Miss Martin requests that chapter presidents and chapter members gather together every relic obtainable in their community and inform her of the character and condition of the relic by postal or brief letter in order that as convention time approaches she may form plans for placing on display at Quilman a truly interesting and valuable exhibition. The great work long carried forward in Hawkinsville chapter by Miss Martin indicates that in this statewide work the division is most fortunate in having Miss Martin as leader.

Complete Pledge
Mrs. Jordan Asks
Georgia division's pledge of $3,000 to the Georgia room in the Confederate museum at Richmond was made more than twenty years ago, and has not yet been cleared off the record.

Of the 121 U. D. C. chapters in Georgia only twenty-seven have contributed this year to the fund for Georgia's room in the Confederate museum at Richmond.

Our state president, Mrs. Walter Grace, is very anxious that Georgia's quota of the general endowment fund be completed this year.

There is very little more to pay, and if the other ninety-four chapters will do their "bit," this obligation will be discharged, and no longer be a reproach to the Georgia division.

Your state chairman feels that this is nothing more than she can say to the chapter presidents in the interest of this cause. Nevertheless, she begs again that before the October convention that every president will have made sure that her chapter will be written in the chairman's report among those contributing.

Mrs. George Walker Jordan, chairman of the division committee for the Georgia room in Confederate museum, at Richmond.

Committee members are: Miss C. Patterson, Macon; Mrs. Green Johnson, Monticello; Mrs. F. C. Gammage, Pelham; Mrs. C. E. WINDOVER, Waynesville, N. C.
